Detroit, May 22.—The United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) brought its bitter, four-year battle to organize Ford Motor Co. workers to a successful conclusion today with an overwhelming victory in a National Labor Relations Board employe election.

Official results on the NLRB poll of workers at Ford's River Rouge and Lincoln plants yesterday were announced as follows:

River Rouge plant—U. A. W.-C. I. O, 51,866; Federal Labor Union No. 22551 (A. F. of L.), 20,364; neither union, 1,958.

Lincoln plant—U. A. W.-C. I. O., 2,008; Federal Labor Union No. 22550 (A. F. of L.), 587; neither union, 146.

In addition, the U. A. W.-C. I. O. won the right to represent 271 pattern makers at the Rouge factory by a vote of 161 against 90 for the A. F. L. Pattern Makers League of North America and eight for no union.

Agent for 83,000 Men

The election results give the U. A. W.-C. I. O. the right to act as sole bargaining agent for more than 83,000 workers at the Rouge and Lincoln units. Certification as a collective bargaining agency will come from the NLRB headquarters at Washington within two weeks, a board official said.

President R. J. Thomas, of the U. A. W.-C. I. O., announcing the union would open negotiations with Ford "immediately" for a contract, said demands would include a general 10-cent-an-hour wage increase for all Ford workers, "adequate" union recognition, seniority provisions, and vacations with pay.

He did not mention a previous union demand for abolition of the Ford service department, a company police system the U. A. W.-C. I. O. has accused of spying on and intimidating Ford employes. Ford during the last few months has

Youth Drowns, 4 Persons Overcome In 96-Degree Heat

One person was drowned and four prostrated by the heat yesterday as the mercury rose to 96 degrees, the highest of the year and highest for any May 22 on record. Relief was promised for today following local thunder showers which began last night.

David Williams, 16, colored, of 1412½ Duncan Street Northeast, was drowned in the Eastern Branch of the Anacostia River, about 400 feet below the Pennsylvania Railroad Bridge, while swimming with friends.

In Virginia, where few communities have had rain since May 8, serious damage to crops was feared if the hot dry spell continued much longer. The mercury rose yesterday to 101 at Danville.

—But Not a Drop to Drink

Pupils Go Hungry For Lack of 1c Milk

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

This morning a child will come to school hungry. He has had no breakfast. A youngster in that condition is a demoralizing factor. His discomfort interferes with classroom routine.

So, for his companions' sake as well as for his own, the impoverished child will receive the free bottle of milk which he wasn't supposed to get until recess period. When recess time comes, he'll have to go without.

That will happen this morning, even as it happened yesterday and will happen again on Monday. Only there will be more than one child and more than one school.

A Parent-Teacher Association officer denounced that situation yesterday. As who wouldn't?

Yet Washington school children are said to be too well off, as far as milk consumption is concerned, for a penny-a-bottle project to be launched here.

How can that be, when a single half-pint bottle is the maximum which may be dispensed to a needy school child each day? The Department of Agriculture's own Bureau of Home Economics says a growing child should drink a quart a day.

Limit on Consumption Could Be Dropped

It's a certainty that boys and girls from relief and low-income families who have been certified for free half-pints are not drinking at home that other pint and a half which the Government says they ought to have.

The District government is paying for this milk, which is included in the free school lunch, at the regular market price. That is, at the rate of about 13 cents a quart.

If the District could supply the bottles at 4 cents a quart, three times as many boys and girls could be accommodated. Or, if that many more underprivileged children did not exist in the schools, then the half-pint limit could be abolished.

The child who, coming to school hungry, has to consume his bottle at 9 a. m., could have another at recess time. And another at lunch and during the afternoon recess.

If the Government says a growing child requires a quart a day and he does not get it at home, school's all right. Metabolism won't be affected.

Still Washington is a long shot, as far as getting a 1-cent project is concerned. Under that plan, dairies bid for the contract and if, say, a 3-cent-per-bottle contract is awarded, the city pays 1 cent and the Federal Government contributes the other 2.

Comparisons Do Not Comfort Hungry Child

New York and Chicago and St. Louis and Birmingham and Boston and other cities have penny milk for needy school children. The Surplus Marketing Administration, which has the say-so, asserts that the needs in those municipalities were greater than Washington's, among other reasons, so they got taken care of first.

Comparisons are no comfort to that child who is getting only a half-pint of milk in school a day, instead of two, three or four. The hurdles that confront a penny program here can all be negotiated. Milk is the thing, not technicalities, but even those are not insurmountable.

To get a 1-cent project, says the Surplus Marketing Administration, there must be an adequate surplus in the milkshed. Washington has that now and there is every indication, according to the Health Department, that production can and will keep up with increasing demand.

Not only is a surplus essential, continues the SMA, but the city seeking 1-cent school milk must produce evidence that a sizeable increase in consumption will result from the low-cost program. At the same time, this cheap milk must be dispensed exclusively to needy youngsters.

Well, that hurdle isn't hard to leap, either. A combing of the rolls will reveal a great many eligibles to swell the free lunch roster. Otherwise the social workers and doctors and nutritionists and others who have direct contact with the problem are unanimously wrong.

District Must Fight for Penny Milk

Further to increase consumption, what is more logical than to eliminate the half-pint limit per child? Even if the present number of school lunch beneficiaries—about 9,000—remained static, consumption could be at least doubled, and probably trebled, to reach the ideal of a quart a day per child.

Penny milk is attainable here. But it won't be hung on the community Christmas tree. It will take a fight to get it. School and welfare officials of the District have not been negligent in this respect. Nearly two months ago, when the plan was

Ickes Blasts Dies Probe Charge Of Communists in Department

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, wrote an angry letter to the Dies Committee yesterday, saying that charges of communism in his department seemed "the rankest kind of hearsay."

His letter was evoked by the testimony of Mary Spargo, a committee investigator, who on Wednesday quoted an official as saying that the Bituminous Coal Division of the Interior Department was "loaded from top to bottom with Communists."

Miss Spargo and Miss Hazel Huffman have been employed as undercover agents by the Dies Committee to expose the American Peace Mobilization. This organization has been picketing the White House for more than two weeks, displaying signs demanding that there be "No Convoys" and asking "Do You Want Your Sons Eaten By the Sharks?"

Dr. James B. Matthews, erstwhile "fellow traveler," who is research director for the Dies Committee, yesterday submitted the records of the 60 members of the national executive council of the American Peace Mobilization. He said that all of them were Communists or had long Communist-front records.

Reading from the dossiers, Dr. Matthews called off the names of Langston Hughes and Donald Henderson, described as avowed Communists, and Paul Robeson, the colored singer, described as at least an advocate of communism.

No Decisive Turn in Crete; 4 Cruisers Sunk, Nazis Claim; Neutrality Law Change Hinted

Cabinet Weighs Action by Navy Against 'Piracy' As Next Issue

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Repeal or alteration of the Neutrality Act to permit American ships manned by American seamen to "carry through the open waters of the seven seas implements that will help destroy the menace to free peoples everywhere" appeared last night to be under consideration by President Roosevelt and his "War Cabinet."

Two Presidential advisers whose names could not be disclosed said the President's next big decision on defense policy would be whether the United States Navy should begin firing on Axis craft that try to sink American goods bound for British forces.

Tied directly with this was a statement made by the President yesterday in a letter to Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, in which he said:

"I know . . . that more and faster ships will be built, manned by trained American seamen, and that they will carry through the open waters of the seven seas implements that will help destroy the menace to free peoples everywhere."

Neutrality Fight Seen

These developments were connected, also, with Secretary of the Navy Knox's denunciation of the Neutrality Act Wednesday, and Secretary of War Stimson's expression to the same effect yesterday.

Repeal of the Neutrality Act would involve a drawnout fight in Congress. The act primarily forbids American ships to cruise into areas designated as combat zones by the the President. He could revoke such designations, as he did last week in the case of the Red Sea.

Convoying—armed escorting of merchant ships—is not enough to fight what is now regarded as Axis "piracy" on a widening sea front, is a view informed sources said was held by Administration strategy planners. This was emphasized by the seizure of the Egyptian ship Zamzam, carrying American passengers and goods, in the south Atlantic recently by a German raider.

A pronouncement by the President on the shipping problem is expected in his "fireside speech" next

Britain Is Losing Battle of Atlantic, U. S. Admiral Says

Shanghai, May 22 (AP).—Rear Admiral William Glassford, commander of the United States Yangtze naval patrol, declared tonight that the battle of the Atlantic "at this moment is being lost by the Allies."

"We are not only facing inevitable defeat of England and collapse of the British Empire, but also defeat of the United States unless something is done," he added.

Glassford told an audience of Chinese and American businessmen here that something must be done "to stop the sinking of Allied ships in the Atlantic, which are coming on faster than they can be replaced."

"Once again," he declared, "it is the United States' job to save England.

"This means ships.

"Once again we are asked to build a colossal merchant marine to carry war supplies to England. We shall do it, but if it is not evident soon, this will not be enough. These ships must get safely across the Atlantic."

Referring to the possibility of convoys, the admiral said, "This is the one real and deadly effective solution, but just how we are to insure safe passage of the Atlantic remains to be seen."

British Cruiser Sunk

London, May 22 (INS).—The British admiralty tonight announced that the 2,047-ton auxiliary cruiser Queenworth had been sunk. There was no announcement of casualties.

2 Battleships, 10 Cruisers Sunk Or Damaged, Berlin Reports

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 22.—The German high command announced a tremendous blow at the British Mediterranean fleet tonight in a special communique claiming that the air force had sunk four British cruisers and "several" destroyers in bitter fighting in the Eastern Mediterranean—obviously off Crete.

The high command also reported one battleship and two other destroyers seriously damaged in the second consecutive daylight air and naval battle.

While no mention of the German attack on Crete was made in the communique—and officials merely reiterated "wait and see"—it was apparent that the battle with the British navy was part of the German effort to occupy the island from air and sea.

Tonight's communique and the earlier report of the high command today indicate the British have thrown a mighty sea force into the fight to hold the island where the Greek government took refuge after German forces occupied Greece.

Claim Hits on 12 Big Warships

The Germans have claimed in two days the sinking or damaging of at least two British battleships, ten cruisers and an undisclosed number of destroyers.

The regular communique today said six cruisers, one battleship and one destroyer were hit by bombs of the heaviest caliber and that yesterday's battle ended with four of the cruisers burning, and one of that quartet listing.

While the press zestfully displayed reports of the first daytime battle, the high command issued this communique late tonight:

"In the eastern Mediterranean the air force achieved special success today in the battle with the British navy. Four British cruisers and several destroyers were sunk with full hits and one battleship and two other destroyers were seriously damaged."

Complete Secrecy Maintained

However, the name of Crete has not been mentioned in official accounts of the east Mediterranean fight since the first parachute trooper dropped to engage the Greeks and British.

This follows the practice of the German high command in not mak-

Lieut. Grisso Saves Dog From Burning Apartment House

Lieut. Paul Grisso, of the Fire Department Rescue Squad, won cheers from onlookers yesterday when he rescued a 7-year-old police dog from a blazing apartment house at 510 I Street Northwest.

All other occupants escaped without aid when a three-alarm blaze swept over rear porches of the four-story building.

Lieut. Grisso found the dog, Nellie, owned by Mrs. Mary Masterson, overcome by smoke on the top floor. Nellie was revived with a few whiffs of ammonia.

The fire which started in a dumbwaiter shaft, brought 24 pieces of apparatus to the scene and jammed rush-hour traffic in much of the downtown area.

The District Health Clinic, next door, was undamaged.

100 Million Convoy Is Safe in Britain

New York, May 22 (AP).—The safe arrival in Britain of a convoy of 50 ships carrying more than $100,000,000 in war supplies was announced today in a cabinet report to Collier's Weekly by Quentin Reynolds, correspondent for the magazine.

Reynolds said he believed the convoy was the largest ever to make the Atlantic crossing. He traveled aboard one of the ships, and asserted a submarine was sunk by one of several guardian destroyers.

London Press Grim as R.A.F. Leaves Crete

Editorial Tone Reminiscent of That Before Greek Defeat

By the Associated Press

London, Friday, May 23.—London morning newspapers gave grim and serious attention to the battle in Crete today, and the editorial tone of some newspapers was reminiscent of that just before the British withdrawal from Greece.

The papers played up the difficulties facing defenders of Crete, reported heavy losses of German forces attempting to land from air or sea, and ran stories under such headlines as "R. A. F. Fighters Have Left Crete."

"A Prize Worth Sacrifices"

"The most disturbing item of news given by the prime minister was that our troops are once again fighting without support from the air for the lack of airdromes," the Times said. "The strain in such conditions must be intense. . . . There is no doubt that the defense is putting up a magnificent resistance and that the losses of the enemy even without taking into account the numbers drowned as a result of naval action have been very heavy. But he can afford considerable losses and Crete is a prize worth sacrifices."

Britain Hurls War Threat At France

Stop Helping Hitler Or Face Attack, Eden Warns; Tanker Seized

By the Associated Press

London, May 22.—Britain entered squarely tonight into a gloves-off relationship with France, her beaten ally, which some qualified sources termed a state of undeclared war.

Anthony Eden, the British foreign secretary, sternly and bluntly warned the Vichy government that, unless it calls an instant halt to its policy of helping Hitler, Britain will seek out and attack the Germans on the soil of unoccupied France.

Almost simultaneously, it was disclosed officially that the British navy has seized the heavily laden French oil tanker Sheherazade, one of the biggest tankers in the world, while the 13,467-ton ship was in the Atlantic en route from Houston, Tex., to Casablanca, French North Africa.

London informants said they understood the seizure was carried out with the full consent of the United States.

"Free French" radio reports that the troops of Gen. Charles de Gaulle had entered Syria went without confirmation but excited great interest. De Gaullist headquarters did acknowledge that an effort of undisclosed scope is being made to deny further use of Syrian air bases

Hull Says Germans Try to Cause Friction With Island People

Secretary of State Hull yesterday accused Germany of trying to stir up trouble between the United States and Martinique, the strategic French island at the southern end of the Caribbean.

Hull characterized as of German or pro-German origin reports in the Paris press that defense forces at Martinique had been ordered to prepare against an American attack on the island, where the French have two war vessels, about 100 warplanes and—reputedly—a large quantity of gold.

Vichy, May 22.—French forces on Martinique have been ordered to prepare to defend that Caribbean island against an attack by the United States, reports from German-occupied Paris said today.

Looming large in any defense of the island are the cruiser Emile Bertin and the aircraft carrier Bearn, which have been stationed at Martinique's capital, Fort de France, since the German defeat of France last June.

Word was said to have reached Paris from Fort de France that the French naval command in the Caribbean had ordered these ships to

R. A. F. Is Driven Out of Island; Sea Invasion Is Smashed

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), May 23.—British naval guns roaring in the darkness off Crete were reported early today to have blasted whole boatloads of Nazi reinforcements, while added thousands of German parachutists plumped down on the island through a blinding shower of antiaircraft shrapnel.

In the predawn sizeup it appeared that the Germans, who already hold two key island points and have gained mastery of the air, were able to land troops in numbers from above—however precariously; but that the fleet had stood off and destroyed all sea-borne units.

Britain's powerful fleet also lifted its muzzles into the night skies against the stream of big Nazi transport planes which kept up a constant ferry service from the Greek mainland 100 miles away.

At 4 a. m. there still was no decisive turn reported in the epic air-versus-sea battle.

The steady German air shuttle service bringing men and supplies threatened to overcome the initial British-Greek ground advantage of numerical superiority and artillery.

A Grim Duel in the Dark

As the grim duel in the dark went into its fourth day these reports gave this fantastic picture of the Nazi invasion and bitter Greek-British defense, bereft now of the aid of fighting planes:

At sea there is a confusing mass of drowning troops and sinking ships as 1-ton British shells crash into the Nazi sea armada. Great geysers of water lift over the area while Nazi dive-bombers roar in to attack Britain's navy.

British fighting planes had been withdrawn because, a statement said, of "the pronounced disadvantage" under which they were operating and the battle thus was left as a running and perhaps fateful duel between sea and air power.

In a single such desperate challenge to the fleet, Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons, the Germans thrust 30 vessels into the zone of battle—this aside from an earlier attempt to break through which had cost them two transports, a number of seized and laden Greek vessels and a destroyer.

Egypt Demands Nazis Pay Her For Zamzam Loss

Cairo, May 22 (INS).—The Egyptian government tonight announced it had sent a protest to Berlin over the sinking by a German surface raider of the Egyptian liner Zamzam from which all occupants, including numerous Americans, were safely removed and made prisoners.

Full compensation for loss of the vessel and her cargo was demanded.

The protest was understood to have been based on the grounds that the Zamzam was flying the flag of a neutral and did not carry a cargo that could be defined as contraband, despite the German claim that she was transporting war material to British Middle East forces.

R.A.F Driven Out of Crete By Germans

Crete in strong force—leaped to the attack, and late information tonight indicated that this greatest single German effort of the day had been turned back.

Ashore, German sky troops hold the City of Candia, midway along the northern shore of ancient Crete. The British hold a nearby airdrome.

To the west, the British and Greeks still hold Canea, site of King George's exiled Greek government, but 10 miles to the southwest Germany's aerial troops have dug in at Maelmi Airdrome.

The skies are aflame with searchlight beams, antiaircraft tracer shells and flares. Now and then the searchlights catch swirling clouds of parachutes where German machine gunners are drifting down. Many of these 'chutists are dead by the time they strike the earth.

But the Nazis keep coming on recklessly, by parachute, glider planes and aerial transport. British reports say many transports have cracked up on the bomb-pitted surface of Malemi Airdrome—already savagely struck by Nazi bombs before the invasion started before dawn Tuesday.

Withdrawal of British fighting planes is a distinct disadvantage to the fierce resistance of British and Greek ground forces. Now, however, the defenders are being aided by Cretan guerrillas and often by Cretan wives armed with long knives and pistols.

The British acknowledge the Germans have undisputed possession of the air over the battle-girt island itself, and unofficial estimates are that at least 7,000 Nazi aerial troops already have landed, with another division winging in behind them.

The British claim several thousand of these have been wiped out or captured in the first two days of savage fighting.

It is a case of every man for himself, according to British military orders, a vast and furious guerrilla fight where foe and friends often are indistinguishable.

Prime Minister Churchill in a guarded recital to the House of Commons Thursday pictured the fight as "a desperate, grim battle . . . where neither side has any means of retreat."

London observers obviously are concerned about the withdrawal of British planes from untenable positions on the island, but appear heartened by official implications that strong British naval units are in action.

Many German Ships Sunk

British Middle East headquarters in Cairo declared that the day's Nazi effort at reinforcement by sea had been a failure; that troops landed on the island by air had not been able to form the necessary bridgeheads for a landing by sea, and moreover that many German ships had been sunk and others dispersed.

Earlier, Churchill himself had forecast as much, saying that while there was then "no definite information as to the results, I feel they can hardly be other than satisfactory in view of the naval forces which we have disposed in the Mediterranean."

Ashore, he acknowledged, Nazi troops who had come down by parachute and air transport—and were being followed all day by reinforcements from the skies—had taken the town of Candia (Herakleion) and the Malemi airdrome just 10 miles southwest of Canea, as well as the area to the west of the airdrome.

These disclosures—that the Germans were in possession of the area where one of Crete's two airdromes is situated and of Candia, the site of one of the island's two seaplane bases and also an important port—brought misgivings to the British.

Too, many noting the praise being given the island's defenders, recalled that when the Germans poured across France and later through the Balkans, official announcements stressed the gallantry of the losing British forces.

Authoritative persons explaining the R. A. F. withdrawal said: "To do otherwise would have been a waste of the air forces involved."

"The distance of Crete from our airdromes in Egypt," the statement went on, "is such as to preclude any possibility of strong air support by the R. A. F. from our bases there. Experience in this war has already proved that it is impossible to develop a satisfactory fighter defense from a few comparatively ill-equipped airdromes if these are subjected to a high scale of enemy air attack."

Attack With Great Violence

It was added that the situation at Crete should be considered one in which on our side naval and land forces primarily are employed. Offensive air operations are, however, being carried out by our bomber units in Egypt against the airdromes from which the enemy are operating in their attacks on Crete."

Both ashore and at sea, every British account agreed, the Germans pressed all day an attack of such violence as to overshadow all the bloody fighting that had gone before, but it was only this morning that they fully opened the gamble of attempting to land vast forces by sea.

Both Canea and Candia—the first the present capital of Crete and the latter formerly the seat of government—are along Crete's northern coast and, Churchill reported, the British still held all the rest of that coastal area.

The German entrenchments he described as "local successes at heavy cost."

Invasion Beaten, Cairo Believes

London (Friday), May 23 (U.P.).—Reports from Cairo today said that probably half the estimated 20,000 German troops landed in Crete had been killed or wounded and expressed belief that the invasion attempt had failed.

British dispatches claimed that Anglo-Greek defenders of the rugged island were in control of the battle of Crete but admitted that the conflict still raged on a rising pitch.

Newspaper accounts emphasized that the battle was concentrated on four main fronts between the Canea area and the Candia area of the northwest coast.

The main front was at Malemi, 10 miles southeast of Canea, where the airfields comprises two converging runways. It was there that the Germans were said to have concentrated their first parachute landings.

The reports hinted that the invaders who gained a toehold there might have been reduced greatly or possibly driven off by picked units of British and New Zealand troops.

Alexander Clifford reported to the Daily Mail:

"The Nazi high command is operating a 24-hour ferry service of warplanes between Greece and Crete, working minute by minute on a carefully devised plan. Parachutists are carrying miniature radio sets and reporting back to headquarters continually on the situation."

Tuesday night.

Other events that accented a trend to by-pass the "convoy stage" of aid to Britain:

1. Chairman Walter F. George of the powerful Senate Foreign Relations Committee said that an American convoy system would not be "the full or complete or final answer" to Britain's problems.

2. The Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Navigation, Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, admitted it was "conceivable" that the Navy's present strength, now concentrated in the Pacific, might be "broken up" for special missions, which he did not specify. There has been speculation that some more naval units might be assigned to the Atlantic.

In the face of these developments, House isolationists moved meanwhile to force a vote on the convoy issue through a petition to dislodge the Curtis resolution from the Foreign Affairs Committee.

The resolution introduced by Representative Curtis (Republican), of Nebraska, and referred to the Foreign Affairs Committee April 2, would make it unlawful to use any American air or naval units or merchant ships beyond the territorial waters of the United States for the convoying or delivery of goods to a nation at war.

None of the War Cabinet group would comment on their meeting with the President, but other officials revealed that the question of full naval participation in the war was on the agenda.

Violation of Tradition

Criticizing the neutrality law at a press conference, Stimson said it is "a violation of our most sacred and important tradition of foreign policy—freedom of the seas."

He pleaded for restoration of the Wilsonian policy of "freedom of the seas," and said that repeal of the neutrality statute should be considered in connection with "delivery of goods" to Great Britain.

His comment came after press conference reminders by President Roosevelt recently that the United States has fought two undeclared wars to enforce "freedom of the seas." Mr. Roosevelt also said a few weeks ago that American warships would be sent anywhere in the seven seas if necessary for protection of the Western Hemisphere.

Senator George, who, because of his Congressional position,, is often regarded as an Administration spokesman on foreign affairs, stated:

"In view of our existing neutrality laws, the wisdom of which I questioned from the beginning, I have believed advisable, if not necessary, to have a direct expression of Congress on the question of convoys . . . An American convoy system might benefit the British, certainly temporarily, but it is not the full or complete or final answer to the difficulties now facing the British Empire. I have confidnce that the President is thinking the question through with great care."

An echo to this in the House was the declaration of Representative Melvin J, Maas, of Minnesota, ranking Republican member of the House Naval Affairs Committee, that "convoys are a failure in this war."

Maas made his comment at a committee meeting on legislation authorizing creation of more vice admirals to command special "task forces" for important sea missions.

"If protection of arms shipments to Britain is to be effective," said Maas, "there must be major naval action such as the use of these task forces. It is probable that this program will require transfer of naval strength from the Pacific to the Atlantic."

President Roosevelt began writing his fireside talk yesterday. He spent two hours on it in the morning and two in the afternoon.

As he worked on his manuscript, reaction to the Stimson-Knox proposal for repeal of the neutrality law erupted in Congress.

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, a Foreign Relations Committee member, approved their stand, as did Senators Warren R. Austin, of Vermont, assistant minority leader, and Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire.

Attacks on the proposal came from Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, isolationist leader; from Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican), of Ohio, and Senator D. Worth Clark (Democrat), of Idaho.

The noninterventionist group, headed by Wheeler, accused Stimson and Knox of trying to plunge the Nation into war and said they did not think "there is the slightest chance" Congress would repeal the law at this time.

The letter to Admiral Land was read at the observance of National Maritime Day yesterday at the Washington Navy Yard.

"Merchant Marine Vital"

"Today as never before in our history, our merchant marine is vital to our national welfare," the President said. "I do not mean vital merely in the conventional sense that it makes an important contribution but in the stronger sense that it is crucially decisive factor in our continued existence as a free people.

"If we are going to keep away from our shores the forces that have convulsed the Old World and now menace the New, the job will be done in large measure by the ships and the sailors of the merchant marine and by the working men who build the ships and supply them. If they fail, the whole effort fails.

"All earnest hard working Americans, who spend the best part of their lives providing for the security and happiness of those they love, know that precious security and happiness depend exactly on the success of that effort.

"I know the effort will not fail: That more and faster ships will be built, manned by trained American seamen, and that they will carry through the open waters of the seven seas implements that will help destroy the menace to free peoples everywhere."

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, speaking at the observance, said that the United States' commitment to aid beleaguered democracies everywhere "permits of no compromise, no equivocation, no dissension."

The American merchant marine, he said, is growing at such a pace that "a year from now it will give pause to the most power-infatuated despot who may be inclined to cast greedy eyes on the Western Hemisphere."

Senator Mead criticized so-called "appeasement" groups for what he termed the "philosophy of defeatism." Such ideas, he said, "spring from the distorted and warped minds of persons who are either misjudging the temper and background of the American people or whose first allegiance is to leadership far away from American shores."

The exercises were on board the United States Maritime Service training ship, "American Seaman." Due to the emergency and the restrictions at the Navy Yard, the program was not open to the public.

The isolationist effort to force the convoy issue to the House floor was aimed to revive a debate that subsided when Senator Charles W. Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, temporarily withdrew his anticonvoy resolution.

Curtis, in placing before the House his petition to discharge the Foreign Affairs Committee from further consideration of his resoolution, asserted that "the decision to convoy or not to convoy is the decision that determines our entrance into the war."

Asks Constitutional Action

"I appeal to everyone in this House who believes in representative government to sign this discharge petition so that the question of peace or war can be decided in a constitutional manner by the representatives of the people," he declared.

Discharge petitions, which are rarely successful in the House, must be signed by a majority of members, 218 or more, before legislation can be forced out of a committee.

Use of a discharge petition to bring the convoy issue to a vote in the Senate has been under discussion in the upper chamber, where isolationist leaders last week decided against offering an anti-convoy amendment as a rider to the foreign ships requisition bill.

The House yesterday heard convoy proposals assailed by Representatives Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, and Fish (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

Shafer, referring to a department store's advertisement of a sale of 59,671 pieces of British china, under the caption, "Britain Delivers the Goods," declared that "if Great Britain can bring them, she can take them—without convoys."

Hits British Trade War

"While a minority in America is crying for more and more aid to Britain," he said, "Great Britain is doing business as usual and is apparently embarking upon a trade war program that may eventually crush the United States economically."

Fish attacked Secretaries Stimson and Knox for recent criticisms of the Neutrality Act, terming the two Cabinet officers "the greatest of the archinterventionists in America."

"They are thinking night and day of means to get us into war," Fish said.

ing details of fighting public prematurely, but never before has such complete secrecy been maintained.

In the Polish, Norwegian, western and Balkan campaigns, the public always was advised that something was under way.

That a widespread battle is in progress in the eastern Mediterranean was made known to the German public through the reports of the engagement between German Stukas and British fleet units. This battle was described by the official German news agency, D. N. B., as "one of the most violent battles between air and sea forces which has taken place in the course of this war."

Even if the British battleships, six cruisers and destroyers were not sunk, D. N. B. reported, they are likely to be out of action for a long period while repairs are being made.

The authoritative Dienst aus Deutschland said sarcastically that dispatches covering Prime Minister Churchill's description of the situation in Crete were being read "with great interest."

Dienst remarked that "an examination of English reports from Crete show that a certain sobering-down has become visible on the British island which contrasts sharply with first reports of British news services."

Meanwhile, little progress seemed to have been made in clarifying the status of the Americans interned after the sinking of the Egyptian liner Zamzam.

The United States Embassy here apparently had not yet received a full written description of the case and an exposition of the German point of view from the foreign office.

It was understood, however, that one complicating factor was owing to the circumstance that a number of the Americans left their passports aboard the ship, so that their identities must be established first by other means.

Martinique Report Held Propaganda

French possession. Hull stated.

Referring to the reports in German-occupied Paris as inspired propaganda, Hull said their purpose is to create an erroneous impression without any facts on which to base them.

The facts, he stated, were that the American Government's attitude toward Martinique and other French colonies has not changed.

The United States has made full preparations for seizure of Martinique, it was recently disclosed, if Axis forces make any moves toward using the island as a base.

Officials have been watching the island closely, but are believed so far to have found no evidence that Germany is being granted rights there.

The United States would not take protective action against Martinique, it was said, unless it appears that the island is falling into Nazi hands.

There was no expression of official concern yesterday over reports that the French war vessels harbored at Martinique have recently taken "morale" cruises into the Caribbean.

The Secretary of State made no comment about United States intentions toward Dakar. Officials believe that those strongholds on the French West African coast, closest point to the Western Hemisphere, could be more of a threat to the United States than Martinique.

French submission to German use of Syrian airfields in an attack on British in Iraq was one of the reasons for an official "crackdown" on France last week. The French Ambassador explained the French-German armistice gave Germany the right to use all French airfields. Officials pointed out that, under these circumstances, active German use of French airfields at Dakar was distinctly possible.

Gun, Tank Output Up 50% in Britain

London, May 22 (AP).—Production of tanks and guns in Britain's war factories exceeded by 50 per cent in the first quarter of this year the figure reached in last year's best quarter ending December 31, an authoritative source said today.

Ickes Blasts Dies Probe Charges as 'Hearsay'

man of the committee, instructed Matthews at this point to submit the remainder of the dossiers for the record.

It was Miss Spargo's investigation of the American Peace Mobilization that took her into the Interior Department and specifically into the bituminous coal division. On March 18, according to her testimony, employes of the division found on their desks a handbill advertising a "peace and democracy" rally sponsored by the Washington Peace Mobilization.

"Loaded" With Communists

In talking to an Administration official about this, she testified, the official told her the agency was "loaded" with Communists and that the employes were "terrified" at their power.

In his letter to Acting Chairman Starnes yesterday, Secretary Ickes had this to say:

"I have noticed in the newspaper the story of the alleged communistic activities in the Bituminous Coal Division of the Department of the Interior. I was not impressed by the published report of your investigators because their testimony seemed to be the rankest kind of hearsay, nor did I see any published statement which would justify the charge of communism against employes of that division.

"On the other hand, I would welcome any evidence which your investigators or your committee have obtained by their undercover work there. I have discussed this subject with some of the employes concerned this morning, and I have advised them to demand that they be confronted with their accusers and be given an opportunity to answer either personally or by attorney.

"I do not wish to employ Communists in this department, but frankly, so far as we have investigated various charges of communism of employes throughout the service, we have failed to secure any evidence whatsoever which would justify their dismissal.

"I have taken the position that in our American form of government we cannot discharge persons, as a general rule, except in connection with some extremely strategic defense situation, on the charge of suuspicion or because of hearsay or because of charges by enemies where they have not been substantiated. Even the exigencies of a political campaign do not justify character assassination of persons accused anonymously and charged as being Communists by mere rumor."

Representative Martin Dies, chairman of the Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities, is now engaged in a political campaign, seeking election to the United States Senate.

Records Offered Ickes

A spokesman for the Dies Committee said that the committee would supply Secretary Ickes with names of employes and records showing that they had a Communist tinge. He said that if Ickes wants absolute proof that this or that employe is a Communist, he is not likely to get it because the Communist Party does not keep records of its members. Thus, he said, it would not even be possible to prove that Earl Browder was a Communist if he had not admitted he was one.

Jan Valtin, author of "Out of the Night," was scheduled to testify today, but it was announced last night that he had been delayed in New York by a deportation hearing. He probably will testify Monday, and no session will be held today.

Miss Spargo and Miss Hoffman, between them, testified yesterday that the aim of the American Peace Mobilization was to demoralize America's selectees, to make them "homesick" through a letter-writing campaign, to engender hatred for civil and military authority, and to harass camp commanders by making complaints against working conditions and low pay.

A. P. M. Issues Statement

The American Peace Mobilization, from its headquarters at 1653 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, last night said:

"A. F. M. answers this accusation with the statement that its policy calls for total repeal of conscription. Pending such action, however, its program calls for modification of the present law and democratization of the Army. This policy grows from its belief that only a democratic army is capable of defending America."

Miss Spargo told the committee that Charles T. Gift, who testified last year about communistic activity at the Washington Navy Yard, was an "active member of the American Peace Mobilization.

A telegram read to the committee disclosed that the "peace vigil" in front of the White House is costing $100 a day. The telegram, signed by Marion Briggs and seized at the Postal Telegraph office by committee agents, was in the nature of a plea for funds to Lionel Stander, the movie actor; Herman Shumlin, Broadway producer; George Marshall, identified as a member of the editorial council of Soviet Russia Today; Mrs. Guggenheimer, Anna Rochester and Alfred Stern, all of New York City; Herbert Biberman, of Los Angeles, and Ellen Brandstetter, of Chicago.

The telegram said:

"Peace vigil at White House approaching the 340th hour. Still going strong. Urgently need money to keep going. Vigil costs $100 per day. Please send airmail special any funds you can."

Pageantry Attends Costa Surrender

British Pay Honor to Bravery Of Italians

By G. H. P. Anderson
English Journalist

Amba Alaji, Ethiopia, May 20 (delayed).—After one last symbolic touching of the soil of Ethiopia, the Italial viceroy, Apulia, Duke of Aosta, formally surrendered to his British imperial conquerors today to conclude a three-day pageant of military victory and defeat replete with the color and contrast which only Africa can supply.

The walking wounded surrendered on Sunday, the main body of troops yesterday.

The duke remained behind, spending the last night in the echoing emptiness of his own useless fortress atop 10,000-foot Mount Alaji.

Accompanied by a single aide, he stepped today into the sunlight from the cavernous door of Fort Toselli, cast one sweeping look about him with weary eyes, then picked his way carefully down the rugged mountainside amid the hand-grenade cases and other debris of battle.

Part-way down, he stopped at a little cemetery, newly dug from the sloping ground under the fort's battered walls.

Bows in Tribute

The aide, two soldiers and I were the only witnesses as the duke stopped beside the grave of his friend, Gen. Volpini, bared his head and bowed in choked tribute to the dead.

The soldiers, who were banking the grave with greenery and carving "Volpini" into a crude headstone, paused to watch disinterestedly.

The other graves were surmounted by wooden crosses roughly hewn from the ammunition crates, the names scrawled on them in pencil, each man's identification papers were tucked into an empty champagne bottle half-buried near the cross.

After a moment, the duke stooped and laid his bare palm flat on the soil of Ethiopia, rose and strode on down to where a British staff car awaited him.

At the head of Alagi Pass, a guard of honor waited. The duke silently inspected the guard and surrendered himself to the senior officer—an Indian commander.

The duke, in simple khaki and puttees, was in striking contrast to the gold-braided, booted and be-ribboned Italian generals who already had surrendered.

He and the senior officer stepped into the car and went zigzagging down the pass. An old Etonian, the duke talked easily about polo and foreign travel, carefully keeping clear of the subject of war.

Prisoners Salute Them

But war intruded. A sharp bend on the road, at the village of Enda Mediani, they came upon thousands of Italian prisoners behind barbed wire. Some rushed to the wire to give the Fascist salute and shout:

"Viva Aosta!"

Others watched with dull indifference.

At the foot of the pass a car with a red banner stood at the roadside.

Lieut. Gen. Platt, general officer commanding the Sudan and Eritrea, stepped forward to shake hands with the duke, who entered his car for the drive to Eritrea, where he will remain until his final place of internment is decided.

As the car rolled away, the British officers stiffly saluted, and Aosta called out in English: "Good luck!"

It was the last act of the surrender which began on Sunday after the British imperial forces had battered the Italian fort into wreckage. First the wounded were taken out from the deep caves under the fort where they were sheltered by 100 feet of rock in bunks carved out of the stone galleries.

On Monday, as the sun reached its zenith, a regiment of South African pipers awakened the mountain echoes with the wild skirl of bagpipes.

Tribute to Bravery

As if at a signal, the 4,500 remaining Italians started marching down the mountainside. They kept in military order behind Gen. Marina Vizetti, a glittering figure in all the finery of his rank.

The pipers gave forth with "Cock of the North" and "Highland Laddie" as the head of the line reached the honor guard of South Africans, English Midlanders and Indians.

The guard presented arms with a flourish.

As a tribute to Italian bravery, each surrendering man was allowed to carry his weapons—the first time this has occurred in the Ethiopian campaign. Some even clutched machine guns. They made no hostile move, though they outnumbered the British guard 5 to 1.

In the ranks were Italians who had fought the South Africans on the blazing plains of Somaliland, who had checked them for a time at Cheren. There were aviators who long since had lost their last plane, sailors who had escaped from Massaua, Alpini in felt hats and swinging Alpine stocks, and Bersaglieri with fluttering cock feathers incongruous on their steel helmets.

There were officers immaculately uniformed even to spotless suede gloves.

And there were bearded veterans, almost in rags, limping painfully at the rear with the aid of sticks while they led regimental pet dogs.

As the passing ranks saluted the British, they ceased the attempt to maintain military formation and straggled in little groups on to captivity. They carried overcoats, blankets, cooking pots and whatever else they had been able to salvage.

The generals were driven on by automobile, but the Duke of Aosta remained in the fort until today. He had already given his men a message of thanks for their gallantry, reminded them to remember their honor and to remember that the war was not over, then called for a final salute for King and Duce.

While Indian troops guarded the heaps of captured guns and supplies, the Duke retired to his underground headquarters to meditate before his own anticlimactic surrender today.

Telephone Girl Reported Missing

RUBY WILBOURNE.

Police broadcast a lookout last night for Miss Ruby Wilbourne, comely 23-year-old telephone operator, who disappeared Tuesday from her residence at 3000 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

She left no word and took no belongings with her, according to Miss Dorothy Livesay, a Postoffice Department clerk, who shares an apartment with her.

Miss Wilbourne, who came to Washington four years ago from South Hill, Va., was last seen about 4 p. m. Tuesday by an employe of the apartment house where she lived. She had been due at work in the National Exchange of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. at 2 p. m. that day, it was said.

Friends were unable to give any reason for her disappearance, but they said she had appeared despondent and homesick lately. Notified of her disappearance, her father is now here with her brother, Fenton Wilbourne, who lives on Clifton Street Northwest.

Miss Wilbourne is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs about 105 pounds, has brown hair and eyes and was wearing a tan skirt, sports jacket and black shoes.

British Claim 5,300 Taken In Ethiopia

By the United Press

Cairo, May 22.—British forces mopping isolated pockets of Italian resistance in Ethiopia were reported tonight to have taken 5,300 prisoners, 42 guns and 19 tanks.

General headquarters claimed in a communique that the reduction of opposition in Ethiopia was proceeding swiftly, leaving the implication that formidable British forces soon would be released for service in other danger zones of the Eastern Mediterranean.

The main Italian collapse appeared to have been in the region south of Sciasciamanna.

The communique said that in that area British advance guards overwhelmed a complete rear guard consisting of a brigade headquarters and three colonial battalions. Captives taken there were estimated to exceed 4,400, most of them Italians, while 32 guns and 14 tanks fell into British hands.

The entire series of operations in the lake region south of Addis Ababa, including those around Sciasciamanna, was said to be proceeding satisfactorily. Two enemy divisions were reported trapped between the British columns sweeping in from north and south.

Captives taken in the Gondar area north of Lake Tana were given as 300. Sudan defense forces were active there and closely engaged with the enemy in the vicinity of Chelga.

Vigorous patrol activity was reported by general headquarters in the Libyan border zone of Egypt, where the tide of battle has surged back and forth for weeks.

Advance units of British mechanized forces destroyed an Axis post on a hill near Salum last Tuesday night, knocking out three German tanks.

Royal Air Force headquarters announced that British and South African fighter planes successfully attacked motor transports and convoys in the border zone of Fort Capuzzo Wednesday.

A bombing attack Wednesday on Malta caused slight damage to property and services.

R.A.F. Armada Battles Nazis Over Calais

By David Anderson
Copyright by New York Times

London (Friday), May 23.—A full-dress air battle took place Wednesday between raiding British bombers, heavily escorted by fighters, and defending German aircraft over Pas de Calais, where last year the last stages of the French campaign around Calais and Dunkerque were fought out.

Five Messerschmitts were shot down in the course of Wednesday's action, which cost the British one bomber and six fighters. The two objectives elected for attack were a power station and an oil refinery near Bethune in Northern France.

Despite constant harrying by German planes all the way from the Channel coast the raiders swept over the target zone as scheduled and there, according to a member of one British crew who crouched down at a window to see what happened, "came dozens of small, white mushrooms of smoke, followed by many yellow and green explosions all over the area."

50-Mile Dogfight

The running dogfight along the 50-mile path from the seacoast and back again was an interesting experience was for some senior British officers. The wing commander leading the escorting fighters said:

"I know that when we used to attack fighter escorts in the Battle of Britain last September it almost inevitably ended in the enemy bombers being left to the mercy of our fighters. But today we managed to drive away the Messerschmitt 109s and to keep company with our bombers.

"We saw a lot of enemy fighters climbing up to attack our bombers and another group of about nine dove down at the rear, while still more concentrated on us."

What the battle looked like from the viewpoint of a navigator of a British bomber also was told by the air ministry news service. "Above us we could see vapor trails making fantastic patterns against the sky. Once I saw below us a yellow blob in the center of a shining circle climbing vertically toward us—it was a Messerschmitt that broke away before coming in range. Later another I saw slipped past flaming."

A small number of Royal Air Force planes earlier Wednesday carried on a surprise attack on Helgoland from which one machine is missing. They must have startled the garrison when they suddenly appeared less than 50 feet in the air spraying bombs and bullets on gun batteries, the docks and the town—also on a field on which a football game was in progress.

The damage done to this important German naval base during a similar raid eight days earlier was said to have been observed.

The air ministry reported that scattered enemy aircraft flew over Britain yesterday, some bombs falling on a Sussex village. There were no casualties elsewhere. One German fighter was destroyed by British Channel patrols in the morning.

A dense mist shrouded the Straits of Dover last night. The overcast sky was said after dark to be free of raiders.

Bagdad's Fall Imminent, British Say

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, May 22.—Imminent capture of Bagdad was predicted today by British military sources, who revealed that imperial troops in Iraq had approached within 20 miles of the city, the capital of Premier Rashid Ali Beg Gailani's government.

At the same time, diplomatic information indicated a Brtish attack on Syria may take place soon, and there appears to be confirmation that some French troops in the mandated territory have deserted to the Allied side. Patrols loyal to Gen. Charles de Gaulle, "Free French" leader, are reported to have moved north on the Palestine frontier.

There is every indication that Lieut. Gen. Sir Henry M. Wilson, commanding the army in Palestine, is about to initiate a more active policy in Iraq and Syria, to clear up these regions before the Axis obtains a firm foothold.

The threat to the entire British position in Palestine, should the Axis be able to capture Crete and Cyprus while maintaining positions on the mainland in the Middle East, is recognized, and judging by reports here strong efforts are expected shortly to forestall such a situation.

At the same time, Axis sources release a purported German timetable for events in this area. According to this program, the Nazis expect to have completed the occupation of Crete by the middle of June and to take Cyprus in July. The idea then would be to occupy Syria and Iraq in August and September, and to make a grand drive for Egypt in late September and October.

Battle for Mosul Oil Appears Near

London, May 22 (U.P.).—A major battle for Iraq's rich Mosul oil fields appeared near tonight following reports that strong forces of German air-borne troops, bombers and fighter planes have taken possession of the Mosul region after flying across Syria.

The German forces entrenched in the Mosul fields are in a position, unless driven out by British imperial forces now pushing toward Bagdad from the west, to cut the Iraq-Haifa pipeline providing fuel to the British Mediterranean fleet and armored forces in the Middle East.

The presence of the Germans in the Mosul region was first revealed a few days ago in a Royal Air Force communique which said British bombers had attacked German planes there.

Further bombings were reported at Mosul and the authoritative Times, of London, admitted "the Germans have beaten us in the race for Mosul."

Presence of the German forces at Mosul was cited by British military quarters tonight as tending to corroborate the allegation of Gen. Georges Catroux, Free French leader, that French Syria had shipped 800 tons of munitions into Iraq by way of the Aleppo-Mosul Railroad.

Martinique Set for Attack, Paris Says

remain in the Antilles on "practice maneuvers."

Both warships recently have engaged in maneuvers for the announced purpose of maintaining crew morale.

In Vichy, Vice Premier Admiral Darlan, back from Paris, conferred with Chief of State Petain and it was annnounced that Darlan would make a radio broadcast to the nation at 1 p. m. Friday (6 a. m., Eastern standard time) on the state of the current French-German negotiations.

Defenses Strengthened

The Paris newspaper Le Matin said Martinique's defenses were being strengthened and that any conflict would center around the island's fortress, which holds the gold reserves of the Bank of France, estimated at $250,000,000 or more.

That fortress will be blown to pieces if necessary to prevent it falling into foreign hands, the paper said.

Paris papers also asserted that British warships were continuing a patrol off Martinique.

(Reports from Puerto Rico last November said that United States warships had taken up the patrol around Martinique, relieving the British West Indies squadron of that task.)

Along with the Martinique reports, another Paris paper, the weekly Gringoire, used half its front page to attack President Roosevelt. With a three-column article there was a cartoon depicting Mr. Roosevelt taking his ease on the deck of the French liner Normandie in New York, and captioned:

"Lafayette, I am here."

Many Warplanes on Isle

The British are anxious that nearly 100 American-made warplanes stored on Martinique do not fall into German hands.

The planes are of doubtful military value now, after sizzling in the tropic sun and being lashed by the rains and winds ever since they were immobilized there last summer by the fall of France. The United States has tried vainly to buy them back, just to be on the safe side. They cost $7,000,000 to $9,000,000, and the French have acknowledged it would be an advantageous sale, but say the German armistice terms prevent the deal.

PALM BEACH SUITS

"It's porous—with 1,600 open windows in every square inch. Heat radiates through it. Perspiration evaporates through it. This keeps the body cool. Nerve center and heart and lungs work less. And besides, when moisture evaporates the body is dry. That means goodbye to the chills and colds you catch when you go into an air-cooled movie or restaurant in a moist blanket. Besides—when a suit is soaked with perspiration and waste substances accumulate, skin irritations, body odors and general discomfort ensue. 7,300 Construction Men Fired For Strike at Big Arms Plant

By the United Press

Ravenna, Ohio, May 22.—More than 7,000 laborers employed in building the Government's $35,000,000 shell-loading plant were discharged today by the building contractors who announced complete suspension of all work on the project after unsuccessful attempts to end a "wildcat" strike by about 5,000 men.

Although only about 5,000 laborers, members of the International Hod Carriers, Builders and Common Laborers (A. F. L.), had engaged in the strike for increased wages, the Army public relations office at the plant said 7,300 workmen were affected by the order of the contractor, Hunkin-Conkey Construction Co. of Cleveland.

The Army previously had charged the strike, which was without union sanction, had been caused by "agitators" and earlier ordered all work stopped "to insure protection of life and property" until the arsenal reservation had been "peaceably cleared of the agitators causing this stoppage of work."

A statement by the contractors said:

"We wish to announce to the strikers that their present badges are now obsolete and will not gain them admission upon resumption of work and reemployment will be made through accredited representatives of the American Federation of Labor, whoever they may be, which is up to Washington to decide."

It was reported unofficially that a number of the men probably would be rehired later, but that approval would have to be obtained from union officials as a prerequisite to reemployment. The Hunkin-Conkey Co. said, "Any of the men who do not regain employment" and who had clothing or other property on the reservation would receive it later.

Tokyo-Soviet Pact Echoes In Far East

By Douglas Robertson

Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, May 22.—Already throughout the Far East and especially in Manchukuo are the effects of Japan's recently signed pact with Russia becoming evident.

Foreign travelers arriving in Shanghai say Korean, Manchukuo and some North China ports lately have been the scene of military activities not seen since 1937. Japanese divisions complete with artillery, mechanized units and hospital and supply corps have been loaded on transports which later slip away southward to a destination unknown, yet Formosa or South China might be a good guess.

It is surmised these troops, previously stationed along the Manchukuo-Soviet border, are now being transferred to some destination where it would be easy to use them to strike at either the Dutch East Indies, Singapore or both.

Home Front Shaky

Reliable reports reaching Shanghai, however, declare all is not well on the Japanese home front. Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye, supported by business men, financiers and politicians, is declared unwilling to risk further adventures, deterred by American opposition and the perilous economic position of internal Japan.

The younger officers of both the army and the navy are becoming more and more vociferous in expressing their ideas that Japan must continue southward, even if such action involves clashes with America and Britain or even wrecks Japan economically and financially. Of course, a military or naval defeat for Japan is considered by these enthusiasts so completely out of the question as to be more than absurd.

Differences Revealed

Foreign travelers from northern points reveal curious differences in Manchuokuo. Although entirely under Japanese domination, the fiction remains that Manchuokuo is a separate "empire," but the leased territory of Dairen and Port Arthur is under Japanese administration.

Travelers declare throughout Manchuokuo, especially at Harbin, Hsinking and Mukden the populace is suddenly "coming to life." It seems that for years speculators had bought up all possible commodities, hoping that at the outbreak of the supposed second Russo-Japanese war they would reap large profits.

The signing of the Moscow pact destroyed these dreams and sudden wealth was the result from Manchuokuo, at present flooded with the hoarded sugar, flour, textiles and other civilian commodities. While the pact signing was a bitter pill for the speculators, further nasty medicine was administered when the Japanese authorities stepped in and instituted rigid retail price control and forbade any exports to north or central China, in fact exports generally.

China Reported Ready to Carry Air War to Foe

Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, May 22.—All indications reveal that the Chinese air force will become increasingly active in the very near future, both in defending Chinese cities against Japanese raiders and in carrying aerial fights to Japanese-held points in China, to Formosa and possibly even to Japan, according to reliable foreign reports received in Shanghai.

In the last year and a half Chungking has established numerous training fields in far western China, where Chinese aviators have been given extensive training under foreign instructors, and they are now reported ready to engage Japanese aerial fighters.

The Chinese air force is also now provided with numerous fighting and bombing planes from America and Britain, and it is expected these planes will figure largely in the proposed retaliation against Japan.

However, the fact that China has a new air force has not been the only reason for this sudden impulse to use the air arm against the Japanese. It is reliably learned here that foreign air missions in Chungking have talked "straight from the shoulder" to the Chungking government.

The foreign missions pointed out that while the planes being delivered to Chungking's air bases are supposed to be used as warplanes in China's fight against Japan, numerous Chinese government officials have used some planes for official government business, and in some cases for purely private purposes.

Although it is uncertain as yet, it is conceivable the foreign air missions strongly hinted that unless the warplanes supplied to Chungking were used for military activities, further supplies of such planes would likely be withheld. The excuse reported to have been given for withholding the planes from military activity was that China was not the agressor, but only the defender, and therefore could not attack Japan or Japanese-held positions and air fields in China.

However, renewed Japanese raids on Chungking and other Szechuen cities and the Japanese offensives in Shansi and Chekiang have caused a change in the official Chinese governmental mind, and they are now ready to strike back at the Japanese. Also, the appearance again of Chinese planes in the sky will increase Chinese morale, while having the opposite effect on the Japanese.

Already the Japanese, whose spy and espionage organizations are cognizant of the Chinese planes, are busily enlarging and strengthening their antiaircraft defenses in China, Formosa and Japan.

Britain Seeks to Buy 'Refugee' Ships in Hemisphere Ports

By Lloyd Lehrbas

Associated Press Staff Writer

Great Britain, it was learned authoritatively yesterday, is negotiating with Latin American nations for the purchase of the 100-odd refugee foreign merchantmen now idle in hemisphere ports.

The negotiations, it was learned, parallel existing discussions between Sir Arthur Salter, chief of the British Shipping Mission, and the U. S. Maritime Commission, whereby Britain hopes to obtain some merchant tonnage when the United States formally requisitions the 84 foreign ships now under official surveillance here.

The success of British efforts, it was said, would hinge largely on the deliberations of the Inter-American Financial and Economic Committee, representing all 21 American Republics, which convened yesterday to consider the whole ship seizure question.

Action was postponed yesterday until next Thursday because official statements had not been received from eight of the republics.

Replies Received

Meeting at the Pan-American Union under the chairmanship of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, the representatives of the 21 republics considered replies already received from the various governments to a questionnaire seeking information as to the exact number of ships in American ports and whether these nations desired to utilize these refugee ships.

The committee announced that action was deferred awaiting replies from Brazil, United States, Nicaragua, Peru, Paraguay, Venezuela, Bolivia and Cuba. Officials said the Bolivian and Cuban governments had dispatched their replies, but they have not yet reached Washington.

Great Britain's attitude, it was said, was that enemy ships are subject to seizure by the British navy even though they have been taken over in the New World and fly the flag of one of the American republics.

Two Firms Offer To Return Excess Profits to Navy

Secretary Knox announced yesterday that Bethlehem Steel Co. and Todd Shipbuilding Co. have volunteered to return to the Navy profits "greater than was originally anticipated" on $30,000,000 in naval orders.

An increased volume of orders for converting commercial craft to naval vessels boosted profits to a level "higher than originally contemplated," Knox said, and the two firms proposed to cut them "to a degree consistent with fair business standards."

The Navy chief said it was impossible to announce the amount of the refunds, but that they would be "substantial." He praised the companies' "patriotic action."

Knox to Address Naval Architects, Engineers Today

Technical problems of building Uncle Sam's two-ocean Navy will be discussed here today by leading naval architects and marine engineers from the country's principal shipbuilding centers.

Secretary of the Navy Knox will be guest of honor and speaker at a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel, where the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers will hold its spring meeting.

This morning the delegates will inspect the David W. Taylor Model Basin at Carderock, Md. Technical papers will be read this afternoon at the Mayflower.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. Navy, retired, president of the society, is expected to preside at the luncheon.

A.F.L. Reaffiliation Lags in I. T. U. Vote

Indianapolis, May 22 (AP).—Scattered returns tonight in the International Typographical Union's referendum on reaffiliation with the American Federation of Labor showed 5,547 votes for the proposal and 6,885 against.

The vote in New York was 3,413 for rejoining the federation and 3,618 opposed.

Shipbuilding, Coal Strife Worry Capital

A strike at North American Aviation Co.'s plant at Inglewood, Calif., working on vast warplane contracts, was threatened last night as wage negotiations collapsed, and Secretary of Labor Perkins immediately certified the dispute to the Defense Mediation Board.

This development came as Washington prepared to grapple today with the Nation's most disturbing defense strike, as well as a dispute that has threatened a second shutdown of industrial fuel sources.

The Senate Defense Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Truman, of Missouri, will open hearings this morning into the tie-up of 11 West Coast shipyards and drydocks, in which it became necessary yesterday to transport workers through picket lines in Navy and Marine vehicles driven by uniformed service men.

At the same time, the National Defense Mediation Board, for the second time, will come to grips with the dispute that closed all soft coal mines for one 30-day period and has threatened to bring another stoppage.

Confer at 10 Today

A board panel, at 10 a. m., will confer with Southern operators whose refusal to accept the contract agreed to by Northern operators and the John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers. The board, through Vice Chairman William H. Davis, intervened the second time when negotiations under which work was resumed early in the month had reached a stalemate and disputants had started hurling bitter personal invective.

In addition, the mediation board received last night another dispute, involving 1,500 C. I. O. electrical workers at the E. W. Bliss Co., Brooklyn, and called on the union to delay any walkout. The plant has $30,000,000 of defense orders for power presses, heavy machinery and torpedoes.

11,000 Men Affected

The North American Aviation controversy affects 11,000 workers making bombing and pursuit planes for the Army. The union was certified as the collective bargaining agency by the National Labor Relations Board on April 15, but the bargaining sessions reached a deadlock on wage and shop conditions. The union ordered last night's night shift and today's day workers to take the strike vote.

Today's soft coal negotiations with Southern operators will be conducted by the panel consisting of Vice chairman Davis, Walter Teagle and Clinton Golden. They will confer tomorrow morning with Northern operators.

Chairman Truman called today's hearing on the shipyards strike to find out "what is involved in the strike, why it has not been settled, and who is responsible for the country not getting ships."

The Associated Press yesterday reported these new developments:

For the second time within 15 days, employes of the Laporte, Ind., plant of Allis-Chalmers manufacturing Co. walked out. There was no official word as to their grievance, but it was reported to be over the dismissal of three stewards. The plant, with about 1,000 employes, has a $5,000,000 contract for antiaircraft mounts.

At Buffalo, N. Y., the Fedders Manufacturing Co., producing machine gun ammunition clips, closed down after a strike by C. I. O. steel workers who asked 10 cents an hour wage increase. The union said workers making the clips were permitted to pass picket lines, but the company said the plant could not be kept operating without key employes in other divisions. The company said the present basic wage was about 80 cents an hour.

At Roanoke, Va., over 200 electrical workers employed in the construction of the $44,100,000 Radford Ordnance Works struck yesterday for a 25-cents-an-hour wage increase and a conference between the A. F. L. electricians union and Mason & Hanger officials, contractors, was arranged for 10 a. m. today in Radford Friday.

Home Defense Volunteers To 'Work Hard'

By Frank L. Kluckhorn

Copyright by New York Times

Americans who volunteer for the home defense program will have to submit to "rigid discipline" and training, Mayor LaGuardia of New York declared in a press conference here yesterday, shortly before he received his commission as director of the Office of Civilian Defense from President Roosevelt.

"Perhaps 80 per cent of the field workers will be volunteers," the home defense chief declared. "We will come into action only in times of emergency and each individual must know exactly what his task is."

The mayor outlined in considerable detail the program to protect cities and civilians, as far as possible, from the destruction and vicissitudes of modern warfare with its attacks from the skies upon population and factory centers.

He remarked that Washington would be a fine target from the air.

"Be Prepared to Work Hard"

LaGuardia announced plans for creation of corps of uniformed women doing the American equivalent of air-raid prevention work and the drafting of schedules for evacuation of Eastern Seaboard cities "in the event of attack" and necessity. He disclosed that the chief initial home defense effort would be expended upon organization of cities of the East, West and Gulf Coasts, with intensive work in the relatively safer Midwest to come later.

Later, for half an hour, the President and LaGuardia discussed creation of the "general staff" for the program and its personnel, expected to include national figures.

"As for the staff that will work in my office here, black ties and white ties will not be a necessary part of their wardrobes," he said. "All we ask is that they be prepared to work hard.

"There is a 95 per cent chance at this time that the home defense forces will not get into action, but we can't take a chance on the remaining 5 per cent."

Three Departments

The Mayor said that he planned to establish in the OCD three separate departments to deal with public safety, engineering, shelter and food.

The division of public safety, he explained, will deal with fire-spotting and other fire protection, public health, prevention of panics and other protection of property and life.

The division of engineernig will prepare clearance of streets and highways of debris "in event of attack" and assure functioning of utilities.

The division of shelters and supply will handle problems connected with food in event of dislocation caused by bombing, and the evacuation of homes.

The home guards, organized, or being organized by States to replace the National Guard, now in Federal service, for the protection of property, antisabotage and emergency police work would be coordinated in the home defense plan.

operating only in New York and Chicago, they started getting information as to how to proceed. To date, however, nothing has been accomplished. Firing is desultory and only duds are coming from the muzzles.

Hundreds of cities are demanding penny projects. Federal funds to subsidize them are limited. The competition is great. If Washington wants to get in, so that rationing of milk to malnourished children can be done away with, it will have to fight for a franchise.

C.I.O. Landslide In Ford Election

granted $13,682,000 in wage increases to 53,000 employes.

Thomas's statement said the election result "marks the end of an era in American industry—defeat of the type of uncompromising antiunionism represented by Henry Ford." He expressed hope that the company would "draw the curtain on the past," as he said the U. A. W.-C. I. O. was willing to erase all bitterness."

Harry Bennett, personnel director of the Ford Motor Co., after hearing of the C. I. O.'s victory, commented, according to the Associated Press:

["It's a great victory for the Communist Party, Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner and the National Labor Relations Board. The law provides we must live with them and we never violate the law."—Editor's note.]

Henry Ford, founder of the company and pioneer of the industry, had opposed labor unions with an argument that "no worker need pay to hold his job in my plant." He claimed he paid the highest wages in the industry. He was the first manufacturer to establish a minimum wage rate of $5 daily.

Ford workers will swell the U. A. W.-C. I. O. membership to 460,000, a union spokesman said. The Ford U. A. W.-C. I. O. Local No. 600, with a membership of 60,000, is the largest labor local in the United States, it was said.

The U. A. W.-C. I. O. already has petitioned the NLRB for an employe election at Ford's Highland Park (Mich.) plant and has asked the company for conferences concerning wages, hours and working conditions at 28 Ford plants outside Detroit. The latter move must be made and either denied or ignored before the union can petition for an election.

NLRB Orders Ford To Reinstate 975

The National Labor Relations Board directed the Ford Motor Co. last night to reinstate 975 workers with back pay at its Kansas City, Mo., plant, offer reemployment to 46 others and discontinue recognition of the independent union of Ford workers.

It was the ninth decision returned against the Ford company by the board. This one was based on a finding that the company discharged 1,997 employes at Kansas City October 15, 1937, "in order to destroy" the local union of the A. F. L.'s United Automobile Workers. The board said a month later the company reemployed those who joined the independent union.

Army 'Battles' In Unknown Soldier's 'View'

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Down under the hill where one of its members solemnly guards the resting place of an anonymous soldier who died in the last war, the Twelfth Infantry yesterday fought a mimic battle.

It was a battle alive with all the crash and fury of modern combat. The back-breaking toil inseparable from defense against the machines of modern war was evident in long lines of trenches, foxholes, tank blocks and machine-gun emplacements hastily dug by the regiment under the broiling sun. Though it lasted only 30 minutes when it came at 6:30 p. m., the battle rolled up a tremendous amount of smoke and dust and noise that stopped traffic on nearby Arlington Ridge Road and filled the sweating files with delight.

Preparations for the battle began with the crack of dawn yesterday, when the Twelfth Infantry was informed that war was imminent with a Red State to the west. It was ordered to take up a defensive position in a long hypothetical line facing the Red frontier and prepare for any eventuality.

Planes Are Spotters

In line and digging, the regiment was informed by its aviation of a motorized Red infantry division reinforced by a battalion of tanks at Winchester, Va., moving northeastward on three roads. Red scout cars were seen nosing about at Darnestown; at Dranesville, where Jeb Stuart in 1861 lost a battle and saved a wagon train; at Chantilly, where Stonewall Jackson, in 1862, was stalled by a violet rainstorm when he attempted to intercept the Federal retreat after Second Manassas.

By 4:30, when aviation radioed the presence of the Red division in those three hamlets, the Twelfth had dug itself well into the almost impenetrable ground. Machine guns were in their emplacements, covered with camouflage; antitank guns were hidden in the little clumps of trees, ready to be rolled into place in a moment; little 60-millimeter mortars and the long fat 81s were settled down behind the line of rifle pits. Everything was neatly camouflaged and incomparably dusty.

At 6:30 p. m., detachments with flags indicating their nature and with respectable spriknlings of machine guns and mortars burst from the hedge along the ridge road, defensive outposts drifted back and waves of fire swept the line of shallow trenches along the ridge of the Twelfth's little hill. On the left, where the Third Battalion laid a curtain of fire across an open field, the attack was halted in its tracks. On the right, things did not go so well.

There the Reds swept in behind a cloud of smoke and boiled over into the line of the First Battalion. Back of the line, the battalion's command post, hidden in a chestnut grove, hurriedly snatched up radios and telephones, field desks and packs and cleared out in a swirling cloud of dust and chemical smoke.

Eat in Trenches

Even as the command post was getting out, a rifle company, held in battalion reserve, was rushed to a hill on the right, where it enfiladed the attacking Reds, forced them to halt and, when the shattered Third Battalion reformed and counterattacked, to retire.

Last night the regiment was given supper in the trenches under combat conditions. Ration parties crawled up from the rear, delivered hot food to the troops in line. Not a light was shown; it was but slightly more comfortable than it might have been under fire.

The regiment was commanded during the problem by Lieut. Col. Miguel Montesinos, with Maj. W. H. Schildroth as operations officer. Situations were conceived and presented by Lieut. Col. M. L. Halsey, regimental executive officer, assisted by Maj. D. B. Smith. Col. H. O. Saunders, regimental commander, supervised the problem.

French Ships Avoid Manila

This was believed done to avoid the possibility that the United States might extend "protective custody" to French vessels entering Philippine waters.

29th Division to Keep a Diary, Reckord Sees Extended Service

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., May 22.—Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckford, saying it is "the general belief" the Twenty-ninth Division's one-year period of Federal service will be extended, has ordered that its activities be recorded "with a view of compiling a division history at the expiration of the division's tour of duty."

"Even if no other service is anticipated, the division will participate in the greatest peacetime maneuvers this country has ever seen," the commander of the Twenty-ninth stated in a memorandum to unit commanders.

"The assembly of the division at war strength in a cantonment camp and one year of service in the Army will be an experience to which every officer and man in this division will look back in the days to come.

"It is felt, therefore, that a contemporaneous record of the events and activities of the division should be kept."

The 115th Infantry tomorrow will undergo its annual general inspection by Lieut. Col. Graham B. Bright, the Twenty-ninth Division's inspector general.

The three battalions and unlettered companies of the Maryland regiment, commanded by Col. D. John Markey, will undergo inspection of field equipment and barracks in the morning. Selectees and their training cadres will be formed in their respective battalion areas while the inspection is taking place.

In the afternoon, records of the regiment, companies and detatchments will be inspected. Later the entire regiment will form for a "retreat parade" on the Regular Army post area. Selectees will march to the parade field as a body in the rear of the regiment and then form in the rear of their respective battalions.

The division today has a total of 16,912 officers and men in its units, leaving only 1,979 selectees to be assigned before wartime strength is reached, it was announced.

The division's allotted full strength is 17,945 enlisted men and 946 officers.

The following promotions of officers were announced today:

Capt. Garnett W. Johnson, of Danville, Va., to major in 104th Medical Regiment.

First Lieut. William H. Dorin, Jr., of Richmond, Va., to captain in 176th Infantry.

First Lieut. Perry L. Gwaltney, of Blackstone, Va., to captain in 176th Infantry.

Second Lieut. Michael E. Voight, of Salisbury, Md., to first lieutenant in 115th Infantry.

House Unit Approves Creation Of Admirals for 'Task Forces'

The House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday approved unpublicized legislation authorizing creation of more vice admirals to command special "task forces" to carry out important, but undisclosed sea missions. It was explained that "task forces" might consist of a battleship division, a wing of aircraft, a destroyer flotilla and a number of submarines.

Committee Member Melvin J. Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, interpreted the measure as a prelude to "preparation" for extensive use of "task forces" to sweep the Atlantic for British-aid shipping, including protection of American merchantmen sailing to the Red Sea.

Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, asked the committee for the legislation but spoke guardedly concerning it. When a committee member asked whether the new posts had to do with the protection of American shipping in the Red Sea, Nimitz did not answer. Later, the question was stricken from the record.

At present the Navy has only three vice admirals and they hold commands from which they could not readily be detached.

The proposed legislation threw little light on the reasons behind it, merely stipulating that in addition to the officers now serving in the grade of vice admiral, any officer "designated by the President to perform special or unusual duty, or to command a naval unit afloat organized for the purpose of performing a special or unusual mission may, within the discretion of the President, have the rank, pay and allowances of a vice admiral while so serving."

Meanwhile, the House passed and sent to the Senate legislation to set up a special "plant protection force" to prevent sabotage in Navy yards and other shore establishments. The bill authorizes an annual appropriation of $3,000,000 for the force.

Sponsors of the measure explained that the Navy considers the civilian police and Marine Corps details now on guard at its shore establishments inadequate for detection of saboteurs and "subversive elements."

Representative Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania, said demands for economy should not be permitted "to stand in the way of investigation of any subversive forces," but he asserted that the FBI could protect the Navy plants as well or better than the proposed new force, which would involve "an unnecessary duplication of expense and effort."

Arms Output Is Threatened By Drought

Copyright by New York Times

Drought conditions, the most severe on record in many sections of the country, and consequent curtailment of waterpower seriously threaten the national defense production effort, it was learned yesterday.

The situation is such, it was understood, that the Federal Power Commission is making surveys in the affected areas, chiefly New England, the Southeastern States and the Ohio Valley, in preparation to formulate plans for counteracting the loss in water-generated power.

While as yet the power situation has not affected national defense orders already in production, a Federal official high in power circles today said that there are "several areas where national defense orders are wating for power to be available. Such additional demands cannot be supplied."

The official would not specify the items which the lack of power has held up.

In most of the drought area, it was learned, steam auxiliary power plants are operating almost to full capacity. In New England this is not yet true but will be in a few days.

The situation is the result of low water and high demands. Power consumption this year is running about 16 per cent above that of last year, while stream flow in the drought areas ranges up from a low of 16 per cent of normal for April—a condition which has prevailed to some degree since October.

2 Wire Firms Ask for Right To Consolidate

By the Associated Press

Heads of two major telegraph companies proposed yesterday that Congress authorize consolidation of all units in the industry to make possible better and more economical service.

The proposal was made to a Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee by R. R. White, president of Western Union, and Edwin F. Chinlund, president of Postal Telegraph, Inc.

"I have never understood," White told the committee, "why the law permitting mergers or consolidations of telephone companies and other businesses charged with a public interest made an exception of the telegraph industry, and I know of no reason why this exception should be continued.

"I favor a change in the law so that the right to consolidate now granted to telephone companies will be accorded to record communications companies when such consolidations are found to be in the public interest."

Chinlund declared that the "telegraph industry is in a precarious position, to the detriment of the public, labor and investors alike," because of "the inability of the telegraph industry to compete effectively against other forms of communication."

He declared that "there is no doubt that a very large amount of the existing wasteful duplication could be eliminated as a result of a merger, and that substantial savings would result."

"The news is serious but that is as we expected when Hitler goes all out on a fresh project . . . Churchill has the support of the people in good times and in bad he carries them along with him."

The Daily Herald said:

"The Nation learns with reverence of the heroism which its soldiers, sailors and airmen are showing in the defense of Crete. Nothing is to be gained by minimizing the handicap under which they are fighting. . . . If we should win, the blow to German prestige will be immense."

The Daily Telegraph declared:

"The defense is seriously handicapped by the entire absence of fighter planes. . . . Until the still-confused picture assumes clearer outlines there is little to do but wait and hope."

Military Control Of Priority Killed

The House agreed by a voice vote yesterday to a compromise version of mandatory priorities legislation which authorizes rationing of strategic materials to civilian uses. The measure now goes to the Senate.

The compromise measure eliminated a House provision which would have given the Army and Navy Munitions Control Board authority to overrule whatever agency was designated by the President to administer the program.

New Corporate Tax Plan Held Boomerang

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Steep new corporate surtaxes and excess profits levies proposed by the Treasury will dry up tax sources and eventually reduce the national income, the House Ways and Means Committee was told yesterday.

Lovell H. Parker, former chief of staff of the Congressional joint committee on taxation, suggested that "a sounder program for the long pull" might call for raising half the 1942 budget through taxation, instead of two-thirds, as proposed by the Treasury.

There is "no magic" in the two-thirds formula, Parker said, and the Treasury schedules impose a sudden and drastic increase in taxation without allowing "sufficient time for individuals, businesses and corporations to adjust themselves to the additional burden."

The witness said it is "a common fallacy" to believe that a substantial increase in a corporation's profits result immediately in a proportionate increase in the cash reserves from which it can pay dividends or taxes.

There is an interim period of as much as two or three years, he stated, in which a corporation's working capital position "is actually strained by increased operations, involving largely increased inventories, increased credits in the form of accounts receivable, and increased expenditures for plant rehabilitation and extension.

"A program adjusted to these practicalities would be far sounder," he declared, "than to compel corporations to suffer the immediate impact of a much larger burden which may not only endanger their corporate health and life, but will serve to cripple their future ability to pay substantial taxes."

With the Ways and Means Committee's search for $3,600,000,000 in new revenue, now in its fifth week, proposals for reduction of non-defense expenditures in the 1942 budget continued to occupy the House.

Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma, a Ways and Means member, called for disbanding of the Civilian Conservation Corps, which he said would effect a saving of $280,000,000.

to the Germans. Should De Gaulle win Syria, he and the British could make it a powerful wedge between Hitler and the Middle East.

Today's open warning to Vichy, however, gave rise to speculation that the net British step might be recognition of De Gaulle as the head of an actual government for "Free France."

Last July the British pounced on the French fleet at Oran and Mers-El-Kebir and in September they backed an abortive Free French attack on Dakar, Senegal, but never before have they so openly dropped diplomatic consideration for their former ally as did Eden today.

He said to the House of Commons:

"If the Vichy government in pursuance of their declared policy of collaboration with the enemy, take action or permit action detrimental to our conduct of the war or designed to assist the enemy's war effort, we shall naturally hold ourselves free to attack the enemy wherever he may be found and, in doing so, we shall no longer feel bound to draw any distinction between occupied and unoccupied territories in the execution of our military plans."

On the surface this situation was brought to a boil by the new negotiations which the French government, through Vice Premier Admiral Darlan, has been conducting with Adolf Hitler, and their reflection in what Eden called the "sinister" use of Syrian airdromes by German planes en route to the Iraq, scene of Middle Eastern war between the British and the Axis-backed Iraqis.

But the disclosure that Britain is ready to go so far as to attack—which means to bomb—unoccupied France, unless Vichy pauses in her course of German collaboration, reflects also the fear that Germany is about to send troops through unoccupied France into Spain in an attempt to knock out Gibraltar.

Cites Supplies Given

British sources charge that Vichy, in the last six weeks, has given Germany 10,000 tons of aluminum, 8,000 tons of manganese, 38,000 tons of bauxite, 30,000 tons of wool and 30,000 tons of fruit.

Eden said Vichy had "embarked on a course which must place the resources and territories of France increasingly at the disposal" of Germany—although, he asserted, the French people themselves cannot consider this compatible with honor.

"Nor will they believe," he said, "that the future of France and her empire will be better served by surrendering them to Hitler's so-called new order than by resolutely maintaining and defending their independence until such a time as victorious Allies have completed their liberation."

(Only last week Marshal Petain told the French that their country and empire could rise again in the Axis "new order.")

Eden went on:

"On August 7, last, His Majesty's government assured Gen. De Gaulle it was their determination when victory was won to secure full restoration of the independence and greatness of France.

"It rests with the French people to determine whether they will play their part in assisting those who have continued the fight for liberation of France or whether France will, henceforth, serve in the ranks of Germany's satellites."

British sources predicted a sharp tightening of the blockade of unoccupied France following seizure of the Sheherazade, and said probably no more navicerts would be granted to Vichy's ships to permit their passage through the blockade.

Junior Board Gets 2,000 Books For Army as Drive Opens Here

WINNING CADET CAPTAIN HONORED—Lyle O'Rourke, chairman of the Junior Chamber of Commerce committee on national defense, presents a saber to Cadet Capt. Alister Anderson, who commanded Western High School's Company K, winner of the annual high school competitive drill

The national defense committee, Junior Board of Commerce, yesterday stacked up approximately 2,000 books and magazines as a starter in its drive to get 25,000 pieces of reading material for soldiers in camps near Washington.

It was remarked at the luncheon meeting, held in the Annapolis Hotel, that many of the members may be beneficiaries of the movement. May 22 through 28 was designated as "book and magazine week," and persons wishing to contribute can leave their contributions at depositories set up in Peoples drug stores, it was announced by Lyle F. O'Rourke, committee chairman.

Alister Anderson, captain of Company K, Western High School, recently adjudged in competitive drills as heading the best local high school cadet company, was presented a saber by the board's defense group at the meeting yesterday.

Dean Elmer L. Kayser, of George Washington University, told the board that this country should make up its mind it has taken the role of balance of power "and the time for pussyfooting is over."

In this Nation's role, the only thing it can do "is to try to win," he said. He warned against a defensive point of view, against the idea that this country is proceeding simply to help England. He urged America to set its own direction. But, he said, "there are too many people overawed by an Oxford accent to think in terms of American leadership." He suggested that labor and all other groups realize that a war is going on.

"There must be aggressive mental armament along with other armaments," he said.

U. S. Decision On War 'Urgent,' British Press Says

Copyright by New York Times

London, May 22.—The News Chronicle, which was the first British newspaper to advocate United States entrance in the war, followed its original editorial today with another saying that one of its objects was to get the subject widely discussed.

Commenting on the reaction of the American press, the newspaper said:

"All we presume to do is to tell them (the American people) how real and how urgent is the need so that they will make their own choice, knowing the facts. The thing of first importance is that the people of the United States should come to understand fully and quickly the inescapable logic of the situation."

Crete Declared Vital to Defense Of Suez Area

By Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, Jr., (U. S. N., Retired)
United Press Naval Critic

The serious Axis lunge by air from Greece and the Dodecanese Islands on Crete may be a body blow to Britain. This descent upon the most important strategical Mediterranean island in British hands will give Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham's fleet a most serious task.

The job is greatly complicated by Britain's air inferiority, which has caused the withdrawal of British fighting planes from Crete. The Navy is left to fight alone without the support of an air arm, except for the assistance which British long-distance bombers can give from Egypt or other Eastern Mediterranean bases, or from aircraft carriers of the fleet.

Together with Cyprus, Crete is at a vital point guarding the British naval bases at Alexandria and Port Said from Nazi air attacks. The winning of Crete by German air and land power would be a stinging blow at the British naval control of the eastern Mediterranean and the Suez Canal. The loss of that island to Britain would open up the Suez area to intensive air attacks in considerable force, which, in the weakened air defense of the British fleet, might readily contribute to the total loss of British naval power there.

Attack Nicely Timed

This attack in force upon Crete has been timed simultaneously with the Axis moves along the north coast of Africa toward Egypt, and the assault by air through Syria, and shows the great importance that Hitler places upon the taking of Crete as an opening wedge in his air attacks upon Admiral Cunningham's fleet. These attacks of Hitler, of course, are all linked to an eventual invasion of England and the Battle of the Atlantic.

Considering the importance of Crete to the British naval control in the Eastern Mediterranean, the number of British troops there must be considerable. A certain part of the army evacuated from Greece may have been sent to Africa, but a larger part must have been retained in Crete to defend the island in anticipation of just such an assault as has been made upon it by German air-borne troops. The method employed by Germany is an old story. First a heavy bombing attack with many planes to soften up the garrisons, and then an invasion by air transport and gliders.

Crete is about 160 miles long with an average width of 40 miles. The area is about 6,400 square miles. The British Isles are 15 times that size.

May Be Yardstick

In the British Isles there are at least 2,000,000 trained British soldiers. In Crete there are probably not more than 50,000 troops. To be as well defended as the British Isles there should be at least 130,000 troops in Crete.

The assault on Crete should give Germany some measure of the difficult task of invading England. If Germany succeeds in taking Crete, in spite of Admiral Cunningham's fleet and the air force, Hitler will be encouraged in his plan to invade the British Isles. It may well be a trial and rehearsal.

It is reported that the Italian fleet is ferrying troops to Crete. That such a move would be insisted upon by Hitler, in spite of the reluctance of the Italians, is most likely. The Italians, if they have repaired their damaged battleships, would have a formidable force of six battleships, two being new and of high speed, 1 cruisers, 60 destroyers and 80 submarines. This number of Italian warships would not be a match for Admiral Cunningham's fleet imbued as it is with the offensive spirit, and if the two fleets should meet in the neighborhood of Crete, we can look forward to witnessing an overwhelming British victory on the sea.

Menace to Fleet

There is a menace to Admiral Cunningham's fleet if the French fleet should be suddenly joined to the Italian fleet in the attempt to land troops on Crete. The French fleet could bring a reinforcement to the Italians of at least two battleships, one aircraft carrier, 14 cruisers, 3 destroyers and 60 submarines. It can be counted upon that Hitler will bring upon Vichy all possible pressure to obtain the French naval reinforcement in time to join the attack on Crete.

Casey Urges Cooperation At End of War

By the Associated Press

New York, May 22.—Richard G. Casey, Australian Minister to the United States, said today he believed it would be "just as essential" for the American and British peoples to work together after the war although it would be more difficult.

In a speech prepared for the Advertising Club of New York, Casey said that standing in the way of postwar collaboration were "historic misunderstandings between Britain and America" and a "distorted" view held by some here "that Britain has no democracy worth the name—and that she sits at ease and exploits the British Empire for her own profit—in other words, that Britain represents something that runs counter to the American ideal."

But, he said, "if we wrap ourselves up in the Union Jack and you wrap yourselves up in the Stars and Stripes—if we continue, as in the past, to perpetuate the acute any exclusive forms of individual nationalism—then I, for one, become very pessimistic about the future, not only of our respective countries, but about the world as a whole."

After the war, Casey said, "we will all be in various degrees of exhaustion—physical, material, financial and economic.

Suggesting "there must be a close relation between the volume of consumption and the volume of employment," Casey urged as a peace aim raising the standard of living and of consumption of the peoples.

British Plane Forced Hess To Bale Out

By the Associated Press

London, May 22.—Rudolf Hess, the runaway Deputy Fuehrer of Germany, bailed out of his Messerschmitt May 10 after hot pursuit by an R. A. F. Defiant fighting plane, Air Secretary Sir Archibald Sinclair told the House of Commons today.

The Sinclair statement, one of the most revealing official statements so far on the Hess case, thus contained a possible explanation of the bullet holes which the British found in the tail of Hess' wrecked Messerschmitt.

The British Defiant was "hot on the trail" of the Messerschmitt, following it in the darkness, when Hess bailed out, Sinclair said. He did not say, however, whether the Defiant fired on the Messerschmitt.

The Duke of Hamilton, premier Scottish peer and R. A. F. squadron leader, for whom Hess is said to have asked when he was picked up injured from his parachute jump, never met the deputy fuehrer before the night he confronted Hess as a prisoner of war, the air secretary said.

He declared that Hamilton, 38-year-old "sporting duke," did not even "recognize the prisoner" when he faced him after obtaining leave from his R. A. F. station.

This statement further heightened the mystery of Hess' coming, one of the German versions of the affair was that Hess hoped to make contact with Hamilton to further a hallucinatory peace plan.

There were reports following this that Hamilton had met Hess before the war on trips to Germany, notably the Olympic games in 1936.

There had been British reports that Hess was in correspondence with Hamilton before the flight to Scotland. Sinclair denied this.

"When Deputy Fuehrer Hess came down with an airplane in Scotland on May 10 he gave a false name and asked to see the Duke of Hamilton," the secretary said.

"The Duke of Hamilton, being appraised by authorities, visited the prisoner in a hospital.

"Hess then revealed for the first time his true identity, saying that he had seen the duke when he was at the Olympic Games at Berlin in 1936.

"The duke did not recognize the prisoner and had never met the deputy fuehrer."

Cheers greeted this passage.

When Hess and Hamilton ended their interview the R. A. F. officer flew to England, Sinclair said, and gave a full report of what had passed to Prime Minister Churchill.

Asked by a member when the people of Britain and the United States might expect an official statement "as to what's behind the whole Hess affair," Sinclair replied:

"That's not a question for me to answer."

"Sunkist" LEMONS

LEMONS are shipped the country over in one standard size crate—the size, the weight and content of which, regardless of packer, has not been changed in years.

LEMONS are graded by size and known to the trade by the number of each size accommodated in this standard crate.

LEMON grading is so consistent that these standard crate content numbers are accepted market valuations—252's (extra large), 300's (large), 360's and 432's (medium), 490's and 540's and 588's (small).

LEMONS in large sizes being limited in supply are not always available. Small sizes are generally not stocked by reliable markets. The medium sizes make up the great bulk of lemon sales.

LEMON prices reduced to simple arithmetic clearly indicate that the "by the dozen" prices at Your Giant represent the most economical LEMON buys.

The Wrong Way

However vigorously we disagree with the views of Charles A. Lindbergh and the America First Committee, there is a distinctly unhealthy twist to developments in Philadelphia in connection with Mr. Lindbergh's scheduled speech there on May 29. He has been denied the use of the historic Academy of Music, chiefly on the ground that his followers are haters of democracy. Moreover, the committee's bid for paid trolley and bus displays has been turned down because the subject is "too controversial." And two local radio stations claim to have found a provision in the broadcasters' code which obliges them to refuse advertising time.

All of this, we submit, is entirely satisfactory to cynical Nazi propagandists. They will exploit it as proof that this country's vaunted freedom of speech is just another shibboleth to be discarded at will. Time and again, when evidence of suppression over here has cropped up in the news, the Nazis have made the most of it. They lampooned the controversy over Marian Anderson's right to sing in Constitution Hall. They caricatured the smear tactics used in the last Presidential campaign. And they have consistently sneered at the wrangling over Mr. Lindbergh's views, and at sporadic efforts to silence him, as proof of democracy's incipient breakdown.

No, the antidote for the ostrich-like isolation which the America First people advocate is definitely not censorship. Let them have their say—if there are those who will listen. Not to permit it comes under the heading of flattering the enemy by imitation.

Enemies Within

Democracy has never had greater need than it has today to purge its official organizations of Nazi, Fascist and Communist elements. Most of the countries that have succumbed to totalitarian aggression have been weakened by enemies within their own official ranks. Certainly no nation that is still master of its own destiny can afford to harbor subversive elements within its own government. So there will be a great deal of sympathy with the efforts of the Dies Committee to expose Communists who are in the Federal service.

Because of the importance of this undertaking much of the testimony heard during the last two days has been disappointing. The committee listened to reports from two undercover agents. Both repeated much talk they had heard. They raised implications that many Communists are holding Government jobs and that some are fighting the Administration's foreign policy. But the actual evidence offered for the record in support of this thesis was very flimsy.

Some serious charges emerge from this testimony. For example, a "responsible official" of the Interior Department is said to have told one of the investigators that the Bituminous Coal Commission is "loaded from top to bottom with Communists." Unsupported charges of this sort carry little conviction. At the moment reflections appear to have been cast upon an official agency without any concrete evidence to back them up. Fortunately, however, the name of the official who made that remark has been given to the committee in executive session. Further fact finding is obviously called for. And Secretary Ickes is quite properly urging employes of the commission to demand an opportunity of replying to accusations involving their loyalty.

We thoroughly sympathize with Representative Voorhis' complaint about casting suspicion upon an entire governmental agency without "explicit evidence." The committee can serve no useful purpose by broadcasting hearsay or innuendo. One reason why it has encountered so much opposition is its lack of judgment in distinguishing between vague reports and substantiated evidence. In criticizing the committee for this failing, however, no one should forget that its task is at best a very difficult one. Sometimes it is impossible to determine whether a person is a Communist or Nazi. Subversive groups frequently work through ignorant sympathizers and others who are too shrewd actually to become affiliated with the party organization. It is not merely the "party members" in official positions, moreover, who are a source of danger in these critical times. Fellow travelers, who follow the party line, should certainly be known and if they are not actually eliminated from the Government service they should be denied confidential information and kept under surveillance.

Daedalus Returns

This war has been full of oddities and ironies, but surely one of the strangest of all is that the many-fabled island of Crete should have become the scene of the first aerial invasion by means of gliders. For it may well have been there that the glider was first conceived and employed—not to get into Crete but to get out of it. At any rate we have the legend of the artificer, Daedalus, who was taken to the island by Minos, the King, to design and complete the Labyrinth of the Minotaur, associated also in fable with the names of Ariadne, daughter of the King, and her lover Theseus.

Fearful lest his secret be betrayed, Minos, after the immemorial habit of tyrants, confined Daedalus and his son, Icarus, in the very prison they had built. "Though Minos rules the sea and the land," said Daedalus, "he does not rule the air." So he fashioned wings for himself and Icarus, wherewith they escaped from the island. But Icarus flew too near the sun. When his wings melted he fell into the sea and perished. Daedalus landed safely in Sicily—a flight that would have been about four times as far as the flight of the Nazi gliders from the Peloponnesus to Canea!

It is by no means impossible that the Daedalus legend, like so many Greek legends, has some basis in fact. Nor is it impossible that the mechanical wings ascribed to Daedalus and Icarus were some kind of gliders or at least glorified kites. For in the past four decades archeologists have uncovered astonishing evidences of technological development in that shadowy and mysterious Minoan world of prehistoric Crete. Indeed, in many respects this development was farther advanced among the Minoans than in any subsequent civilization, except our own. The Minoan palaces had comforts, like sanitary plumbing, unknown to the most luxurious Egyptians, Greeks, or Romans, or for that matter to our own great-grandfathers. There is no longer any doubt that what the Greeks meant by the Labyrinth was the marvelous palace at Knossos, which was excavated in our own times by Sir Arthur Evans. It is one of the most amazing pieces of architecture in all the world. To the mind which conceived and planned the palace the designing and construction of a glider or man-bearing kite might have seemed a relatively easy problem.

Knossos was the capital of a great maritime empire, greater perhaps than those of Tyre and Carthage which succeeded it. The Minoan trading galleys are believed to have gone far beyond the Pillars of Hercules to fetch back tin and other cargoes from Britain and other lands afterwards unknown to the most adventurous of Greeks. Restorations of lately discovered wall paintings and statuary, and excavated artifacts, indicate an art that, at its best period, was almost as beautiful as any other known. What the Minoan Cretans possessed in the way of a literature we may never know, for no one has been able to read or translate the records and fragments found in Minoan heiroglyphs or in the late Minoan alphabet writing. Nor, probably, will it ever be known how the Minoan civilization perished—whether it was overwhelmed by the armies of the rival Aegean empire centered about Mycenae or by the people that Homer calls the Achaeans, or by the Dorians. But overwhelmed it was and obliterated. According to such authorities as Evans and the late Prof. Breasted, there were some who escaped before the final cataclysm. And they insist that the Philistines of the Bible could have been no other than a colony of these Minoan refugees.

Quisling's Failure

A year has elapsed since the Nazis conquered Norway. But the people of that country have not abandoned the struggle against the conquerors or reconciled themselves to the "new order." They continue to fight on with the weapons of passive resistance.

How effective their struggle has been can be gauged by two recent developments. The first is a sharp curtailment in the powers of Maj. Vidkun Quisling and his pro-Nazi party, the Nasjonal Samling, through which Hitler has sought to rule the Norwegian people. Despite the support he received from the Nazis, Quisling failed to win over more than an infinitesimal fraction of Norwegians. His efforts have met with opposition at every turn. Now the Nazis have apparently decided that he and his gang are more of a liability than an asset to the Third Reich. For that reason, no doubt, the German commissioner for Norway, Josef Terboven, has issued a decree under which the German authorities will themselves take over the job of organizing Norwegian life and the country's resources.

At the same time Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Gestapo, has found it necessary to visit Oslo. This suggests that the opposition to German rule in Norway has become so strong that the Nazis are now compelled to employ more repressive measures. But it is unlikely that the spirit of the Norwegian people can be broken by such methods. What Quisling failed to do, Himmler will not succeed in doing. The Norwegians have no intention of coming to terms with their conquerors. They remain intensely loyal to their monarch and to the cause of freedom which he and their government are actively supporting. And the fact that the rule of Norway will now be more directly and openly in German hands is likely to intensify rather than destroy their will to resist.

Economy Gesture

In suggesting to Congress that $109,000,000 be cut from the WPA appropriation recommended in his budget message the President is making a very ineffective economy gesture. Since he recently asked for an additional $60,000,000 for the NYA, the net reduction sought in work-relief funds would be just $49,000,000—quite a gap between that sum and the $1,000,000,000 cut in nondefense outlays suggested by Secretary Morgenthau.

If there is ever going to be a propitious time for the Federal Government to abandon its costly make-work projects, that time surely is at hand. In many industries acute labor shortages have already developed, while in all parts of the country employment opportunities are expanding so rapidly that the problem of chronic unemployment will soon cease to be troublesome. Of course, there are still some people without jobs. That is always true. But a large proportion of those who are unable to find employment under present conditions undoubtedly should be classified as unemployable. And unemployables have never been regarded as properly eligible for work-relief jobs. The WPA was organized ostensibly to give emergency jobs to employable persons. In any case the improvement in business conditions due to defense spending has enabled many families to take care of unemployed members who formerly would have had to depend upon outside assistance. Local governments are also in stronger financial position and are better able to resume relief loads that were shifted to the Federal Government when the WPA was established.

The Post has repeatedly urged abolition of the WPA, as soon as conditions would permit, and restriction of Federal relief to grants-in-aid for hard-pressed communities. Such a change would not only make possible a really substantial cut in nondefense outlays; it would also remove the Federal Government from a field of activity where it is distinctly an interloper. The country cannot be saved from financial disaster by merely lopping off a few million dollars from the WPA appropriation.

Hawaii Blacks Out

Comparatively unnoticed in the civilian defense news of the week was the blackout observed last Tuesday night in the Hawaiian Islands. Here in the East the event was overshadowed by the appointment of Mayor LaGuardia to head the new Office of Civilian Defense, which will supervise citizen training throughout the country. But as he starts his new job, the mayor might well take time to study the close integration of military and civilian defense efforts which appears to have existed in Hawaii for some time.

Long before Germany invaded Poland the islands were on the alert—the "enemy," of course, being Japan. Civilians in the Paradise of the Pacific have learned to accustom themselves to military maneuvers, to get "the feel" of what life would be like should the islands be subjected to attack or blockade. Many of Hawaii's residents have been instructed in ways of protecting vital centers—power plants, reservoirs, docks. Considering Hawaii's strategic role in the Pacific, their chance of having to use such training is much greater than that of, say, the residents of Sauk Center. But, as Mayor LaGuardia has pointed out, the OCD program will proceed on the theory that, however remote the likelihood of continental attack, civilians must be prepared for any eventuality. Obviously, adequate preparation calls for military and civilian coordination on a scale as yet nonexistent, except, perhaps, in Hawaii.

PHOENIX

Out of the shambles and the mire
Out of the hatred and desire
Arises sacrificial fire

Fed by the peoples who were proud,
Who wear their conquest as a shroud,
And hide their shame behind a cloud

Of silence. Only distant smoke
Speaks of the pity they evoke
From trembling lips, with words that choke.

For evil often is God's test,
To burn the dross and leave the best
Of what is fine and holiest

Until the purifying flame
Burns out the evil and the shame
And gives the people back their name.

Equal Treatment

The National Nonpartisan Council on Public Affairs of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority wishes to commend you for your editorial of May 6, captioned "Equal Treatment." It is particularly important that the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries, with which Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes is identified, should have the support of all Americans, especially skilled workers identified with labor organization movements. There is, and perhaps always will be, a dearth of skilled workers in a country such as ours, which has no real apprentice system. It is possible to go "on the job" and not find a single apprentice among hundreds of brick and stone masons erecting our large buildings.

If the inadequacy of apprenticeship training is evident in times of peace, how much more is it so at this critical period in the world's history. Labor union workers and skilled mechanics should realize that when they object to Negro craftsmen as their fellow workers they not only deny these workers a democratic right to earn a living, but that they are failing to pay the debt they owe to the one man in this country who did more than anyone else to bridge the gap between the unskilled worker and the journeyman craftsman by providing a type of education to take the place of the apprenticeship system. It was the life work of Booker T. Washington, the great Negro industrial educator, that gave the first impetus to technical and industrial education in our public school system. Labor and skilled laborers all over the country owe him a debt which they might well repay by withdrawing all objections to working side by side with members of his race. NORMA E. BOYD.

Folk Festival

I want to express my sincere appreciation for the part you had in making the Eighth Annual National Folk Festival possible. I was privileged to sponsor a group from the Old Fiddlers' Convention, Galax, Va., and I was pleased beyond my fondest expectations with the entire program.

"Uncle" Alec Dunford, Charlie Higgins and J. C. Pierce, representing talent from the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, just can't say enough good things for all the courtesies extended them, and I feel the same myself.

Trusting that you may continue to sponsor the National Folk Festivals and that each year may surpass all preceding events, I remain,
MRS. R. C. BOWIE.
Secretary, Old Fiddlers' Convention.

Signs Of The Times

I want to be a picket,
And with the pickets stand;
Upon my chest a ticket,
A flag within my hand.
Some march for higher wages,
And some for lower rents;
Or war by quicker stages,
Or peace, or just defense;
Some wish to banish taxes,
Some seek the dole for all;
One picket hates the Axis,
Another, Churchill's gall.
But every lad and lassie
Displays a placard classy
Which I must dodge about.
Am I the only dumb one
In this land where speech is free?
Why can't I think of someone
Who has been "Unfair to Me?"

German Troops In Finland?

In today's issue of The Post it is reported from Berne, Switzerland, that "there are now nearly five divisions of German troops in Finland."

This bit of news is a new version of the rumors spread about four weeks ago indicating that German troops, 12,000 men, had landed in Finland. This story of Moscow Pravda of April 30, denied by Finnish and American sources, seems now to have been swelled into new proportions. The fact remains, however, that the Finnish government is in complete ignorance of the presence of five German divisions in Finland.

In view of the harm rumors of this kind might, if not repudiated, inflict on Finland, I venture to ask you to bring to the knowledge of your readers the lack of foundation for said rumors. Yours very truly,
URHO TOIVOLA.
Counselor of Finnish Legation.

Our Draft Army

A recent visit to Fort Meade impressed me with the surging vitality and superb morale of the new American Army which has been created in a few short months. That is a fine bunch of young fellows over there at Meade. They look to be in perfect physical condition, hard as nails, intelligent, ready for any job they get.

Just a few weeks or months ago they were for the most part, probably white-collar men in commercial or Government offices, salesmen, insurance adjusters, clerks, statisticians, law students. Some of them were mechanics, truck drivers, bus operators, farm boys. It would be difficult today to tell at first glance what their previous occupations were. With few exceptions they all look as though they had had a season or two in lumber camps.

Morale—it's there in abundance—courtesy, cheerfulness on all sides. Even the boys in denim, those who went A. W. O. L., take their punishment cheerfully. I saw some of them sweeping company streets under guard. They looked as though it was a joke, even if it was on them.

Let the doubting Thomases, the Calamity Janes, the Lindberghs, and all the rest who thought they could sell America short, go over to Fort Meade or any of the other training centers for our red-blooded young citizens, and see once again the real spirit of this democracy of ours.

Officers who take pride in their men, and men who respect and trust their officers—that's the spirit of Fort Meade as I saw it. That's the spirit of America.

Deserved Tribute

Today, May 22, being Maritime Day, it is appropriate to emphasize that one of the most effective achievements in national defense and foreign commerce has been the Maritime Commission's creation of the new American merchant fleet.

In 1938 Admiral Land, chairman of the Commission, and his associates, firmly backed by President Roosevelt, far-sightedly and boldly adopted a program of new merchant ship construction. The ships began to come off the ways when they were most needed after the outbreak of war.

To date 198 ships have been contracted for, 90 have been completed, of which all but 7 are in operation. The balance are being delivered ahead of schedule. Not only in numbers but in quality the program is exceptional. The new fast cargo liners of the C-1, C-2 and C-3 types (some of which have passenger accommodations) are among the finest ships ever built anywhere. A C-2 freighter, for example, is nearly equal in performance to two old 10-knot freighters, due to its higher speed, larger capacity and greater economy of operation.

This program has given new cargo ships to American trade routes which must be maintained in order to bring in vastly increased amounts of urgently needed defense materials and to preserve communication with Latin American and other markets.

But beyond this the program helped to make possible the sale, by American steamship lines and the Maritime Commission, of more than 1,000,000 tons of older American ships to Britain, Canada and friendly neutrals. Most of this shipping upon transfer to such foreign registry thus became available for carriage of defense material and other merchandise to Britain.

As a further undertaking the Maritime Commission has just begun another important program providing for construction of an emergency fleet of 312 ships known as "Ugly Ducklings."

Defends Cooperatives

In glancing at the front page of my Post, May 17, before leaving to attend the General Federation of Women's Clubs Convention at Atlantic City, I was surprised to note the story about the requisitioning of the membership roster of the Bookshop of Washington by the Dies Committee.

I was especially interested because my own name is on that list, as it is on that of every other group that has been a member of the Washington Cooperative League. My name is on those lists because I believe thoroughly in "cooperation" as the watchword of the future, just as "competition" has been the watchword of the past.

The Mrs. Putnam mentioned in the story is not well known to me but I have seen her several times at various cooperative meetings and she had the appearance of being a very fine woman, indeed. If she was hysterical or behaved in an unladylike manner, it must have been because, for some reason, she does not trust the Dies Committee to respect the civil liberties of American citizens. Could that be possible? Has the Dies Committee ever done anything to warrant that? I do not know.

I have read that Germany closed all the cooperatives and put to death the labor union leaders as well as the communists. Is that what our country is planning to do? Do we already have a gestapo in America? If so, then what has become of our freedom and democracy?

Lastly, may I ask if it is wrong to believe nowadays in anything so Christ-like as cooperation, and right to stand up for "competition" which has logically flowered in the bloody mess the world is in today.

Mr. Bell's Gadget Again

It would be my guess that every sensitive soul has at one time or another experienced the same violent emotions toward the telephone that Eugene Pharo described in this column recently. In fact, I can't understand why more people don't rip the telephone instrument from its mooring and pound the everlasting tar out of it. If I were a woman, and not a mouse, I should have done it myself a few months ago.

It was a holiday weekend. We were especially anxious to spend it quietly and alone. I wanted to read and clip old newspapers, and to take it easy generally, Beatrice, my sister simply desired to emulate some honest victim of encephalitis lethargica for about 48 hours. So we gave out the news that we were leaving town, the information being carefully directed into channels that would carry to the ears of a particular band of vultures who have a habit of swooping down on us for weekends.

You know the type—they take possession of all available sleeping space, all bath towels, and all stray fowl lying cold in the icebox. And for reward they take you sightseeing. . . .

The holiday dawned gray and chilly, perfect weather for staying indoors. Ten a. m. found us in bed, covers snug around our ears—but, alas, not snug enough to keep out the piercing ring of the telephone. With difficulty I unmuffled my head and said, "They've arrived early. It was too much to expect them to believe our story."

"Well, we don't have to answer," said Beatrice, "that ought to prove we were telling the truth."

So we lay there while the phone shrilled and shrieked like an evil bird that hated us and couldn't bear to see us happy. Then came a respite—a beautiful silence during which we relaxed and drifted off again . . . albeit to a troubled slumber.

Br-r-r-ing, br-r-r-r-ing, br-r-r-r-ing!! said the phone. This new attack shot us both bolt upright in bed. "It might not be them," said Beatrice inelegantly. "Maybe we should answer it." She was losing her nerve.

"Impossible," I said, "if we're not home to the goose, we're not home to the gander." I pulled the pillow over my head to deaden the mad ringing that was now shaking the rafters at 2-minute intervals.

To say that the ringing was also beginning to get me would be the year's prize understatement. I felt like a prisoner in Bedlam, and there was nothing much for the prisoner to do but eat a hearty breakfast. So I rose, bathed and went to the breakfast table, and there I found Beatrice with a wild light in her eye, drinking her third cup of black coffee. She insisted desperately, "I tell you it might not be them; it is probably my friend Alma."

Suddenly, I too wanted terribly to know that it was only Alma—a harmless, easily repressible young woman. The ringing might be stopped, the day might still be saved, and a fragment of our sanity salvaged. I therefore made a witless proposal: "Call Alma and let's find out."

Alma was not at home, but that outgoing call spelled complete and final ruin. We found that heretofore the telephone had only been teasing. Now it fairly leaped into serious action. Straightaway it gave off one long, steady, eardrum-splitting, soul-shattering blast that lasted full 5 minutes by the clock. This was followed by other rings of diverse kinds: the long, all-of-a-piece variety, the short staccato type, and the full-bodied clarion, loud and shrill.

There was no longer any escape, we had given ourselves away, that evil instrument knew all, and was intent upon making us talk, upon breaking our spirit. The silences became far less frequent and, when they came, were short and fraught with a sort of terror. . . .

Now that the murder was out, to save what was left of our nerves we decided we'd have to get out too. To our raw sensibilities every sound in the hallway seemed to be footsteps leading straight to our door, and as we fastened the windows and adjusted the blinds to indicate "nobody lives here any more," and started hastily dressing for the getaway, the worst happened. There came a knock on the door.

Should we brazen it out? If we kept very still, the knocker might knock thrice and go upon his way. If I could have controlled the chattering of my teeth, and if the radio had not been turned on, I believe we should have stood our ground. But since I am a mouse and not a woman at all, I went to the door, opened the metal peephole and looked straight into the insolent eyes of a big slugger dressed in dungarees.

"I'm from the telephone company," he said.

"Well, go away, we don't want you," I yammered, "we were out of the house and just came back."

"The company has received a report that this number can't be reached by phone; I'll have to come in." It was the voice of authority and could not be denied. He came in forthwith, took the telephone apart, put it together again, and picked up his tools.

"What was wrong with it?" I asked in a small voice.

"I wouldn't know," he said, "but you might try answering it when it rings."

We returned to the house at 10 p. m. As we were dejectedly eating a late snack, a familiar sound broke the silence. "That, my dear Beatrice, would be the telephone, I think. Would you like to answer it?"

"No, I wouldn't," said Beatrice, "but if I don't I shall soon be a raving maniac." She answered, and it was the weekend guests. They had arrived late, they explained, and would make it up to us by staying an extra day. . . .

There was a time when a man's home was his castle; it was a retreat, a haven of rest, an ivory tower, a sanctuary. He could build a high wall and a moat around it and keep the world out. But Mr. Bell and his little gadget have changed all that for good (as is admitted), and for evil (as has been testified). And the evil is rapidly getting no better. Television for the masses is just around the corner.

A Case History

By Ernest K. Lindley

Plight Of The Small Manufacturers

HERE is a brief case history which illustrates two of the most serious criticisms of the direction of our defense production program. It is the experience of the head of a Midwestern manufacturer of brass, aluminum and zinc castings and stampings.

LINDLEY

The firm has 480 employes, including an engineering staff and 16 tool and die makers, and about 200 machine tools. Its normal business is making such things as parts for refrigerators. The firm is in excellent financial condition. Until recently it was working around the clock—some departments on three shifts and others on two ten-hour shifts.

SOME MONTHS ago its president sized up the dimensions of the defense program and decided they would put a dent in his regular business. He said that there probably would not be enough brass, zinc and aluminum to meet all civilian needs. He suspected also that considerable amounts of steel would have to be diverted from civilian to military channels. Some of his business friends belittled his fears, but as the days passed and it became harder to get the metals he needed, he set out to try to get some defense business.

Knowing a little about the Government and the defense agencies which are completely unknown to many small manufacturers—he lost no time in learning what steps he should take.

He was told to offer his services as a subcontractor to the large concerns which had the big defense orders. He was informed that the policy of OPM was to bring these smaller facilities into use by encouraging the big concerns to subcontract parts.

SO HE WROTE to a selected list of prime contractors—500 in all—stating exactly what his plant was set up to do. He did not get even one serious noble, much less a subcontract.

He filed with the Defense Contract Service Office in Detroit a complete survey of his plant. All he got there was a suggestion that he write to the other regional offices, making sure that he told them he had already been in touch with the Detroit office, since otherwise his letters would be forwarded to Detroit.

Finally the Detroit office invited him to submit bids on two fuses for the British. Neither was of a type that previously had been manufactured in this country. Of the 200 machines in his plant, 8—all automatic screw machines—could be used in making the fuses. He submitted a bid, but with it the statement that he could not produce the fuses unless he also got business to keep the rest of his plant going.

MEANWHILE, the real pinch has come in supplies of metals. He can get almost no brass, zinc and aluminum. His refrigerator-making clients have realized that they are going to have to find substitutes—including substitutes for a large amount of steel—or else suspend production.

Last week our Exhibit X had to lay off his night shift. His 16 highly-skilled tool and die makers are idle.

He has machines and men of exactly the type and training desperately needed for defense production. But they are not being used. And unless they are put to work quickly, he will have to suspend business entirely and let his organization go to pieces.

Early this week he arrived in Washington to make the rounds of the defense agencies—the Army, the Navy, and OPM. He received sympathetic hearings, but, up to the time this was written, no action.

BILLIONS of dollars worth of defense orders have been poured forth, largely into big corporations. Huge new plants are being built from the bottom up at a cost of hundreds of millions of dollars. The machine tool industry is staggering under a record-breaking load of orders.

Here is a plant ready to go. It has the machines, the trained men, the engineers and management. It doesn't need a dollar from the Government, either for expansion or working capital. It can make any number of items important to defense without adding even so much as one machine to its equipment, and with a few new machines here and there its scope could be greatly expanded.

It is organized and manned for two and three-shift operation, while many other producers are still working only one shift.

It wants defense business, and has been searching for it. In fact, if it doesn't get it, it may go out of business forever.

If our defense production were efficiently planned, this plant would have been sought out, surveyed, and asked to undertake defense work months ago. But for two months it has been knocking at the door, asking for a chance to produce for defense needs.

IT IS CAUGHT on one side by the failure of OPM and the Army and Navy to mobilize quickly and effectively such smaller manufacturers. On the other it is caught by the shortages of metals for civilian use—shortages which are far more acute than most of the businessmen brought in to direct the defense production program had the wit to foresee. The reassuring statements that there would be enough aluminum, enough magnesium, and enough steel have all been pricked by events. There is not enough of any of them, and not enough zinc and brass.

Our Exhibit X is confident that there are hundreds, perhaps several thousands, of small manufacturers who are getting caught in this double squeeze. Many are less well-equipped than he is to move immediately into defense production. But, for lack of metal for civilian use, they will have to suspend operation and disband their organizations. Whether they would ever come to life again is doubtful.

French Seize '2 U. S. Ships' At Marseille, Germans Say

By the Associated Press

New York, May 22.—The German radio, heard by N. B. C., said tonight that the Paris press was reporting "two United States ships" were held in Marseille as a reprisal for action taken by United States authorities in putting French ships under protective custody in American ports.

No details were given.

No United States ships are known to be in French ports and it was considered likely that this report referred to the French ships Ile de Re and Leopold L. D., sent to Marseille with supplies by special arrangement with the United States Government.

The Ile de Re, 5,104 tons, was formerly the Lomar, a United States ship sold to France before her defeat last summer. The Leopold L. D., 5,287 tons, always has been of French registry.

Officials Here Doubt U. S. Ships Are There

State Department officials in Washington said last night that so far as was known there are no American ships in French ports.

They added that the Paris press reports must refer to the Ile de Re and Leopold which were loaded with 15,000 tons of flour—a gift from the American people to the hungry people of unoccupied France—and sailed through the British blockade under an agreement between the United States, Great Britain and France.

One guarantee given by France, it was said, was that the ships would return to the United States immediately after discharging their cargo.

While they were still in Marseille, however, the United States placed French vessels in American ports under "protective surveillance."

In informed quarters it was said that no more food shipments would be made to unoccupied France until details of Franco-German "collaboration" had been clarified and the two vessels returned here as agreed upon in the original arrangement.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

'MID WAR'S alarms there may be light entertainment in the news that William Green's gangster friend, George Browne, a member of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, has reappointed Willie Bioff, the old Chicago brothel keeper, as his ambassador plenipotentiary in the movie union racket in Hollywood. Brother Bioff, as he is known in the higher councils of Labor with a capital L, bears the title of M. H., or Master of the Harlots, conferred on him by the appellate court of the State of Illinois, and is at present under indictment for evading his Federal income tax on $100,000, which he either extorted or accepted as a bribe from Joe Schneck, the movie magnate, himself under conviction for charging off his social expenditures as business expenses.

The trial of the distinguished Chicago M. H. on this Federal charge was to have started in Los Angeles recently, but has been postponed until September, and meantime the criminal, who admittedly used his official power as union bargaining agent to obtain money from the employers' bargaining agent, will render patriotic service in facilitating the preparation of films of a high moral tone for the training of the soldiers of the new Army.

ALL RESPECTABLE citizens in the unions of the A. F. of L. and particularly the cameramen, stagehands and projectionists, doubtless will rejoice at this compliment of one of their leaders. And, naturally, the Chicago underworld of vice and other crime will interpret the move as affirmative recognition of their group, for Brother Bioff, M. H., is an old racketeer of the historic Capone mob, and Brother Browne himself has been a gangman for many years. In fact, Brother Browne, of the executive council of the A. F. of L. and one of Brother Will Green's intimates, only recently intervened to compel the members of a small local union of projectionmen in East St. Louis to readmit to membership another of his criminal friends, Clyde A. Weston, who is under sentence of the Federal court to serve five years in prison and pay a $10,000 fine for racketeering at the expense of another local in St. Louis proper. Brother Weston and another criminal, named John P. Nick, were convicted together after a long and dangerous fight upon them by a few respectable rank and file workers of the St. Louis union, in the course of which Brother Green threw his support to the underworld. Brother Nick was an old hand in the Browne union racket, having risen to the office of first international vice president before he finally was nailed, with Weston, for using the union to extort money in various ways.

It might be of interest, also, that the Browne - Bioff - Weston - Nick racket, which is further adorned by the person of Nick Dean, the Chicago stickup man, as another of Browne's plenipotentiaries, has a distinguished ally in the United States Congress. This is William T. Schulte, a Democratic statesman from the Chicago suburb of Hammond, Ind., who has been a member of the union for 30 years and whose residence there, naturally, has thrown him into long and intimate association with Gangster Browne.

THE EMINENT Hoosier statesman is thoroughly acquainted with the affairs of the racket and its dominant characters, as he openly declared when, at the convention of hoodlum's old home week, of June, 1936, in Kansas City, he eulogized his comrade, Gangster Browne.

"This old ship of ours was rocking; we were bound we knew not where," the Congressman told the assembled gorillas and working stiffs, referring to the depression and the opportune demise, by gunfire, of Brother Browne's predecessor, Tommy Maloy, who had been knocked off in Chicago. "It was a dark hour. In Louisville (where Browne succeeded Maloy) the man did not seek the job. The job sought the man. And only through his guiding spirit. Oh, there may be some who would find fault—some people will find fault with Santa Claus—but I want to tell you—and President Green will verify this statement—no other organization has weathered the storm as we have weathered it under the leadership of that great man." (Loud and continued applause.)

Brother Green then indorsed the remarks of Representative Schulte, saying that Brother Browne's racket stood second to none in the A. F. of L. and assuring the assembled hoodlums, bootleggers, gunmen and M. H.'s that he had gained "renewed strength and courage to go forth and battle for you and the working men and women of the Nation."

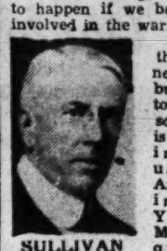
New Deal Objectives

By Mark Sullivan

Foreign And Domestic Issues

IT GROWS MORE likely that America will move father toward the war. This is in part because the war comes closer to us, in the geographical sense. It reached out a finger last week to the French islands in the West Indies and elsewhere near our shores, through the submission of France to Germany.

Because of this and other developments, more and more people believe that America will move farther toward participation in the war. More and more persons believe this, or want this, or are resigned to this. For their state of mind, there is much justification. It is a tenable point of view. Time and events tend to increase it. Yet those who come to this state of mind should do so with their eyes open, with awareness of the things that are likely to happen if we become further involved in the war.



SULLIVAN

Some of these things do not need to happen, but are likely to. A clue to some of them is to be found in a phrase used by Mr. Arthur Krock in the New York Times. Mr. Krock quotes some one who charges that the New Dealers are trying "to fight two wars at the same time—the battle for Britain and the battle for the socialization of American industry."

AS THUS PUT, in this form of words, this may be regarded as a charge. But hardly any one doubts that the New Dealers have two objectives, a foreign one and a domestic one. The foreign one is the battle for Britain. To say exactly what the domestic one is might excite controversy. President Roosevelt speaks of it as—I quote from memory—extending social gains. The New Deal domestic objective is to continue and enlarge what has been their objective in the past. The nature of the objective, and also the New Dealers' success in promoting it, is suggested by the phrase occasionally heard in high quarters in Washington, "this is now a labor government."

But for the present purpose, it is not material to define exactly what the New Deal's domestic objective is—for convenience, call it socialization. It is highly important, however, to understand which objective the New Dealers place first, the foreign one or the domestic one, whether the winning of the war or what may be called socialization. Which of these objectives is primary, which secondary.

Of these two things, victory for Britain and socialization of America, which do the New Dealers want most? To answer that would ordinarily involve making a guess about what goes on in men's minds, always perilous to attempt. But in the present case there is evidence.

THERE IS evidence in the attitude of the New Dealers toward strikes. These strikes impede America's arming, and therefore impede our capacity to help Britain. If the New Dealers had one objective and one only, if they wished victory for Britain more than they wish anything else, they would oppose the strikes. That they do not, as a whole, oppose the strikes, everybody knows. On the contrary, they condone the strikes. Almost it could be said they encourage the strikes. President Roosevelt minimizes the effect of them, saying that the strikes do not seriously impede our arming. The New Dealers throw cold water on suggestions in Congress for stopping the strikes. The New Deal attitude toward the present strikes is much like their attitude toward the sitdown strikes of 1937—somewhere between condonement and encouragement.

The reason for their attitude, we can infer. It must be that they think the strikes will advance their social, domestic objective. To put it in the mildest reasonable form, the New Dealers must assume that to oppose the strikes would interfere with their domestic purpose. So they do not oppose the strikes. This, even though it is plain the strikes interfere with the foreign purpose, the winning of the war.

Is it possible to suppose that America can make a successful contribution to winning the war, if that is kept merely a secondary objective? This is a major war. Unless winning it is a major objective, it will hardly be won.

ABOUT the state of mind of the New Dealers, there is further evidence in one aspect of the strikes. Most of the strikes are for higher wages. Every such strike that has been settled, I think, has been settled on a basis of granting demands for higher wages. Now, omitting the question of the justification for higher wages, the plain effect of them is to increase likelihood of inflation. Higher wages start the upward spiral which, in its final phase, becomes inflation.

The upward spiral works thus: higher wages cause higher prices for manufactured goods. Higher prices of goods means higher prices the farmer must pay for what farmers buy. Higher prices for what farmers buy leads to demand by farmers for higher prices for food. Higher prices for food means higher cost of living. Higher cost of living leads labor to demand still higher wages. So begins another turn in the upward spiral, with inflation as the inevitable end, unless the New Dealers are willing to check the process.

In short, if America goes on toward greater and greater participation in the war, and if the New Dealers maintain their attitude, we are likely to see two consequences here at home, socialization and inflation.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 22.—After watching the operation of the Selective Service draft for nearly seven months, the American public, in a Nation-wide survey of opinion, has passed an overwhelmingly favorable verdict upon it. The sentiment of the people is almost unanimous that the first peace time draft in the history of the country has been handled fairly in their communities—a remarkable tribute to the work of the thousands of draft boards throughout the Nation.

Fewer than one in every ten persons interviewed in the survey said they thought the draft had not been fair, and their objections were largely based on personal grounds rather than on over-all policies or basic principles.

The survey, conducted among a cross-section of persons in cities, towns and farms throughout the Nation by the American Institute, put the following issue to a vote:

"Do you think the draft has been handled fairly in your community?"

Only about one person in every ten (11 per cent) expressed no opinion on the issue. The rest with opinions divided as follows:

Think Draft Has Been Handled Fairly	93%
Think It Has Not Been Handled Fairly	7

Those not satisfied with the Selective Service system criticize it on the grounds that the local draft boards are biased or partisan in their selection and too hasty in classifying men, that they draft too many married men, and that there is no consistent policy among draft boards on what to do with married men whose wives are working.

Most of the people who advance these criticisms have some specific case in mind. A middle-aged widow interviewed in Detroit by Interviewer Charles Baer objected to the drafting of her son because she had very little money to keep herself alive and because she was "going crazy from loneliness" since her son went into the Army.

A young woman in Brooklyn, the wife of a hotel executive, objected to the draft because it took an acquaintance of hers, a young dentist, who was just beginning to build up a practice "and now he has to break it up."

It is significant, however, that virtually no one interviewed in the poll thought the draft boards were not trying to do an honest or conscientious job.

Approval of the draft system is universally high in all sections of the country. Everywhere the vote is more than 91 per cent favorable. Among men of draft age taken as a group, the vote is 90 per cent favorable, only 10 per cent unfavorable.

One logical explanation for the favorable attitude may be the fact that the conscription idea was popular with the people many months before it was voted by Congress—in fact, before any major political leader had advocated it.

An Institute survey reported on June 2, 1940, showed that 50 per cent of the voters favored one-year conscription for all able-bodied young men. By June 23 the figure had jumped to 64 per cent. Congress passed the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill the following September.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Papers of Private Purkey

Dear Ma—

I am a first class marksman now and nobody is more serprised than me. You know how it is. I never saw no gun in my life before I was drafted, accept in movies and Fourth of July parades and I was as much of a good prospect as a sharpshooter as Kate Smith wood be to succeed Sonja Henie.

I was always afraid of a gun, espeshully if it was loaded. So when I got two camp and was handed a army rifle I went around for a couple months scared stiff that it wood blow up in my hands and kill somebody including me. If there was any people witch I never felt like it was Daniel Boone, Kit Carson and Buffalow Bill. I always figured that to like a gun you got to have had a sharpshooter background and none of the old snapshots in our family showed nobody with anything in his hands worse then umbrellas, golf sticks and garden rakes.

How I got to be a army marksman is funny. The skipper takes us all out in the grate open spaces and tells us we are going to have rifle practice. I am very nervus espeshully when I find my gun is going to be loaded and not with blanks. We lay on our stummicks and I am wondering who will get accidently shot first when a target comes up out of a ditch witch seems ten miles away and the job is to see if we can hit it without a bayernet charge. Well I seen it was no time to argue with the skipper and explain to him that if he dont want unnecessary bloodshed he will send me back on kitchen police detail. I get a few pointers like where the trigger is and which way you pull it for results. The target is a mile wide but it looks to me like the head of a pin.

I ask Sergeant Mooney to move to a safe position but he says he is safe as he is standing behind me witch shows what a poor idea of safety he has got. Well I close my eyes and pulls the trigger expecting to have both arms blown off and a hole in my chest. I nearly got the hole in my chest as the exploshun knocks me for a loop and I think Joe Louis has hit me a Sunday punch. When I come two and am about to apolergize and explain that I fired wild on account that my foot slipped there is loud cheering and I hear I hit the bullseye so help me. Then I fell over and the next thing I know I am a heat case with a nurse bending over and examining a sharp shooter button on my chest.

I find I got a nickname witch is Deadeye Dick. We go out for more sharpshooting soon and I am very nervus as I do not think I will ever hit no target again unless I used buckshot and the target is a elephant at arm's length.

But do not worry. If I half any trouble I am going to ask the skipper to put the target and me in a phone booth for the best results. Love, OSCAR.

P. S.—I forgot to tell you Otto Bixby my old boss, shot himself in the foot witch is good news.

Abandoned Victory

By Barnet Nover

How We Lost The Last War

HAD IT NOT BEEN for Germany's decision in 1917 to resume unrestricted submarine warfare, it is extremely doubtful whether the United States would have gone to war when it did, if at all. Had it not been for our participation in that war, it is problematical whether the Allies could have won. Our aid proved decisive, so decisive, in fact, that by November, 1918, the German government and high command thought it wise to throw in the sponge, though Germany was uninvaded and vast stretches of enemy territory were still occupied by German troops.

NOVER

The victory that had been won was a victory for the United States as well as for the Allies. But it was a victory which we failed to capitalize or even safeguard, refused to understand and ultimately threw away. And having thrown it away, we went further and proceeded to lose the war we had won. That, in brief, is the tragic history of our foreign relations in the years following 1918.

THE LESSON of that victory was speedily lost on us. It was not lost on the world. The power and might of the United States had been demonstrated in a most impressive fashion. It was clear, after 1918, that any combination of powers that had this country on its side was unbeatable, that any would-be aggressor that had to reckon with the United States was doomed from the start.

We had been given an opportunity, by virtue of that victory, to help create a new international order from which war and aggression would be barred. That was what Woodrow Wilson had tried to do, but his efforts were thwarted by the shortsightedness of some and the petty partisanship of others. Even without joining the League of Nations we could at least have made sure that never again would our concept of the freedom of the seas be challenged as it was by the Kaiser in 1917. We did not do that either.

By 1935 a whole mythology had been created regarding the reasons why we had gone to war. The sum and substance of it was that we had been hoodwinked by propagandists and bankers and munitions makers; that we should never have gone to war at all, and that the best way to avoid getting into the next war was to act as though it would have been better had we lost the last. That was the philosophy behind the first Neutrality Act of 1935 and it has been placed on our statute books since then.

WHEN THE LAW was first enacted, a signal was given to the aggressors that they need not take the United States into account in any calculation of forces they need reckon with. How well they have taken advantage of this enormous asset we placed in their hands the events of the last few years bring out only too poignantly. One fact among a great many can be recalled: The Kaiser's Germany lost the war because it embarked on a program of unrestricted submarine warfare. That had got the United States into the war. Had the United States stood by its victory it is doubtful if Hitler would have continued where the Kaiser had left off. Yet in view of the American neutrality law he did so with the utmost impunity. The very day war began saw the sinking of the Athenia with Americans on board.

Since then the American people have been taught a very expensive lesson regarding sea power and its relations to the security of this hemisphere. We know that if the oceans that wash our shores are in the hands of the aggressors, they cease being barriers and become highways. We have begun to realize certain of the realities of our participation in the last war which have escaped us because of the fog of isolationist propaganda with which the history of that event has been obscured during recent years.

IT IS DOUBTFUL if any other piece of legislation enacted by Congress during recent years was as ill-conceived, from the viewpoint of America's long-range interests, as the Neutrality Act. It is doubtful if any have had more pernicious consequences.

The Neutrality Act was America's Munich, a product of the same failure to realize that aggressors are never appeased that characterized the policy of the late Neville Chamberlain. At Munich in 1938, Great Britain sacrificed the bastion of Czecho-Slovakia, a development that was to lead in due course to the sacrifice of peace as well. Our Munich actually came three years earlier with the passage of the original neutrality law which involved the abandonment on our part of the doctrine of the freedom of the seas.

We, too, hoped by propitiating the aggressors to be allowed to live in peace. But by permitting the aggressors to pursue a piratical course on the high seas the neutrality law, far from adding to our security, has endangered it. That is why during these last months the Administration, with the support of Congress and the American people, has steadily whittled away at the foundations of the act.

We turned 50 destroyers over to Great Britain; we have appropriated large sums for the benefit of the nations fighting the aggressors; we have begun to transform the Nation into an arsenal for the democracies; we are now considering further ways and means whereby Hitler's dream of world empire can be shattered. In other words, at this late hour and in the face of terrific obstacles we are trying to regain the losses we incurred when we told the aggressors: You can do anything you please on the high seas. We will not object. We have no further use for the victory we won in 1918. Neutrality has proved an expensive illusion in a world in which the dictators recognize no rules of law, believe in no restraints, and regard all nations as enemies that do not willingly become their slaves.

Domestic Wine Producers' Capture American Market

By the Associated Press

American producers have captured almost the entire home wine market in spite of strong efforts of France, Spain, Portugal and Argentina to retain or take over parts of it.

One Commerce Department official estimated that foreign wine sales here have been cut more than half and that domestic producers were serving about 98 per cent of American wine wants, including demands for specialties like champagne and vermouth.

Except for brandy, however, the war has not seriously affected sales of foreign spirits. Scotch and Canadian whiskies, for instance, are available in greater than usual quantities as the British Empire promotes whisky sales in order to get American dollars for the purchase of war materials.

Rum imports also are unaffected since they come primarily from the West Indies.

How French shipments have dwindled, however, is shown by import figures. In the first quarter of 1941, France sent here 13,200 gallons of champagne, 14,092 gallons of vermouth and 19,800 gallons of other wines. In the similar period last year, before France's defeat, shipments were 170,000 gallons of champagne, 219,000 gallons of vermouth and 250,000 gallons of other wines.

Spain and Argentina were described as the main contenders for the French position in the American market.

Stewart Berkshire, head of the Treasury's alcohol tax unit, said American wine production statistics do not reflect the quickened trend toward United States wines. He explained that huge surpluses were stored a few years ago and that the increased demand for domestic wines is being met from stocks instead of new production.

Bill Cunningham's Column

Writer Saw Rudolph Hess As Best of Nazis in 1936

By Bill Cunningham

Your guess is as good as anybody's as to why Rudolf Hess, the only sane looking number in the entire clownish array of heiling hooligans, came suddenly unstuck from Germany and favored the world's front pages with a lone eagle flight that puts even the young Slim Lindbergh's Atlantic crossing into second place in terms of bulk space and affiliated comment. And that seems to be exactly par for the course even after studying the cards turned in by London and Berlin.

I had a chance to study at close range the looks, mannerisms and even some of the conversation of the entire gallery of top Nazis in Berlin in 1936, and, as it chances, Hess was the one I really met and had conversation with.

I met the quiet and rather handsome Rudolf first without realizing who he was, or what he represented. We chatted briefly about the games in English, which he seemed to speak about as well as a German ever does.

It was only a chance meeting, but he remembered me when we chanced to be in the same room at a formal reception later, and he came over this time and began the conversation himself. Again it was about sports, the games, the Olympic ideal.

That rang in a full chord in memory when one of the recent dispatches from London said perhaps he was trying to contact the Duke of Hamilton, a fellow enthusiast at the Winter Games at Partenkirchen, and that possibly he felt war between Britain and Germany could be ended by invoking the Olympic ideal of fair play and a clear break.

I met him later with Schmeling, and this time we sat at a table and chatted along for an hour or so. Max and I did most of the talking, and it was mostly reminiscence.

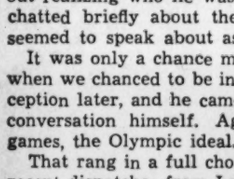
I got to thinking back later that Hess never did say much.

He was on the quiet side, but he was a keen and interested listener. He was of better than medium height, with a face something like Schmeling's, which is to say something like Jack Dempsey's. The principal differences were in the eyes and the jaw. His chin was considerably squarer and more determined looking than either of the boxers'. The common custom is to call his type of target a "fighting jaw." That may hold in argument. It doesn't in pugilism. One of those jutting facial piazzas is too easy to hit.

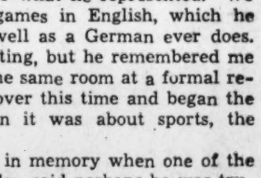
But his eyes were memorable.

They were deep, gray-green, and they seemed to smoulder with more than a hint of deep-seated fanaticism under abnormally black and bushy eyebrows. His hair was black and luxurious. He was a hairy man. You could see it at his wrists and at his throat.

He was lean limbed, and of trim figure. Unlike his master, he looked well tailored in his Storm Trooper's uniform. His brass was shined; his leather immaculate. Like Hitler, he neither drank nor smoked. Except for that restrained fanaticism in his eyes, he was good looking, companionable sort of man.



HESS



SCHMELING

Certainly he seemed the best bred, best educated and most normal of that motley gallery of poseurs and weaklings. It's perfectly true he didn't have much to surpass; they were a hot looking lot. Hess was unquestionably the prize winner.

In early Nazi days Hess apparently wasn't ambitious. He coveted no job and to Hitler was more the personal friend, secretary, outside office interviewer than anything else. He was still that in 1936. His office was known as the Nazi Wailing Wall.

There was a terrific drive amongst the understrappers to get next to Hitler's warm side. At long last, it was Goering who moved into the No. 1 spot, with Hess as No. 2. Goebbels is still hanging around, as the boys say in baseball, but he isn't as popular with the German people as either Hess or Goering, the popularity seeming to stand in that order, at the time Hess engineered his spectacular abdication.

There's been a lot of angling for those just-under spots, including double dealing and evidence-planting, if all tales are true. Hess must have been a hard man to get, if that's the sort of job they were doing on him, for his nose was cleaner than any of the rest. He was apparently still there when he stepped into the plane. Or maybe he got information all at once that he wasn't there.

He undoubtedly was a gentleman. I've talked with him. I know. Possibly, as has been suggested, the idea of brutalizing and enslaving the entire world broke him down with an attack of the horrors at last. He was avowedly and actively bitter against Communism. He hated Russia. International word now is that Hitler and Stalin may personally meet for the first time soon and strike hands to bind their countries as blood brothers.

Maybe he couldn't take that.

Maybe, as the Germans claim, he went completely out of his mind.

If he did, what's happened in Germany in the past five years put him out of his mind, for he certainly was no maniac the summer of 1936. He looked like a nice guy mixed up with a lot of dreary daffodils, a sane man caught in a crazy house. They say if you stay in one of those places long enough, it will get you, too, no matter how sound and strong you may be.

Maybe that's what happened to him.

Pvt. Palooka Meets the General . . .

WOT DO WE DO OR SAY WHEN WE GIT IN, HAM? I'M JIST USED T'SERGEANTS AN' FIGHT PERMOTERS.

U.S.A.

CHIEF OF STAFF Gen. George C. Marshall, resplendent in white uniform, meets Ham Fisher

Private Joe Palooka reported to his superiors at the War Department yesterday.

He called on Army Chief of Staff George C. Marshall, conferred at length with other ranking officials, and visited with the boys in the press room. Today, the Army's best known buck private will conclude his military business here, visit Navy chiefs and then, of course, see the fight.

But wait a minute, isn't Joe still in the Seminole village in the Florida Everglades back on page 30? That's right. It was his alter ego, his creator and boss, Ham Fisher, who spent the day at the War Department.

Joe, or rather Ham, spent most of his time with Brig. Gen. James A. Ulio and other officials of the Army's Morale Division. For Private Palooka has become the model American soldier to millions throughout the world and what he does and says is important.

Army officials know that Joe's actions have a great deal of effect on what the men in the ranks think of themselves and what countless readers throughout South America and the rest of the world think about the American soldier.

So does Ham Fisher. He spends much of his time at Army camps making sure that his daily strip accurately reflects service life down to the last detail.

And besides the question of keeping Joe's conduct in the best of Army tradition, Fisher must also keep ahead of the military bandwagon. For he has to keep a month ahead of his daily strip and several months ahead on the Sunday page. Joe or Capt. Hayden cannot appear in abandoned uniforms or use discarded drill, The boys in the camps would cry "corny."

From here, Joe, or rather Ham, is going to Hollywood. Joe is going to make, not one but five movies! They wouldn't say very much more about what's going to happen next in the strip, although Joe dropped a hint about a possible match with the heavyweight champ of the Navy.

HAM FISHER

"I an Ham Fisher, the fella which draws a very mediocre comic strip, went on the most interestin trip today I guess I ever went. I been goin out an boxin fer the morale branch of the army of which I've been transfurd to. Well today the two of us went over to the United States War Department to rilly meet the heads of our army an I certny was nerviss I'm assured beleeve me.

We was first to Meet Gen. Ulio which is the head of the Morale Branch an I says to Ham, Jist how do I ack, an he says I got a book of etikay here lets look he says. Well we looked plenty but dint find nothin on how to ack with Gens. of the U. S. Army so he says well lets go an you jist let me do the talkin an he did I'll say. Nobody never gets much T'say when he's talkin, but Gen. Ulio was certny grashius an is one of the swellest people I ever met. It seems that our Gens. are jist as human beans as anybuddy an I'd certny like to have all the other fellas in the army know it like I do believe me.

Well then we went an met the Chief of Staff hisself Gen. Marshall in person. Say I was so nerviss when I went in I could scarcely salute. Well he is a hansome type of specimun an taller then me. An he treatid us like we was old friends an I come to the seclusion that the bigger people is the more there lible to be understandin an humun. Evry soljer knows what a great soljer Gen. Marshall is but I wish they all could of had the now opertoonity to know what a grand gent he is to jist a plain private like I'm jist. Ham explaint what he'd like to help push boxin an stuff in the camps an how I would go all over an box fer the fellas.

An then we met Cols. Grogan an Adams an Scott and Williams an they give Ham a lotta infermation he certny fount valuble an tomorra were goin over an meet Commander O'Flaherty an Admiral Stark, and ast them if itll be awright for the Navy champeen to meet me in a match fer the United Services.

Well I certny am enjoyin this here trip more then I did the Everglades an it certny is swell to be here in the post, I'll say, so goodbye now . . . an thank you."

After a day spent with Palooka's creator anyone would know that Joe's enlistment in the Army was inevitable, just as it was inevitable that he should have been a fighter. Short, stocky and full of energy, Fisher was in the amateur ring in days past and tried several times to get into the Army during the last war.

Recruiting officers in his home town, Wilkes-Barre, knew his age and wouldn't accept him, so when he became 16, he went to Camp Lee, Va., to join up. But the Armistice was signed while they were examining him, and Fisher confesses he cried his eyes out.

Earlier, he had seen one of the bigger boys down the block go off to the Naval Academy and thrilled to his smart appearance in Navy blue on his visits home. Today, Fisher hopes to see his one-time boyhood hero, now the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Harold R. Stark.

But there is a more immediate reason for Fisher putting Joe into the Army. It is evident in practically everything Palooka does or says. He and Ham feel strongly about the seriousness of the world situation and believe that America hasn't fully awakened to the dangers ahead.

They hold that the most important thing before the country today is to build an efficient and unbeatable military machine as quickly as possible.

"Joe and the other boys in the ranks are doing their part," says Fisher, "but too many of us outside are not. We've got to wake up and get down to business. We must make sacrifices, train down the whole Nation so it is fit and hard. And we ought to do more to make the men in uniform feel they are the important people today and that we appreciate them."

West Point Keeps in Step

By Bill Boni

West Point, N. Y., May 22.—When Brig. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, who had been commanding colonel at the Presidio, San Francisco, took office as superintendent of the United States Military Academy last November, one of his first acts was to abolish the officer-coaching system in football.

Hand-in-hand with that he obtained War Department sanction for a new ruling under which West Point no longer will bar a candidate simply because he weighs more than 208 pounds.

In themselves these steps were by no means essential to the national defense effort. But the superintendent did regard them as essential to the production of a winning Army football team, and a winning football team, in turn, is good advertising.

But football, while the most publicity and revenue-valuable, is only one of 18 intercollegiate sports on the West Point curriculum and only a small part of a "sports for all" program that was drafted after the World War, when West Pointers and draftees alike turned up a shocking proportion who were physically deficient.

Here each man, before he can get his commission, must be able to pass certain tests in gymnastics, swimming, fencing, wrestling, boxing and track and field.

Just how all this athletic endeavor is fitted into the program at all becomes more remarkable when you have gone through a typical day in a cadet's life. Through the gone through a typical day in a cadet's life. We got some idea of what such a day is like by following the Congressional Board of Visitors on its recent annual inspection tour.

The Congressmen emerged from breakfast at the Thayer Hotel about 9:45 a. m. The cadets had been bugled and drummed out of bed 2 hours and 55 minutes earlier.

We first visited the electrical engineering laboratory, where groups of cadets in coveralls were operating such involved and mystifying contraptions as a "motor generator to deliver three-phase current." This fits in, of course, with modern warfare's electrically-controlled firing units by which an entire battery of antiaircraft guns, for instance, can be fired from a central point.

SOUND DETECTOR TRAINING—Part of training in how to combat hostile aircraft is learning the use of sound detector which spots the approach of planes

Next came an inspection of the barracks—the old north barracks, which housed the entire corps of some 400 in Gen. Pershing's undergraduate days and where his room still is exhibit A, and the newer quarters needed to accommodate the modern corps' 1,800 men.

There was opportunity here, too, to see the plebes carrying on the plebe traditions of which Hollywood has made so much. They must, for instance, always use the basement stairs when leaving a building and take the steps two at a time when entering one. They must walk with chin back, chest out and stomach in, must walk in straight lines, and can make only right-angle turns.

By now it was time to eat. In the area (yard) of each barracks the companies turned out for dinner formation, the plebes 5 minutes ahead of time and frozen stiffly at attention. The corps then marched to the giant mess hall, each battalion using its own entrance.

The board of visitors and their official escort reconvened after lunch, and the whirlwind tour was resumed. by a former chief of field artillery); the cavalry drill ground, where officer and noncom instructors supervised sham firing of 75-mm. antitank guns and 155-mm. howitzers; the polo field and the area around Michie Stadium, where they were being trained on antiaircraft weapons.

To the ordnance building, where they are taught how big guns are constructed; the machine shop, where they take down airplane engines and learn to operate lathes and other machines; the hangar, where some 20 cadets were learning the ins and outs of a twin-motored amphibian plane; the back roads of the reservation, where they went whipping by in light-armored scout cars.

Take it all in all, and the Military Academy is doing its utmost to live up to the West Point mission, which reads:

"To instill discipline and a high sense of honor, to develop the powers of analysis so that the mind may reason to a logical conclusion; and to bring its graduates into the corps of officers properly equipped to enter upon the duties of the branch in which they may be commissioned."

Trade Body Cites Hearst Magazines, Inc.

By the Associated Press

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday an order directing Hearst Magazines, Inc., to "cease and desist" from alleged misrepresentations in its magazines and other publications concerning the quality and guaranty of products advertised for sale.

The order was directed against the corporation, its officers, directors or representatives and concerned, in addition to advertisements in its publications, the issuance or authorization of various seals of approval, emblems, shields or other insignia.

The commission noted that Good Housekeeping magazine was a wholly-owned subsidiary of Hearst Magazines, Inc., which maintains departments known as Good Housekeeping Bureau and Good Housekeeping Institute for testing products which may be advertised.

Mislead Readers

The commission said it had found that the corporation represented that "all products, services or commercial offerings advertised in Good Housekeeping are guaranteed" by it and that this reference to a guaranty had a "tendency to mislead readers" into believing that it was an unlimited guaranty.

Testimony showed, the FTC said, that while products were testified before seals of approval were issued, "such tests were generally not sufficient to assure the fulfillment of the claims made for such products." The commission described the use and authorization of "many different forms of seals, shields, emblems and insignia" as "confusing to the average reader," and said that it tended to mislead purchasers and readers into believing that all products so marked had been adequately tested and were guaranteed.

"Deceptive Statements"

This idea was supported by articles in Good Housekeeping magazine, the commission added.

It said that many of the advertisements appearing in the magazine "contained false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations with reference to the therapeutic value of medicinal preparations, the properties and effectiveness of cosmetic preparations, the fiber content and qualities of fabrics and wearing apparel, the properties and purity of food products, the results to be obtained from the use of various articles of merchandise and the efficiency and reliability of services and other commercial offerings."

Smith Challenges Price-Fixing Power Of Henderson

By the Associated Press

The price fixing powers of Leon Henderson were openly challenged yesterday by Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

"I'm going to demand that this man Henderson come before our Senate Committee and explain by what authority he fixed prices," said Smith, dean of the Senate and frequent critic of New Deal programs and policies.

Henderson, as administrator of the Office of Price Administration and Civil Supply, has fixed maximum prices for steel, coal during the recent strike, second-hand machine tools and other vital defense materials.

Smith told reporters that Henderson would be called to testify at public hearings by the Senate Committee on a resolution by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, for an investigation of prices of "necessary and essential farm products." The Senator readily admitted that he was irritated at Henderson's announced intention of fixing a price ceiling for combed cotton yarn at considerably below recent market peaks.

Jury Clears Two In Criminal Attack On Waitress

Francis J. Mulvey and Albert M. Farmer, both 23, were acquitted yesterday by a District Court jury which deliberated 17 hours and 44 minutes on charges that they criminally assaulted a waitress here last September.

Three women and nine men jurors received the case from Justice James M. Proctor at 4:41 p. m. Wednesday, reporting at 10:05 yesterday morning.

Mrs. Gertrude Imlay complained that the men seized her the night of September 13 last year, took her into Maryland, assaulted her four times and stole her pocketbook. Assistant District Attorney William Hitz, jr., had asked for the death penalty.

Still pending against the men are charges of kidnaping, also a capital offense, and robbery. Attorneys Andrew A. Lipscome and Robert W. McCullough, defense counsel, said they would seek to have these charges dropped.

Police Say Jealousy Turned Blonde Into Killer

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 22.—Seeking to send attractive Mrs. Ruth Steadman to the electric chair for the strangulation-murder of Robert Emery, the prosecution attempted for the first time today to establish as a motive that she didn't want any other woman to have him," including his 25-year-old wife.

"I wanted him to die. I couldn't see him going home to his wife every evening," a police stenographer quoted the blonde defendant as saying during interrogation at Boston City Hospital January 21, the day Emery's body was found, a cord about the neck, in Mrs. Steadman's apartment.

Under cross-examination, the stenographer, George M. Godfrey, conceded that when the police went to the hospital they found Mrs. Steadman strapped to a cot; that she "kind of dozed off at times"; that many questions went unanswered; that she had been "shaken" by a nurse to attract her attention, and that her mood ranged from depression to exhilaration, from laughter to tears.

Godfrey, referring to a transcript of shorthand notes made during the interrogation, quoted 26-year-old Mrs. Steadman, wife of a Pittsburgh insurance man, as saying she purchased 200 sleeping tables, gave Emery 125 of them in milk, and took "some" herself in liquor.

Godfrey quoted the defendant as saying she had used a string or cord around Emery's neck as a "tourniquet."

When asked when the cord was applied, the witness, Godfrey said, replied:

"He was on the couch and he fell off."

Asked if he were conscious or unconscious, Godfrey said she answered:

"Well, I had given him the stuff."

"I was supposed to be dead when you gazelles arrived," Godfrey said was her answer to one question. He said she volunteered the statement:

"This is not a suicide pact. Bobbie didn't know I was buying the tablets."

100 Trapped In Forest Fire

Toronto, May 22 (U.P.).—Forest fires in the Nipigon area of Ontario, 90 miles east of Fort William, were reported early tonight to have trapped 100 employes of a lumber camp.

Two hundred and forty other employes of the camp at Fort McKirdey were reported to have escaped by wading through streams and creeks out of the danger zone. In the Sudbury area of Ontario a second fire was estimated to cover 160 square miles and at Gogama the flames had already caused an estimated $1,000,000 damage.

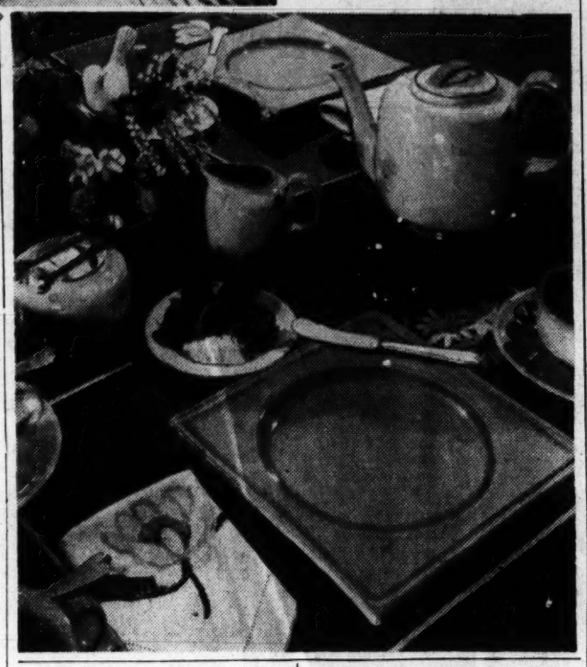
Strawberries Delectable for Morning, Noon and Night

A fascinating version of the bride's shower cake is the one pictured here. No need for a hostess to run around in circles thinking of the type of cake to make for such an occasion. A tender angel cake covered with icing flavored, tinted and garnished with strawberries can shed its radiance in honor of the bride.

Below is an idea for spring breakfast table setting. Little doves of peace are atop the flower holders, and gay pottery is used on transparent mats, flaunting bright flowers. Hot waffles, supplemented by an invigorating cup of tea and strawberries with powdered sugar to dip their red noses in, are welcome breakfast notes.



Some Tips on Making Strawberry Shortcake

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

Martha Ellyn.

"DOUBTLESS God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did," was the sentiment of a great English doctor many years ago, in speaking of the strawberry. The same sentiment seems to be prevalent among the majority of persons today.

Strawberry shortcake is a favorite dessert. And strawberry shortcake lovers are divided into several schools, all with different ideas about what constitutes the base for the finest shortcake. Some like plain biscuits; some like rich, sweet biscuits; some insist on sponge cake, and, in the South, where many of our fine food customs have originated, rounds of rich crisp pastry make a layered shortcake that is delicious.

The biscuit-school is again subdivided into those who insist the biscuits must be hot when the shortcake is at its best, and those who prefer the biscuits and the berries cold.

To Make a Sweet Biscuit, Add Honey

Some new tricks in making shortcake are always in order. Try making the biscuits with butter or margarine for extra flavor. Brush the tops with butter or margarine just before the biscuits go into the oven. Or try adding a half cup of grated cheese to the flour for the biscuits. Cheese and fruit are good together.

To make a sweet biscuit, add a tablespoon of honey for each cup of flour used. Mix the honey with the milk before adding it to the flour. Honey and strawberries are an ambrosial combination, so say those who like honey. A delicious strawberry sundae shortcake may be made by using a generous spoonful of vanilla ice cream instead of plain or whipped cream. For this have the biscuits piping hot.

If there is a bride's shower cake to be made, consider making an angel food cake, covered with strawberry icing and garnished with whole strawberries with the stems left on. The recipe for it follows:

Bride's Shower Cake—Place 1½ cups egg whites (12 to 15 egg whites) in a large bowl, sprinkle ¼ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon cream of tartar over them, and mix together slightly with several strokes of flat wire shisk. Sift 1½ cups sugar. Sift 1 cup cake flour once, measure, add ½ the sugar and sift together four more times. Beat egg whites with whisk, using slow, gentle motion that keeps whisk beneath the surface. Continue beating until whisk leaves faint line when drawn across surface of egg whites. Add remaining sugar gradually, beating as before, until texture is very fine and even and mixture begins to form slightly rounded surfaces when whisk is raised. DO NOT OVERBEAT. Add ¼ teaspoon each of almond extract and vanilla. Remove whisk. Sift the flour mixture gradually over surface and fold in slowly and gently with spoon, folding towards center of bowl and rotating both bowl and spoon. Keep spoon beneath surface of batter and fold until mixture is smooth (2 minutes). Turn into large (4 quart) ungreased tube pan. Bake in slow oven, 300 degrees for 30 minutes; then increase heat slightly (325 degrees) and continue baking 40 minutes longer. Remove from oven and invert pan on rack for at least one hour or until cold. Remove from pan. Let stand 12 hours or longer before cutting. After standing and before cutting, cover tops and sides with strawberry icing.

How to Bake Strawberry Pie

Strawberry Icing—Add 4 cups sifted confestioners' sugar and a dash of salt to ¼ cup crushed, fresh strawberries, mixing well. Then add about 2 teaspoons lemon juice until the icing is of consistency to spread thinly on cake.

Another delicious dessert that comes of the May flowers and sunshine is Strawberry Pie. And to make a good pie it is good logic to consider the crust. The first step in pie-building need not prove a stumbling block to even the most inexperienced cook. An excellent crust—one that is delicious and easy to make as well as particularly appropriate for single crust pies, can be made simply by blending melted butter and a small amount of sugar into crushed ready-to-eat corn flakes.

No special technique, and no special care need be exercised in handling this type of crust. First prepare corn flake crumb pie shell and chill.

Crumb Pie Shell—Melt 1-3 cup butter and combine with ¼ cup sugar and 1 cup fine corn flakes or oven-popped rice cereal crumbs; mix thoroughly. Roll or grind 4 cups corn flakes or 3 cups oven-puffed rice cereal to yield 1 cup fine crumbs. Press the mixture evenly and firmly around sides and bottom of pie pan. Chill before adding filling.

Strawberry Filling—Wash and stem 1 quart berries; slice or chop. Cook 1 cup of berries with 1½ cups water until soft. Mix 1 cup sugar and 1½ tablespoons cornstarch thoroughly add the strained hot liquid from cooked berries, stirring constantly. Cook, stirring until thick and clear. Add 1 tablespoon gelatin which has been soaked in ¼ cup water. Cool until mixture begins to congeal; add remaining berries. Turn into corn flake crumb pie shell. Chill. Serve with sweetened whipped cream if desired.

New Sharpener On Market Proves Household Boon

Every household at sometime has knives, scissors, cleavers and other straight-edge tools to sharpen. There is many a gadget on the market to sharpen tools, but they do not all do it easily, safely and instantly.

Recently a 5-in-1-knife-and-tool sharpener that will put a keen edge on knives, scissors, straight-edges and ice skates, has made its appearance at the ten-cent store. It will even take care of the lawnmower. This tricky sharpener gives the same smooth, durable edge required by professional users of knives, with a minimum of wear on the knives.

To sharpen a knife all you have to do is to draw the knife from handle to point with enough downward pressure to remove small metal shaving from knife. Repeat until knife is sharp. If a rough edge results, file off edge and resharpen. This tool is guaranteed to sharpen any standard brand knife, stainless or carbon steel. The blades of the sharpener are adjustable; when dull, you move them about a sixteenth of an inch. When entirely dull on one side, reverse blades to opposite edge.

Left-Overs Can Be Made Appetizing

By the Post Food Editor

USING up leftovers so they will be as appetizing and as enjoyable as when the original dish was served can be something of a game. The cook plays it with herself—a sort of culinary solitaire. The delightful thing about the game is that a cook with imagination can win every time, even when the cards seem stacked against her.

Suppose, for example, there was a small portion of the pork roast left over. It may be ground and combined with bread crumbs. An egg or two is added and the whole is well seasoned. Shape into patties and fry in a little butter or margarine. Or fill the mixture into well-greased muffin pans and bake in a moderate oven. When done unmold and top with a generous serving of creamed peas. The peas may be new ones, just out of the garden, or new ones, just out of a can.

Or, to make matters still simpler, dice the leftover pork (or lamb or veal or beef) and simply add it to the creamed peas. Serve over flaky hot biscuits, with extra biscuits on the side, or if there is a slice or two of bacon on hand, cut it into bits and add to the biscuits. The bacon may or may not be broiled before adding to the dry ingredients for the biscuits.

Combine leftover vegetables with ground leftover meat, add bread crumbs, seasoning and an egg or two and bake as a meat loaf. Serve with tomato sauce into which chopped new spring onions have been stirred just before serving. Or, instead of baking the meat and bread crumb mixture as a meat loaf, spread it on baking powder biscuit dough. Roll dough for baking powder biscuits into a rectangular sheet, ¼ inch thick. Spread with the meat and crumb mixture. Sprinkle with chopped onion if desired. Roll up like jellyroll. Cut into 1-inch slices. Place cut side down into well-greased pan and bake in a moderately hot oven (425 degrees F.) until done. Serve with tomato sauce, and there will be no leftovers left.

How to Furnish a Pleasant Living-Dining Room for $350

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

IT MAKES pretty conversation—this business of how a bride can get settled for a cool thousand or two dollars. But what an awful lot of brides this June want to know is how to furnish a pleasant living-diping room for about $350 . . . furnish it completely and conveniently, without resorting to makeshifts so they have to spend all those first glamorous years waiting for the things they need now.

This idea of starting with one fine treasure and "getting along" with oddments doesn't appeal to those who want to be comfortable in the meantime.

Basic Room Plan

Well, we saw three answers to that problem . . . three gay and livable answers they were, too. Each a variation of a basic room plan that lists the necessities and the price to pay for each. This gives the bride a chance to express her own personality in that little new home, and at the same time provides her with a guide so she won't get out beyond her depth on some alluring purchase.

THE BUDGET

The fundamentals in this basic room plan are:

Sofa	$59.95
Four side chairs	27.80
Easy chair	29.50
Easy chair	24.50
Two lamp tables at $9.95	19.90
Coffee table	11.95
Console that opens into dining table	32.50
Desk	32.50
Console chest of drawers for linen or silver	22.50
Occasional chair	19.95
Two table lamps at $5.95 each	11.90
Extra table lamp	6.95
Two pairs draperies	13.90
Fringed rug	40.00
	$353.80

There, now—who couldn't make a glowing little home with that beginning! If you have this amount to spend, and stay within the price listed for each thing, you'll come out with what you need now.

Scrambled Eggs, Ripe Olive Sauce

Scrambled eggs under a chopped ripe olive sauce are just right with toasted English muffins for various spring luncheon or supper menus. A small green salad is all that is needed to insure good nutritional balance. The ready-to-use form of chopped or sliced ripe olives is especially practical for such purposes.

To prepare a flavorful, appropriate sauce with little effort, saute minced onions and green pepper strips in butter or margarine until wilted. Add chopped or sliced ripe olives and the contents of a small can of prepared tomato sauce. Cook and stir over low heat for a short time to blend flavors. Turn out scrambled eggs—for from four to six servings—onto hot service platter. Cover one half with the sauce and fold the other half over the sauce. Garnish with parsley and whole ripe olives. Serve immediately.

Women's Clubs Due To Debate Convoy Issue

By Ruth Cowan
Associated Press Staff Writer

Atlantic City, N. J., May 22.—A broadly worded resolution asking approval of "the policy of giving whatever aid is necessary to those nations whose defense is deemed 'vital' to the defense of the United States" was introduced tonight at the golden jubilee triennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Action on the "emergency resolution," which was laid over until tomorrow for a vote, was expected to include a discussion of convoys as coming within scope of the phrase "whatever aid is necessary."

"The considerable advance of the Axis powers has been aided by the failure of their opponents to face the reality of the danger until too late," the resolution said. "This advance has made it clear that we must refuse to permit the United States to become encircled and isolated."

The federation elected these officers, all unopposed:

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, Baltimore, president, succeeding Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, Portland, Oreg., and to serve three years; Mrs. La Fell Dickinson, Keene, N. H., first vice president; Mrs. A. L. Blackstone, Waukesha, Wis., recording secretary, and Mrs. Rowland H. Latham, Asheville, N. C., treasurer.

Run-Off Vote Will Be Taken Today

None of the three candidates for second vice president received a majority of the 1,566 votes and a run-off election will be held tomorrow between Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, Richmond, Va., who received 595, and Mrs. R. I. C. Prout, Wakefield, Mich., 514. The third candidate, Mrs. Horace B. Ritchie, Athens, Ga., lost out with 445 votes.

The federation voted to direct "particular attention to solve the immediate and increasing problem of prostitution and unregulated sale of liquors in areas adjoining military camps."

Other resolutions passed urged members to indorse education and legislative activities in a campaign for universal fingerprinting, and called upon President Roosevelt to proclaim the first Saturday in May as "Women of America's Day" in recognition of their contribution to human progress. The federation voted to continue its work for better housing, fireworks control, control of disease and forest conservation.

Mrs. James C. Bryan, a young Canton, Ohio, matron, won the junior leadership contest.

The press and publicity department announced awards given in cooperation with the New York Herald Tribune for the best news release written by a clubwoman and published.

The women, all press chairmen of their local women's clubs, are: First prize, Mrs. Ruth Rothinson, Lewiston, Mont.; second, Mrs. Spencer De Long, Juneau, Alaska; third, Mrs. J. J. McShane, Davenport, Iowa, and honorable mentions, Mrs. Maurice M. Zook (Junior Women's Club), Flagstaff, Ariz.; Mrs. R. F. Grosskopf, Indianapolis, Ind., and Mrs. Ella Hendricks, Red Bluff, Calif.

Lady Halifax Brings Queen's Message

The department also announced Mrs. Phoebe Dickson, of Boulder, Colo., won a $5 first prize award in Golden Jubilee news-writing contest.

Special Jubilee Scrapbook awards follow:

District—Second Congressional District of Illinois Federation, $10.

Individual club—Oglview Women's Club, Minnesota, $5.

Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambassador, addressed the convention, bringing a message from Queen Elizabeth on behalf of the British women for the sympathy of American women.

Dressed in a taupe frock and brown narrow-brimmed hat with a brown veil, she told the women that her country folks were being taxed 50 per cent and "there will be no war profiteers in this war."

"In these days of tragedy and sadness we are living, feeling and suffering together," she said. "Everyone is facing the same threat. No one's house is immune from bombing, and no one's life is more important than anyone else's."

Capping a full day's program was a rolling chair parade on Atlantic City's famed boardwalk tonight and a town hall broadcast (transferred from New York) on which President Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, and Col. William J. Donovan, former Assistant Secretary of War, who recently returned from an inspection trip of England and Europe, debated "Should we do whatever is necessary to insure a British victory?"

Resolution on D. C. Representation Tabled

By Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley

Atlantic City, N. J., May 22.—A resolution indorsing national representation for the District of Columbia was tabled by the General Federation of Women's Clubs at its triennial convention today after a lively discussion. Mrs. Olandus Smith, of West Virginia, made the motion on the grounds that the clubs in various States were not sufficiently informed on the subject to take action.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley led the District group of supporters of the resolution. Others who urged its adoption were Mrs. Pierce B. Ashburn, Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation; Mrs. LeVern Beales, Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass and Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt. Those who spoke against it were Mrs. William Ernest Howard and Mrs. William Morgan Pryse.

Bolivian Sculptress Shows Her Work

Underwood & Underwood

At the opening of the exhibition of the works of Marina Nunez del Prado yesterday at the Pan American Union, the sculptress (left) is photographed with the Minister of Bolivia and Mme. Guachalla

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

Several hundred members of the Diplomatic Corps, Government officials and representatives of art and cultural circles yesterday afternoon attended the opening of an exhibition of the works of the Bolivian sculptress, Marina Nunez del Prado, at the Pan American Union. Invitations for the occasion were issued by the Minister of Bolivia and Mme. Guachalla who received with the honor guest.

The exhibition, which will remain open until June 28, had particular significance from the standpoint of club women's interest in Pan Americanism. It is the Latin-American Fellowship of the American Association of University Women, awarded to Miss del Prado this year, that is responsible for her being here. Her work showed a great feeling for rhythm and deep insight into the life and culture of the Bolivian Indian. Many of the pieces depicted the Indian dances in which they interpret their legends and ideals and others were simple subjects, as indicated in the titles, "Mother," "Lullaby," and "Tenderness."

She has had 14 exhibitions in Bolivia, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay and Germany. Some of her works have been acquired by the national museums of art of Argentina, Uruguay and Germany.

Among the many who attended the showing yesterday were Chilean Ambassador Michels and the First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, Alejandro Bertrand; the Chief of the Division of Cultural Relations of the State Department and Mrs. Charles Thomson, the Minister of Guatemala and Mme. Recinos, Mrs. Thomas Burke, wife of the chief of the division of international communications of the State Department, and Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the Peoples' Mandate, who had entertained at luncheon earlier in the day, with Miss del Prado and Miss Gisele Shaw, of Argentina, as honor guests; Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Thomas Dawson and her daughter, Miss Lolita Dawson; Miss Mary E. Winslow, United States representative on the Inter-American Commission of Women; Miss Clara Saunders, noted artist; Miss Emily Milyard, of the Corcoran Art Gallery; Senator Theodore F. Green, former Representative and Mrs. Maurice H. Tatcher, Mrs. Eduardo Garland, wife of the Peruvian Minister to the Dominican Republic, and Juan Elguer, counsellor of the Peruvian Embassy.

Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, president of the Washington branch of the A. A. U. W.; Mrs. Ruth Tryon, secretary of the fellowship committee, and Mrs. John Donaldson were among members of the association who attended.

Jane Stine Wins Scholarship

The Radcliffe Club of Washington has awarded to Miss Jane Stine, senior at Woodrow Wilson High School, a tuitional scholarship to Radcliffe College in Cambridge, Mass. The club annually selects an outstanding Washington girl from a field of applicants drawn from the District's representative high schools. The candidates are judged on the basis of their high school achievements, as well as on the results of a college aptitude examination.

Miss Stine, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Stine, of 6345 Western Avenue, is editor in chief of the Wilson Beacon, a weekly paper; president of Highwriters, a literary organization; a member of the Woodrow Wilson Athletic Association and of the Latin Club. As a junior, she ranked highest of her class scholastically, for which she won a book presented annually at Wilson by the Radcliffe Club. Miss Stine has a letter in swimming and enjoys tennis and golf, which she frequently plays with her father and brother. Although at present her chief interest is journalism, she looks forward to intensive work in the fields of sociology and economics when in college.

Each year the Radcliffe Club of Washington joins with the Radcliffe Club of Baltimore in awarding another tuitional scholarship. This year's successful candidate is Miss Elizabeth Duker, of the Bryn Mawr School in Baltimore.

Mme. Alba Rosa Vietor, internationally known musician, will play the "Dance of the Hours," from La Gioconda, as a piano solo. Daughters of Two Former Envoys To Be Feted at Parties June 12

By Hope Ridings Miller.

DAUGHTERS OF TWO former United States Ambassadors to France—Miss Anne Bullitt and Miss Camilla Edge—will take over a large share of the spotlight on June 12, when both are to be feted at parties that will be of wide interest.

In the mails now are invitations issued by the United States Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Frederick W. Sterling to a reception and dance on that date for Miss Bullitt, daughter of former Ambassador William Bullitt. The affair, which promises to be one of the outstanding Capital parties on the June calendar, will take place at the Sulgrave Club and guests will include a sizable number from the diplomatic and official contingents, as well as from the residential group.

On June 27, Miss Bullitt will be formally presented to society at a large dance and supper to be given by her father at their home, Meadow Farm, Pennllyn, Pa., near Philadelphia. Now studying at the Foxcroft School, Middleburg, Va., Miss Bullitt will finish her course there on June 9 and probably will come directly to Washington. She will stay here but a few days before going on to Meadow Farm.

Miss Edge to Bow At Home Tea

Scheduled to arrive in town on the very day of the tea planned for her is Miss Edge, daughter of former Ambassador William Evans Edge and Mrs. Edge. She is now at St. Timothy's School, Catonsvillle, Md.. The party in her honor, to be given by her parents, will take place at their home, 1520 Eighteenth Street. That evening, Miss Edge will share honors with Miss Lenore Thomas, of Denver, Colo., at a dinner at which the latter's aunt, Mrs. Lee Warren, will be hostess at the 1925 F Street Club. Guests will go on later to the Sterling dance for Miss Bullitt.

Miss Thomas, who probably will arrive in Washington on June 10 or 11, has been attending school in New York, but she is now in her Colorado home and will come here from there.

Miss Edge's debut will be of interest not only in diplomatic and residential circles here, but also in New Jersey, from which State her father served as Senator for a number of years. Shortly after she makes her bow here, she will leave for Maine to spend the summer.

Anne Bullitt Popular Pupil

Mrs. Sterling, who recently returned to Washington from Boston, where she spent most of the past season, drove down to the Foxcroft School yesterday afternoon to confer with Miss Bullitt on final plans for her party. Incidentally, rumors floating to Washington from Middleburg have it that the pretty subdeb is one of the most popular students at fashionable Foxcroft, and chances are a number of her classmates there will be among those attending the fete in her honor. The Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Sterling (who is the former Dorothy Williams, daughter of Mrs. John R. Williams) have been close friends of former Ambassador Bullitt for years and have known Anne all her life. They watched reports of her with much interest back in 1933, when she accompanied her father to his post at Moscow (he was then our envoy to the Soviet Union), and later when, at the age of 15, she served as her father's hostess in Paris.

All the world knows, of course, that in 1939, when the German blitzkrieg on France began, she refused to leave her father and, instead of sailing homeward to safety, she took over a job in the American chancery. Not until her father left France did she return to this country and to her studies at Foxcroft.

Rehearsal Dinner Is Changed

Another party on the June 12 schedule is the dinner to be given by Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor following the wedding rehearsal for their daughter, Miss Rose Chatfield-Taylor, and Frank Goodnow MacMurray, son of the United States Ambassador to Turkey and Mrs. John Van Antwerp MacMurray. The party originally was planned for June 13, the evening before the wedding, but the more the bride-elect thought of having her rehearsal dinner on Friday the thirteenth the less she liked it. So the fete has been moved up one evening, and guests will go on to the terling dance for Miss Bullitt.

The bride, who is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Ohlmacher, of Vermillion, S. D., was given in marriage by her father, dean of the medical school of the University of South Dakota. Mr. McCoy, son of Mr. and Mrs. McCoy, of Memphis, Tenn., is now serving as an Ensign in Naval Reserve and is stationed at the United States Naval Academy. The bride has been affiliated with the National Broadcasting Co. here for the last three years.

The couple will make their home at 2929 Connecticut Avenue.

Mrs. MacMurray Here for Wedding

Making a trip of several thousand miles to attend a wedding, Mrs. John Van Antwerp MacMurray, wife of the United States Ambassador to Turkey, has arrived in New York. She came on the American liner President Jackson, to be present at the wedding June 14 of her son, Frank, to Miss Rose Chatfield-Taylor.

Mr. MacMurray's sister, Mrs. John Marvin Wright, makes her home in Washington and Mrs. MacMurray will probably come here shortly to visit her.

Oliver Wendell Hammonds Weds Ellen Flowerree in New Orleans

Christ Church Cathedral in New Orleans yesterday was the scene of a wedding of much interest to Washington, when Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree became the bride of Oliver Wendell Hammonds, of this city. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Edmund Flowerree, of New Orleans, and the niece of Clarence Hewes, of Washington, with whom she made her home for two winters.

Tall, seven-branch candlesticks were placed on the altar for the ceremony, which took place at 4:30. Calla lilies, white larkspur and ferns were massed in the church. Dean William Nes officiated and the couple were blessed by Bishop Jackson, of Louisiana.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white marquisette made with a draped bodice, dropped shoulder and short, puffed sleeves. Three bows trimmed the full skirt and she carried a bouquet of stephanotis and gardenias. Her only ornaments were a string of pearls and a diamond bracelet, gifts of Mr. Hammonds.

Mrs. Frank Reiss was matron of honor, wearing a frock of deep pink marquisette with a heartshaped neckline, puffed sleeves and a full skirt. A knife-pleated marquisette halo trimmed with ribbon completed her costume and she carried a sheaf of shell pink roses. Miss Adele Story, the maid of honor, was similarly dressed.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. H. A. Neilson and the Misses Marilyn Himes and Marjorie and Isabelle Meuser, of Washington, Mrs. Scott Hammonds, of Marshall, Tex., Miss Safford Winkler and Miss Ann Kostmayer, of New Orleans. They were dressed like the matron and maid of honor and carried yellow roses.

Brother Serves As Best Man

G. Scott Hammonds was best man for his brother and the ushers were John Browne, Morrison Tucker, William H. G. FitzGerald, Brabner Smith, John Dudley, John Chairs and James Higgins.

A reception at the Flowerree home followed the ceremony. Mrs. Flowerree wore blue marquisette and black lace, with a hat of the latter material, trimmed in blue. Mrs. Oliver Wendell Hammonds, of Oklahoma City, the bridegroom's mother, had chosen blue sheer with a lace bodice and matching accessories. Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Arthur Breese Griswold, Mrs. Hugh Vincent and Mrs. Willis Wilmot. The house was decorated with pink magnolia blossoms and yellow roses.

When she left on a wedding trip to Mexico, the bride wore a navy blue sheer frock with a white linen collar and cuffs and a matching hat and accessories. On their return the couple will live in Washington.

Many Guests From Out Of Town

Out of town guests at the wedding included Mr. Hewes and Dean Rucker, of Washington, Mrs. James Higgins, of Pawtucket, R. I.; Mrs. A. B. Griswold, of San Francisco; Dr. Hammonds, father of the bridegroom; Reed Scott, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Frederickson, Miss Margaret Hanna, Judge Fred Branson, of Oklahoma City, and Mrs. C. A. McGowen, of Jeannette, La.

The bride attended Newcomb College in New Orleans and was presented to society at a reception and later, a dance, given by Mr. Hewes here several winters ago. Mr. Hammonds studied at the University of Oklahoma, Harvard Law School and the University of Geneva.

Princess Is Feted

Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim entertained at dinner last evening in honor of Princess de Windisch-Graetz, who recently arrived in Washington from New York. Also among those attending the party was Baroness Kurt Pantz, wife of the well-known portrait painter, whose work was on exhibition at the Austrian Legation here a few seasons ago.

Miss Coleman To Wed June7

Invitations have been issued to the wedding of Miss Mary Eugenia Coleman and Ensign Louis Roddis, Jr., U. S. N., son of Capt. and Mrs. Louis Roddis (M. C.), U. S. N. The ceremony will take place June 7 at 4 o'clock, in St. Alban's Church, the Rev. Charles T. Warner officiating, assisted by Comdr. William N. Thomas, Chaplain of the Naval Academy, and will be followed by a small reception for the bridal party and members of the immediate families.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the National Cathedral School for Girls and made her debut last May at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Gravatt Coleman, and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Evans Mauldin. She will have as her maid-of-honor Miss Ann Brooke Peterson, daughter of Mrs. George Peterson and niece of Dr. Sinclair Bowen, of this city. Other attendants will be Miss Dorothy Vivian Funsten, of Charlottesville, Va.; Miss Olive Shadrack and Miss Helen Marie Lewis, of Washington; Miss Jane Winston Ducey, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. David Ducey, U. S. N.; Miss Alice Ingersoll, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Royal Ingersoll, U. S. N., and Miss Elizabeth Mae Hills, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Huntington Hills, U. S. A., and cousin of the prospective bridegroom.

Ensign R. N. Perley, Jr., U. S. N., will act as best man if his ship is in port, and ushers for the military wedding will be Ensign Frank C. Jones, U. S. N.; Ensign A. P. Hirth, U. S. N. Reserve; Ensign Greydon Parker Copeland, U. S. N. Reserve; Lieut. Frank Thorm 3d., U. S. A., Reserve; Lieut. E. Roger Kirk, U. S. A., Reserve, and several others as yet unannounced.

Miss Coleman will entertain the evening of June 5 in honor of her fiance, and many parties are being held for the couple. Miss Olive Shadrick gave a luncheon yesterday for Miss Coleman. Miss Alice Ingersoll will give a shower and tea tomorrow and Miss Gladys Ann Carter will give a luncheon on Wednesday.

Suzette Boutell, A. F. Hopkins, Jr., Engaged to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gates Boutell, of Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Suzette, to Alfred F. Hopkins, jr. of New York. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Boutell attended Gunston Hall School and was graduated from Sweet Briar College. She made her debut here in December, 1938. Mr. Hopkins is the son of Dr. Alfred F. Hopkins, of New York and Mrs. C. B. Lewis, of Watsonville, Calif. He attended the Landon School here and is with the 101st Cavalry at Fort Devens, Mass.

Senorita Shaw Is Honor Guest At Luncheon

A group of Washington women got a few tips on how to be good neighbors yesterday from dynamic Senorita Gisele Shaw, of Buenos Aires. The visitor, who is making a survey of our penal institutions for the Argentine ministry of justice, was honor guest at a luncheon given by Miss Mabel Vernon and Mrs. Thomas Burke.

"Some years ago," said Miss Shaw, "a number of foreign firms, including an American one, were trying to get a contract to do some public utility work in the Argentine. Whom do you suppose it went to? A German, because he and his mother had taken the trouble to learn Spanish, get thoroughly acquainted with our government leaders and contribute to our local charities. The other foreign businessmen had been content to mingle exclusively with the English and American colony in Buenos Aires."

Not satisfied to be only a leading hostess of Buenos Aires, Miss Shaw has been a moving force in social service work there. She is a registered nurse, as well as an authority on prison systems. Several years ago the members of the Peoples Mandate Committee, of which Miss Vernon is director and Mrs. Burke, chairman for Latin America, passed in Buenos Aires on a goodwill tour. Senorita Shaw entertained for them, one of the parties being a Mozart festival in which the guests were told to dress in the costume of that period. Her home was lighted only by candles for the occasion, and Mrs. Burke described it yesterday as being the most beautiful party she ever had attended.

Sharing honors with Senorita Shaw was another able South American woman, Senorita Marina Nunez del Prado. A few hours after her luncheon Senorita del Prado opened an exhibition of her sculpture at the Pan American Union, with the Bolivian Minister and Senora de Guachalla presiding. Senorita del Prado is in this country on a fellowship awarded by the American Association of University Women. She is chairman of the People's Mandate of Bolivia.

The party took place at the Carlton, where the guests were seated at one long table centered with pink roses. Senorita Shaw was smart in a brick colored and white-striped, tailored frock, with a brimmed sports hat to match. The young Bolivian sculptress wore pink. Mrs. Burke set off her white silk dress with an enormous black cartwheel hat and Miss Vernon had chosen a black and white print.

Pretty young Senora de Guachalla was on hand, wearing a pale blue sports dress and a white straw hat. At Senorita Shaw's left sat Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of the Assistant Attorney General. They carried on an animated conversation with Mrs. Herbert Feis, wife of the Economic Adviser to the State Department.

Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, just returned from a trip to the Argentine, was smart in navy blue, with a navy blue and white beret trimmed with veiling. She chatted with Mrs. Ernest G. Draper.

Other guests included Senora de Pardo, wife of the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy; Mrs. Livingston Satterthwaite, Mrs. Carl N. Spaeth, Miss Mary Winslow, Dr. Kathryn McHale, general director of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. Charl H. Farman, Mrs. Eve Garrette, of New York; Mrs. A. V. Howell, Miss Gwladys Jones, Mrs. Alexander Kerr, Mrs. James K. McClintock, Miss Mary H. Smith, Miss Sue Shelton White, Senorita Nilda Nunez del Prado, sister of the sculptress; Mrs. William C. Van Vleck and Mrs. Marion Hines Taylor.

Roosevelts Entertain Disabled War Veterans at Garden Party

By Elizabeth Henney

Gay, candy-striped marquees dotted the White House lawn yesterday; the late afternoon sun slanted through the trees and shrubbery and made rainbows in the fountains' spray; the Marine Band, in colorful uniforms, played gay tunes from an improvised stand, and hundreds of disabled veterans were honored at the annual garden party given for them by President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Early in the afternoon dozens of great gray buses roared into the White House south grounds, wheel chairs appeared magically, nurses and attendants moved deftly and carefully and in no time at all a wheel chair brigade of veterans had formed lines on either side of the bandstands, giving the effect of a great "U" extending from the south portico to almost the center of the grounds.

Promptly at 4 o'clock there was a ruffle of drums and the band rippled into the strains of "Hail To the Chief." Round the corner swung the White House open car, and as it slowly made the tour of the wheel-chair brigade, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt waved gaily to the men who formed it, those of every race and color, who nevertheless fought under the United States flag during the last World War, and to this day bear the scars and wounds of that conflict.

As the White House car swung back toward the President's office, Mrs. Roosevelt got out and circulated among the groups, stopping for a cheery greeting or a brief chat from time to time. She was gowned in black chiffon with a large hat to match and wore a string of pearls. This, by the way, is the first year that she has not had a receiving line, possibly due to her crowded schedule, for by 4:30 she had left the grounds to change and catch a 5 o'clock plane.

Cabinet Members And Wives Attend

But the party went merrily on for fully an hour after that. Under the red and white striped marquees were large tables, centered with pink roses, where attendants dispensed pink ice cream, cakes, cookies and coffee. At other small tables around the grounds were large crystal bowls of lemon punch.

Cabinet officers and their wives mingled with Gray Ladies, Red Cross nurses and officials of the Veterans' Bureau, many of whom attended. A number of very young looking disabled enlisted men were noticed in the wheel chair brigade, and caused a bit of wonderment until it was explained that though veterans were the guests of honor, all service men from the local veteran's hospitals, who had been disabled in line of duty, also were invited.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Center of Attention

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who was gowned in a blue-flowered print, was the center of much attention during the party, as was Miss Mabel Boardman, national secretary of the American Red Cross. She also was gowned in a gay spring print.

A number of cabinet members and their wives were on hand for the greater part of the afternoon. Both the Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace were there, she wearing a dark-blue sheer frock with a large patterned gay print design, and a Navy and white sailor hat. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, was gowned in a pastel print fashioned with a small cape of the same material. With it she wore a white hat trimmed with a green feathered bird. Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, also was there, wearing a gray-blue print, as were the Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson (she in a light pastel print); Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox (Mrs. Knox is out of town), and Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard, in a green and white polka dot print.

Jacksons' Son Home From College

Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General, was telling friends that just as she left the house, her car passed that of their son William, arriving home for spring vacation from Yale University, so she was hurrying back to greet him. She also added that William had been in England at the beginning of the Battle of London and had served in the British Ambulance Corps, before getting passage back to the United States. His duties at that time were to go out after air raids to pick up casualties and bring them to hospitals.

Others noted were Mrs. James C. Magee, wife of the Surgeon General of the Army; Brig. Gen. Shelley U. Marietta, Assistant to the Surgeon General, and Mrs. Marietta; Gen. Frank T. Hines, directors of the Veterans' Bureau; Mrs. Margaret Lower, director of the Red Cross house at Walter Reed hospital; Miss Ruth McLellan, national president of the Women's Overseas Service League; Col. and Mrs. John Thomas Taylor and hundreds more.

Watsons' Party Draws Throngs Of All Ages

Originally planned as a younger-set party, the buffet supper given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth N. Watson drew a sizeable number from all age groups. The fete, which took place at the Watson home on Massachusetts Avenue, was one in a series that the Watsons are giving this season.

Small tables were set up in the drawing room, the dining room and on the terrace; and a variety of spring blosoms decorated the house. Following the dinner, a number of additional guests came in.

Among those present were Justice Frank Murphy, Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, the Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Scilingo, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Peter Smithers of the British Embassy, Baron and Baroness von Seidler, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Moulton, Arthur Vandenberg, jr., James Mitchell, Mrs. Natalie Keeney Phillips, James Cox and several others.

Mrs. Putnam Is Honored

In compliment to her stepdaughter, Mrs. H. Gardner Putman of Oakland, Calif., Mrs. Frank H. Buck, wife of Representative Buck, of California, entertained at a large tea yesterday afternoon in her home on Kirke Street, Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Putman and her husband arrived in Washington several days ago for an indefinite stay. Accompanying them was Miss Elizabeth Erskine of Piedmont, Calif., who also was present at yesterday's party.

Receiving informally in the flower-decked drawing room of her home, Mrs. Buck wore a shirt-waist frock of dark blue crepe. Her guest of honor was smartly turned out in red and white checked gingham.

The lace-covered tea table was centered with a silver wine bucket from which sprouted a large bouquet of white peonies.

Among those assisting the hostess were Mrs. Robert Doughton, Mrs. Clarence Lea, Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, Mrs. Harry Lane Englebright, Mrs. Thomas Rolph, Mrs. Albert Carter, Mrs. Jerry Voorhis, Mrs. Harry Sheppard, Mrs. Edouard V. Izac, Mrs. Justin Miller, Mrs. Frances Cabell Brown, Mrs. Helen M. Moodie, Mrs. Dan Barbey and Mrs. James Fitzpatrick.

Generally assisting were Mrs. Verne Simmons, Mrs. Jack Tolan, jr., Miss Erskine and Miss Patricia Grady. About 200 women attended the party.

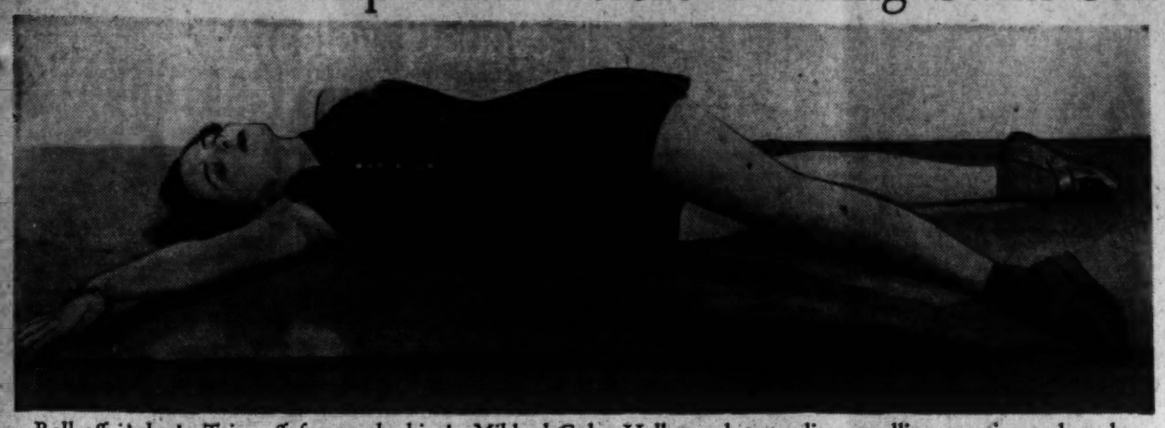
Roll Off the Hip Rolls Before Donning Swim Suit



Roll off inches! Trim off fat on the hips! Mildred Coles, Hollywood star, relies on rolling exercises to keep her hips slim and sleek. Above, lying flat on the floor, she rolls first to the right, swinging left leg over, then to the left, swinging her right leg over. A good exercise to combat "desk chair spread."

'Desk Chair Spread' Is Easy To Gain, but Hard to Lose

By Ida Jean Kain

WHENEVER you consistently overeat you can count on gaining in the hips. And, conversely, it is no more than reasonable to expect that this measurement would be the first affected by a diet. But that is not the way it works.

Unless you back up your diet with exercises to smooth this measurement, it may be the last to show a weight loss. If you are to count on streamlining the hips on schedule, your exercises must be planned to wear down the fat in this area.

Since the hips may bow out at the sides, assume a desk-chair spread, or take on a pronounced bustle effect, the exercise program should be fairly comprehensive. It is not as difficult as it may seem, however, for all you need is the right technique. You can roll off the hip bulges with exercises like this one:

Side-to-Side Roll

Assume a semisitting position on floor with weight partially supported on the hands and forearms. Now, bend the knees and hold feet off the floor, up near the buttocks. Keep this position throughout the exercise.

All set? Give yourself a vigorous shove with the right hand and roll away over on the side of the left hip and thigh. You may find that you get more momentum by flinging the right hand over to the floor on left side. Then shove with left hand and roll in opposite direction, over on right hip and thigh, flinging left hand over.

In this side-to-side roll you hit every one of those stubborn pads along the hipline. Begin with 30 counts and very gradually increase to 75, then to 100. This one exercise could almost be counted upon to solve your hip problems, but if you didn't vary your routine occasionally, it would tend to lose its effectiveness. Besides, you may need a more active streamliner for the gluteus maximus muscles on the backs of the hips.

Quite Effective

A very effective and not strenuous exercise is to lie face downward on the floor, arms up on floor overhead, legs straight down. Holding legs straight, raise first the left, then the right, leg high in air from the hip. Hold for a second and slowly lower to the floor. Alternate for ten counts for the first few days, then increase gradually until you are doing 50. Those two exercises will make an excellent beginning for your hip slimming.

Mary Haworth's Mail

During Four Years' Marriage, Woman Has Tried In Vain to Overcome Husband's Dislike of Her; What Can She Do To "Change His Outlook?"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Can you please advise me how to straighten out my marriage a bit? My husband is always telling me that he doesn't love me any more; that we didn't know each other well enough before we married (we went together less than six months, and took to each other readily); that marriage ties one down; that he "has not been the same since;" and that I make him nervous when I am around, although why he doesn't know. He will not take me anywhere, except to visit friends or his family—and this but seldom. He says he doesn't have any fun with me. He has stopped going to church except occasionally; and this makes me feel terrible, as I infer that I am the cause of it.

We have been married four years and I wanted a baby long ago, but because of my husband's attitude, I have never directly suggested it. He tells me I am not the woman to be the mother of his children; he hints of separation; says that I should "get busy and find someone else, if I want to raise a family," etc. I am not interested in finding anybody else. I want to make a go of this marriage, and am willing to do all I can to preserve it.

However, we are decidedly separated—even though living in the same house. There is so little laughter in our home. And while I never question where he has been—when he goes out alone—he doesn't seem any happier for being free to come and go as he pleases. We have no financial problems, and in my belief, we have much in common. He is a good man. Almost everyone likes him immediately; he is a hard worker; is clever and could go far—but he seems to think marriage is holding him back; or perhaps I am.

I have told him he is at liberty to go whenever he wishes, if that will make him happy. But he is not sure that is the solution. Do you think my leaving would make him happier? I feel so unwanted and am beginning to think it is the only thing to do. I should so much like to see a change in his outlook,—so anything you can suggest will be appreciated. Sincerely yours,

N. K.

Stultifying Relationship Should Be Abandoned

DEAR N. K.: In view of your husband's helpless aversion to your society, obviously the greatest kindness you could do him would be to turn him loose,—not with the air of one making a martyr's complete surrender of hopes of earthly happiness, but as one who has reached a calm decision to put an end to this mutually stultifying and slightly ridiculous situation.

You say you have told him "he is at liberty to go whenever he wishes," but that he replies "he is not sure that is the solution." While that rejoinder might be constructed as implying he doesn't know what he wants, which in turn might suggest that he is as happy with you as he would be anywhere,—I think it more likely he sticks around from a sense of remorse.

I suppose he ("good man" that he is) suffers pretty deeply from a sense of having "done you wrong," all along the line,—and "hasn't the heart," (as the saying goes), to take the initiative in casting you aside; particularly when he sees how you cling to him, yearn toward him, hopefully suffer your unloved state and continuously exert yourself to try to compensate to him for his soul sickness with the marriage.

While, from one angle, your never-say-die performance might seem to be mature and fine, unselfish and courageous, everything, indeed, that is commendable—there is also the possibility that your seemingly magnanimity is a low form of cunning; a quicksand type of trap-setting; a sanctimonious ruse intended to deprive him of any clear-cut, black-and-white reasons, any demonstrable grounds, for taking himself off. In my opinion, supposedly all-suffering meekness is a quality not to be trusted. There is deadly determination latent and concealed in the personality of him (or her) who smilingly and unprotestingly accepts continuous affront from another. Remember the character of Uriah Heep in "David Copperfield?"

I should guess this marriage was entirely your doing, in the sense that you fixed on the man as the one you wanted and intended to have for husband, and drove inexorably toward that goal, roping him in with a technique as insidious as that by which you now seek to hold him,—even at the risk of ruining your life and his. But what possible good can come of your hanging on to a man who doesn't love you, can't abide your company, gives evidence of being ashamed of you socially and refuses to have children by you?

A woman of proper self respect, one truly generous, really concerned with giving happiness to the man she professed to love, wouldn't remain in a situation such as this any longer than it took her to get a line on the man's feelings. But you have spent four years playing dog-in-the-manger,—trying to convince your husband and yourself that you are a saint and he a heel. So, to repeat,—my advice is: let him go. And if you can bring yourself to think in terms of his happiness, his peace of mind,—give him release in chin-up, self confident manner, as one who is as eager as he is to write off the mistake and turn over a new leaf. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Old Wives

I

"I hear Estelle Mink's going to marry Ted Tapp."

"Yes . . . though I don't see how she's ever going to live on his salary."

"Me either . . . especially after the wonderful home and everything's she's had."

"She'll certainly find things a lot different."

"I understand her father and mother are simply sick about it . . . but then of course you can't tell young people anything."

"I'll say you can't—nowadays."

II

"Isn't it terrible about Marcia Goode?"

"What?"

"Marrying George Stepp."

"No! Why he's been married before!"

"I know it. And has three children!"

"Not three! I thought it was only two."

"It's three! I know it's three!"

"Well I simply can't understand why a lovely girl like Marcia wants to throw herself away on a man like that."

"Me either. It just looks like girls will take anybody—just to be married."

III

"I hear Adelaide Smart's given up her job."

"No! That wonderful position she had?"

"Yes! To marry some man out in New Mexico—on a ranch."

"Why—why I can't believe it! I always understood she got a perfectly enormous salary."

"Yes and look at the clothes she's had and the trips she's taken."

"I know. And now she's giving up all that to go out there."

"Well honestly girls never know when they're well off!"

IV

"Are you going anywhere this summer?"

"No, my daughter and her children are coming."

"I thought all your children were boys."

"Oh, I had a daughter by my first husband. You see I eloped when I was 16."

"How interesting! Well I'm going to visit my son by my first husband in California this summer."

"How interesting."

"Yes and then on my way back I'm going to stop in Colorado to see my daughter."

"Is she by your first husband or your present one?"

"Neither. She's by my second husband."

New Fabric in Summer Washables Won't Shrink, Fade Nor Sag: Used in All Types of Outfits

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

A boon to those who prefer washable summer outfits is a new fabric resembling our old friend, spun rayon. This material meets all the non-shrink, non-sag and non-fade requirements a woman would ever want. It is completely washable, too!

What is more, this fabric was tested by the American Institute of Laundries before it was made into outfits. It has been scrubbed, dried and ironed, just as a woman would have treated it herself. And if the super-washing of a laundry is preferred, the fabric will pass it without a whimper.

All types of outfits, from general wear to casual play clothes, are made up in this washable fabric. There are classic one-piece shirtwaist dresses, suits, shorts and slack ensembles—such as the one at right. The grand feature of the slacks and suits outfits is that they are interchangeable. For more sedate affairs the slacks may be exchanged for a box-pleated skirt of the same material. This outfit, worn by Barbara Gleason, boasts a long jacket with saddle pockets and the new narrow pegleg slacks without a cuff. It is available in luggage tan, green, maise, rose and blue. The blouse of men's shirting adds a crisp touch. The jacket looks equally well with skirt or slacks.

Proper Care Will Prevent Skin Ills of Summer

Memorial Day marks the opening of the outdoor season. The summer should begin with an ounce of prevention. Yet, too few women take the precaution of protecting their house and office sheltered skins and consequently they suffer from parched, coarsened skins or long-to-be-remembered burns.

All this might be avoided with proper care of the skin. To make this routine for summer skin possible, a widely known cosmetician has combined a complete kit containing Cream Violay, Tanalogne and Face Lotion 35. She calls it the "Cabana Kit."

The Cream Violay is a double purpose cream. It may be used for quick summer cleansing and also as a foundation base on hot, sticky days. "Tanalogne," a clear, sparkling body cologne, filters out burning rays and produces a controlled tan. Lotion F. 35 is designed to keep face powder dry and smooth on hot, sultry days. It comes in becoming summer shades and may be used on the arms, neck and body.

Learn to Dance Tango, Conga

"I'd rather dance a waltz with you than anyone on earth!" What wouldn't you give to hear such praise from your favorite dancing partner?

Well, you can, if you'll polish your steps at home with directions and footprint diagrams.

Then, good-bye to saying "excuse me" at every other step, to getting into a fearful stew before a dance—wondering whether you'll be able to keep up with your partner. Then you will win compliments galore.

That graceful dipping motion that the really expert dancers get in the waltz is all a matter of learning how. On the first accented beat of each measure you simply take an extra-long step, bending the supporting knee slightly to help you keep your balance.

And, of course, you want to become an expert at the conga, rumba and other smart "cafe society" favorites!

You never lack for dates when you can dance well. Our 40-page booklet, Social Dancing Self-Taught, gives diagrams and directions for the conga, rumba, tango and lindy hop—as well as for the waltz, fox-trot, westchester and shag. Has basic steps and variations, pointers on leading and following.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, Social Dancing Self-Taught, to THE NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

McNutt Weighs Merger Of NYA and CCC

A plan to combine the activities of National Youth Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corp either by legislation or administrative action is understood to be under consideration at the Federal Security Agency. Administrator Paul McNutt is reported to have hired an administrative and budget expert from the Budget Bureau to work out a plan that would bring the two youth agencies closer together. The Budget Bureau official will report to his new job on June 1. Consolidation of the youth agencies has been recommended by the American Youth Commission among others.

Will Clayton, deputy Federal Loan administrator, is being considered as head of the proposed agency of economic warfare. Jesse Jones, the man of many jobs, is understood to be pushing him for economic chieftain. The executive order that would set up the agency is understood to be drafted and ready for the President's signature, but the President hasn't decided on whom to appoint.

Against Clayton is the report that he was a contributor to the Liberty League, an anti-Roosevelt organization. He is also a good possibility to be appointed RFC chairman to succeed Emil Schram. Jesse Jones has more jobs than any other official and he may be given another one. It's rumored that the office of defense transportation may be transferred to RFC. Ralph Budd is transportation commissioner and his is the only office remaining of the original defense commission. He is reliably reported to have offered his resignation. It had been anticipated that the transportation division would be moved to either OPM or OEM.

Charles Wyzanski, former Labor solicitor who is an alternate member of the National Mediation Board, is reported to be lined up for a key Federal post, probably in the Justice Department. . . . Representative Cole of New York stopped the House from considering a bill yesterday that would have authorized the War Department to pay overtime to its field employes. The department wants the legislation so that it can pay double time to employes to forego vacations.

Make no mistake about it, if you get a job with Mayor LaGuardia's Office of Civilian Defense you'll have plenty of work to do. His honor said as much yesterday when he said it wouldn't be necessary for his Washington staff to have black and white ties in their wardrobes. "No one has to work here," the Mayor cracked, "but those who do will have to work." The Mayor seemed to be of the opinion that he'd need quite a large staff. Eighty per cent of the staff, he estimated, would be volunteers. A discipline division will be set up to keep the volunteers in line and a bureau of facts and figures will be established to furnish information.

LaGuardia wouldn't say whether Adolf Berle, Assistant Secretary of State, would join him at OCD. Berle worked for him in New York City. The only employe assigned to LaGuardia is Mrs. Stuart Godwin who was a former secretary to Harry Hopkins. It's believed the Mayor will soon sign an order that will bring Frank Bane's State and local division under his supervision. Bane is expected to resign. LaGuardia said his office would work closely with the health, welfare, and recreation offices in the Federal Security Agency. The Mayor will have offices temporarily in the Federal Reserve Building. Meantime, a search is going on to find adequate space for the setup.

Federal Works Boss John Carmody says any contractor is a sucker for paying a fee in an attempt to get a Federal Works contract. . . . Miss National Defense will be chosen May 31 at a dance of defense workers at the Kennedy-Warren. Probable finalists for the title are Helen Clark, Claire Perella, Jane Gough, Frances Moran and Jerry Hardy. . . . AFGE's Adjutant General's lodge will give a minstrel show and dance Saturday night at the Press Club. . . . The conference report on the Post Office Appropriation Bill provides funds to hire 635 additional inspectors.

Emil Schram, who quit the RFC to become president of the stock exchange, was given this send off by Representative Thom of Ohio: "Goodby Emil, and remember that the only good Democrat in the stock exchange is probably an office boy. . . . Isadore Lubin is an economic reporter to the President and Harry Hopkins.

Bridge Safer From Bombs Than Tunnel

By Howard F. Wentworth

Post Staff Writer

A bomb hurtling from the skies over the Potomac River could do more harm to a tunnel beneath the water than to a bridge above, in the opinion of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of District highways.

He told this to the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds yesterday as hearings opened on a bill by Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, to authorize an appropriation of $25,000 to study the feasibility of a combination bridge and tunnels spanning the Potomac.

In answer to questions from committee members, Whitehurst explained it would take a "direct hit" to damage a bridge, while a bomb exploding in the water near a tunnel could "put the whole thing out of commission."

Describing provisions of his measure, Representative Smith urged the committee to first decide upon the immediate necessity for bridges or tunnels and "argue about the locations and method of financing later."

Cites Traffic Increase

He said much has happened since the bill was first introduced last January, citing the rapid increase in traffic congestion due to national defense activities on both sides of the river.

"Both Washington and sections directly across the Potomac are becoming overcrowded," Smith said. "Defense activities are going to make things worse instead of better, and I venture to hope that the committee will consider desirability of new river crossings and recommend necessary legislation."

The bill would set up a special commission to study the projects and calls specifically for a railroad tunnel from a point near the bird sanctuary on Mount Vernon Boulevard to connect with present tracks leading to Union Station.

The measure also provides for automobile trucking tunnels connecting with a point in the vicinity of D and E Streets Southwest and for a vehicular boulevard crossing the river by bridge to a point near Fourteenth and D Streets Southwest.

Separate From Survey

"I am not advocating any type of bridge or tunnel or any location," said Smith. "I am only interested in seeing that adequate crossings are provided."

The legislation is entirely separate from recommendations for a $9,000,000 tube crossing from Alexandria to Shepherd's Landing included in the recent Whitehurst highway planning survey report.

Whitehurst agreed with Representative A. J. Elliott (Democrat), California, that the proposed new river crossings would be of vital importance to defense.

"The crossings," said Whitehurst, "are very essential to the Federal Government in its national defense program, and projects in this bill could be classified as out-and-out defense items."

Responding to a query from Chairman Fritz G. Lanham (Democrat), Texas, as to whether a toll charge is anticipated should the tunnels or bridges be authorized, Whitehurst retorted:

"I am personally opposed to any toll charges on approaches to the National Capital."

Hearings on the measure will continue at 10 a. m. today.

Recreation Hearing to Quiz Park Chief on Concessions

Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks, is scheduled to be questioned by the District Recreation Subcommittee about the policy of the parks office on concession leases and recreation control, it was learned last night.

Representative John F. Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, announced that Root will be asked to testify at an early hearing of his subcommittee which has under consideration two legislative proposals for changes in the District's recreation administration.

At the same time, Hunter expressed belief that any recreation bill reported by the subcommittee probably would carry a provision transferring control of city recreation areas from the parks office to the District.

One of the bills before the subcommittee is intended to centralize recreation control ni a nine-member board dominiated by citizens. The parks superintendent, Hunter said, should be carried as an ex-officio member of the board, as provided in the bill, for the purpose of aiding coordination of play facilities in the parks with those of the District.

Amendment Urged

Disposition of Hunter and Representatives Stephen Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, and William G. Stratton (Republican), of Illinois, to amend the bill to give the District title to recreation lands now controlled by the parks office was clearly demonstrated in their questioning of witnesses at a subcommittee hearing yesterday.

The witnesses were Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the Park and Planning Commission; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, and Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

Settle explained the operations of the Capper-Cramton Act under which the commission is purchasing $16,000,000 in park and recreation lands. Of 26 major recreation areas planned, Settle said, 24 have been purchased, with $2,000,000 remaining to be spent out of an original allotment of $7,000,000 for this purpose.

The lands are in control of the parks office, it was brought out, although the purchase price is reimbursable by the District at the rate of $300,000 a year and $3,500,000 has been paid back.

Hunter pointed out that the bill, recommended to Congress by the President's Recreation Committee, contains a provision by which the parks office, the District and the school board retain title to recreation properties. Stratton and Bolles maintained that proponents of the bill, represented by the witnesses, were depending on cooperation of board members and not legislation to accomplish centralization of control.

Asks Safeguards

Hunter declared that he felt confident of cooperation of citizen and District official members of the board, but "would eliminate the possibility of the superintendent of parks turning over a swimming pool or some other facility to some private operator."

The statement recalled an earlier subcommittee hearing at which S. G. Leoffler, holder of a five-year lease for operation of public golf courses here, admitted to paying himself a yearly salary of $18,200.

"The parks office has taken upon itself the right to lease properties used by the District and paid for by the District to concessionaires at a profit," Hunter declared.

"The superintendent of parks should be called in here to explain some of his actions."

Settle explained that Root has been superintendent only a short time. He declared that he had "no authority to say the superintendent of parks would like to deviate from this bill" and expressed the hope the bill would be passed.

Could Amend Later

"If experience shows it (the bill) doesn't work let us come back here and get legislation to improve it," Settle said. "This bill represents the first time these agencies (the public schools, the District and park officials) have been able to get together."

Mrs. Doyle told the committee that she felt the bill "will insure for Washington a proper recreational system."

Bolles asked Dr. Ballou if he saw "any difficulties" due to the power of parks superintendent. Ballou replied:

"I would feel that this is an unsatisfactory arrangement. It is my opinion that the result of this bill is not going to be a unified recreation program unless the superintendent of parks cooperates as fully as the District Commissioners cooperate.

"It is essential that this bill should set up conditions that will insure use of parks properties by the board."

Girl, 3, Fatally Burned Playing With Matches

Three-year-old Joan Magill, of 204 Cromwell Terrace Northeast, was fatally burned early yesterday when her bed clothing became ignited while she and her 5-year-old brother, William, were playing with matches.

According to the children's uncle, William Woolls, the matches were taken from the top of a dresser near the girl's crib. When Joan's clothing blazed, her screams attracted her father, Stewart Magill, department store employe, who wrapped the child in a blanket and called a Casualty Hospital ambulance.

Mrs. Magill is confined in Sibley Hospital, having given birth to her fourth child.

Fort Davis Citizens Back Traffic Plan

The Whitehurst traffic improvement program was indorsed in principle last night by the Fort Davis Citizens Association, which recommended a number of additions to the program

The organization suggested immediate elimination of the bottleneck at Pennsylvania and Minnesota Avenues Southeast; extension of Branch Avenue to Minnesota Avenue; construction of a bridge across the Anacostia river at East Capitol Street; erection of a bridge across the Texas Avenue ravine, at Ridge Road; opening of Q or R Streets, between Pennsylvania and Minnesota Avenues

J. W. Baxter was named chairman of a committee to study further the Whitehurst report. Serving with him are W. D. Mulkey and J. E. Matthews.

Mrs. T. J. Lynch and Mrs. Robert Swain were named representatives to the city-wide committee for investigating defense housing conditions; Mrs. Edward B. Morris, E. M. Schaff, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Lynch were appointed a committee on voluntary defense registration.

The association sent Col. David McCoach, former Engineer Commissioner recently called into active Army service, a letter of appreciation for his services to the District.

Arkansas Ave. Community

A protest against diversion of parking meter revenues from the highway fund to the general fund was registered last night by the Arkansas Avenue Community Association, meeting at the Telford Buffeteria, Fourteenth and Decatur Streets Northwest.

A proposed 2-cent gas tax increase under the Whitehurst traffic and highway improvement plan also was opposed. Approval of proposed staggering of Federal paydays was voted.

Frank Y. Pollard was appointed chairman of the public utilities committee to succeed Maj. James A Purcell, resigned. Dr. John W Dudley was named chairman of the program and entertainment committee to succeed Theodore C. Lewis, resigned.

Police Inspector Arthur H. Miller gave a talk on traffic.

Benefit Set Sunday

A benefit recital on behalf of Opportunity House will be presented Sunday afternoon at 5 p. m. in the Y. M. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest.

4-Hour Exploration Enough For Two D. C. Boys and Girl

Three erstwhile young explorers were safely back home last night, after having been missing for four hours, the length of time it took to get the wanderlust out of their systems.

Buddy Watkins, 4, of 3411 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest; Betty Jane Sowders, 8, of 3622 Norton Place Northwest, and Jeffry Perley, 7, of 3611 Norton Place, set out on a camping expedition about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Jeffry carried a blanket and one loaf of bread.

Frantic relatives began searching for them near nightfall. Police were notified. Between 8 and 9, the three came straggling home, having decided that they had enough "comping out" for one day. Jeffry's household was asleep last night when a reporter tried to get his version of the adventure.

But across the street, Betty Jane was reading Grimm's Fairy Tales, for a taste of synthetic adventure. She wasn't sure just where they had been, but she thought it was in the woodland near the Bureau of Standards. Jeffry, she said, suggested the outing and furnished the supplies. He wanted to build a campfire to toast the bread, but she discouraged the idea, she said.

"We thought we saw a forest fire, and we saw a pool which, I guess, had moccasin snakes in it," she said, her eyes widening.

"I guess we started getting afraid when it started getting dark. We weren't sure which way to go, but we walked until we saw a firehouse and asked a fireman the way."

She assured her mother, Mrs. F. D. Sowders, that she would do no more exploring. Boy Scouts in the neighborhood had been planning a hike, and that may have given Jeffry the idea, she said.

Buddy Watkins had been put to bed supperless by his mother, Mrs. Alice Watkins, with the admonition that he is too young to be an explorer yet.

Woman Is Slashed; Man Shot in Back

Shot in the back near his home yesterday, Joseph Norris, colored, 42, of 57 Fenton Court Northwest, was in serious condition at Casualty Hospital last night.

Police arrested a 30-year-old colored woman, who applied at the hospital about the same time for treatment of knife wounds. She admitted, police stated, firing shots

Income Tax Gain May Be $500,000

Increase Expected To Offset Part Of D. C. Defense Expansion Costs

Unexpectedly heavy income tax collections may keep the District government ahead in the race against mounting defense expenditures, the District Appropriations Subcommittee was told yesterday.

Edward A. Dent, District tax assessor, revealed that the income tax may be expected to produce $500,000 more than last year on the basis of current collections. Dent appeared before the subcommittee as a score of District officials began to lay before Congress a mass of facts and figures on the city's 1942 budget estimates.

Meanwhile, Representative George E. Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, subcommittee chairman, called for a 2-cent increase in the gasoline tax to finance a "real" highway program.

Mahon made no direct mention of the $44,000,000 Whitehurst traffic improvement program and emphasized that his subcommittee is without authority to recommend tax legislation. It was learned, however, that the subject of gasoline taxes was discussed by the subcommittee.

Members of the subcommittee, it was learned, closely examined District tax officers in the closed hearings. Jo V. Morgan, the District's one-man Board of Tax Appeals, was quizzed about tax assessments.

Morgan told the subcommittee that real estate assessments are 90 per cent of values in residential areas at the fringe of the city, 100 per cent on residences elsewhere and 125 per cent on downtown property.

Morgan was asked what percentage of real estate taxpayers appeal to him for refunds and he is reported to have replied that the number is "negligible."

The subcommittee's interest in assessments and taxes was considered significant in view of attacks by House members on real estate levies here during debate on the Overton formula ten days ago. The formula would have produced a Federal payment of more than $9,000,000.

During testimony of Superintendent of Insurance Albert F. Jordan, it was reported, subcommittee members declared that fire insurance rates in the District should be lowered. Fire losses in Washington, they stated, are lower than in any other United States city.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'That Hamilton Woman,' At Palace, Vivid Romance

Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier Star In Alexander Korda's Sumptuous Filming Of One of History's Famous Loves

"THAT HAMILTON WOMAN!" Alexander Korda picturization based on the romance of Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson, costarring Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier, with Alan Mowbray, Sara Allgood, Gladys Cooper, Henry Wilcoxon, Heather Angel, Halliwell Hobbes, Gilbert Emery, Miles Mander, Ronald Sinclair, Luis Alberni and Norma Drury. Directed by Mr. Korda. At the Palace Theater

THERE ARE TIMES when "That Hamilton Woman," current on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, almost suffocates itself in its own grandeur. It is one of Alexander Korda's most opulent productions, heavily interlarded with grandiose effects that occasionally overpower the personalized story of a notorious love affair of the eighteenth century. The dramatic aspects of the work, however, are considerably more than competently salvaged by the presence of Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier in the costellar roles.

BELL

In this new visualization of a romance that first was pictured back in the old silent days with Corinne Griffith—now Mrs. George Preston Marshall, of Washington—and Victor Varconi in the stellar assignments, Miss Leigh has been given the dominant part. Her Emma Hart, who becomes Lady Hamilton, supplies the motivating spark of all of the drama's most vital sequences. Lord Nelson, of course, still is the hero of Trafalgar and a sea conqueror feted by the powers his prowess as a fighter has served best, but that is only background for the unveiling of a passionate and vivid tale of illicit love that provided the juiciest gossip in European court circles in the late 1700's.

A trifle ponderous now and again, "That Hamilton Woman" still is an arresting love story, illuminated by the sterling performances of perhaps the most popular romantic pair on the contemporary screen.

Mr. Korda, with characteristic sagacity, has surrounded his stars with a practically all-English cast. Alan Mowbray, as the British Ambassador to Naples; Sara Allgood, as Lady Hamilton's mother; Gladys Cooper, Henry Wilcoxon, Heather Angel, Halliwell Hobbes, Gilbert Emery, Miles Mander, Ronald Sinclair, Luis Alberni and Norma Drury all contribute generously to the spectacular excellence of one of the season's "big" pictures.

The new bill at the Palace is augmented by a considerable number of supplementary attractions, some good, some merely indifferent. Among the latter, for the first time, I should place Pete Smith's "Aeronutics," a carnival of stunt flying that seemed to this observer to have slight point and scant humor. The cartoon comedy is "The Goose Goes South" and there is a long and meaty newsreel to make up anything one has missed in his newspaper reading. A good bill, but a little heavy for these temperatures.

James Stewart, Heidt's Knights Star in Capitol's "Pot o' Gold"

"POT O' GOLD." James Roosevelt-United Artists picturization of a story "idea" by Hayden Roth Evens and Robert Brilmayer, with James Stewart, Paulette Goddard, Horace Heidt and his Musical Knights, Charles Winninger, Mary Gordon, Frank Melton, Donna Wood, Dick Hogan, Aldrich Bowker, James Burke and Larry Cotton. Music by Dave Franklin, Lou Forbes, Henry Russell, Fred Rose, Hy Heath, Vee Lawnhurst and Mack David. Directed by George Marshall. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

In "Pot o' Gold" you'll find more juicy kernels of golden bantam than nuggets of the genuine article. The Capital's new film, as you may have heard, is James Roosevelt's first production for United Artists and was "inspired" by the radio program whose hoped-for telephone tinkle has kept people away from theaters one night a week, or so some managers are said to have said.

If you expect tradition-shattering from Film Novice James you won't find it in "Pot o' Gold." No precedent-breaking Roosevelt, he. The story is that hoary fable about the impoverished orchestra that only needed a break, the apoplectic sponsor who hated music and the inevitable triumph of all concerned. While Horace Heidt and his Musical Knights have important parts in the action and sound track, it's James Stewart who gives the picture its only sincerity, bringing to his uninspired role that natural friendliness that's more of a knack than it looks.

Grade "A" for Stewart

One undeniable quality of "Pot o' Gold" is its unpretentiousness. But while that one virtue is enough to make a reviewer quail before condemning it as complete balderdash, it is scarcely enough to make dashing entertainment.

Naturally, there are spots for Heidt and his musical tricks, and some of them are nicely entertaining. Charlie Winninger works fiendishly hard at his trade of the excitable oldster and Mary Gordon literally wallows in balarney. Paulette Goddard is merely pretty as the girl and Stewart carries the heaviest burden lightly.

Wondrous, Whacky Nonchalants

On the Capitol stage this reporter found the Nonchalants the sock act in a group of turns that did nicely with yesterday's first house. But then that little fellow who remarks querulously that he hates acrobats has always been one of our favorite people. This tumble trio hasn't changed its routine, but it remains a joyful ten minutes. Distinctly whack.

Bert Fronman highlights his headline turn with a Gershwin medley. Carroll and Howe click with their cross-talk and Johnny Mack opens the "Knick Knacks" with smooth, agile tapping. He's a performer with style and an improved one over his last starts here. The Rockets and Ann Pritchard dance their pretty steps.

Sam Jack Kaufman lets his boys indulge in another "doodles" session—improvisations to you music masters—and they're fun for the house as well as for the boys. Art Brown has a pleasant medley that raises more larynxes than he has in some time.

At Any Rate, She Was a Beauty

VIVIEN LEIGH

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 22.

When Cecil B. DeMille, in connection with the promotion of his picture "The Crusades," conducted a contest for all junior and senior high school students in the United States, he offered a prize of $500 for the best essay on the Crusades, said amount to be deposited at any college or university chosen by the winner.

HOPPER

Out of thousands of entrants the winner was Bonnie Bump, who lived in a little lumber town, Loyalton, Calif. She chose Stanford. This June she graduates with highest honors. Aside from the $500 prize, she has made her way through college by doing stenography and waiting on tables.

During Bonnie's spring vacation recently, she came to Hollywood for the main purpose of thanking Mr. De Mille personally for having made her education possible. She called at the studio, was told the message would be relayed to Mr. De Mille, and that she'd hear from him the following day. She never heard.

Will you tell me why studios who spend hundreds of thousands annually to foster goodwill, don't follow through—instead of letting that goodwill die on the vine in this way?

One of my assistants, Fred Banker, since joining the draftees at Fort MacArthur, has been made a first-class private with a stripe, after two months' service. He and Hank Levy, former writer on the Citizen News, started a paper called "The Battery-A Bugle," and their slogan is "Not a sour note." Freddie's column is called "Battalion Blah" . . . He tells me the man in the bunk next to him grinds his teeth nights till it sounds like a Stuka dive bomber, but Freddie's found the answer—rubber ear plugs.

He thinks every man in America should take the training course for a year. Freddie's always been troubled with his feet. He walked 23 miles the other day, with 68 pounds on his back, and his only liability was never heard. I'm certain Mr. DeMille never got the message, because had he received it, he would have had a royal welcome. And knowing him as well as I do, I'm sure he would have arranged to go to Stanford and smile on her on graduation day.

Claude Rains would like to have more dastardly roles—he likes 'em. "It's an escape," says he. "A fellow has to try to be nice in real life, and it's a relief to be a blackguard in pictures." Right now Claude's being saint-like in "Heaven Can Wait," and he says it's an awful strain.

The Campfire Girls of Minnesota, numbering 10,000, give an 'Oscarette"—a miniature Campfire Girl—for the best picture of the year. This year they had to give two—one for that "Wind" picture, and the other for "Rebecca."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 22 (INS).—I won't attempt to pronounce the name of Voldemar Vetlugini. It's too much of a tongue twister. But the spelling is correct—I hope. At any rate Vetlugini is a writer with an eye to beauty. He has selected the prettiest girls in America for models and magazine covers — among them Kay Aldridge, Jinx Falkenberg, Peggy Diggins, Georgia Carroll, Margaret Chapman, Loraine Gettman. Now he has written a story "The Power Model" which, with Everett Freeman, he is readying for Warner production.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Some of these beauties will be in "The Power Model," the tentative title, and can't you see that all roads will lead to Warners Studio? Ann Sheridan will have the lead and Ann is not so hard on the eyes, either.

Laird Cregar is such a good actor that he doesn't have to care whether Jack Oakie calls him "Lard" Cregar or not. Laird, himself, says he's now down from 3 tons to 2 tons. Be that as it may, he's so subtle in "Blood and Sand" I'm not surprised that Bill Perlberg has just handed him one of the best roles in Twentieth Century-Fox's Whooper-Dooper, "Coney Island."

The determination of Olivia de Havilland to leave Hollywood without a word to anyone but Hal Wallis at Warners, was not because of any torch she is carrying for Jimmie Stewart. Olivia really went to work too soon after her operation and she decided to get far away from all her well-meaning friends. So she will spend a month at Cape Cod and Westchester, returning here in time to play the femme lead in "One Foot in Heaven" opposite Freddie March.

The newlyweds, lovely Ilona Massey and good-looking Alan Curtis, are guests of honor on my radio program Friday night over CBS. They will appear in "New Wine," produced by Dr. William Sekely, and Ilona's glorious voice will be heard in Schubert's "Ave Marie" and other Schubert songs.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Garson Kanin talked $700 worth to Katie Hepburn this past week; a bomb nearly tore apart the house where Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier are living in London; Director Jack Hively and Dorothy Lovett will be married before he goes into the Army July 1; speaking of the Army, Johnny Downs says he hasn't been called. He is the sole support of his invalid mother; Jimmy Walker plans to bring his children back here for a visit to Hollywood; Harriet Parsons' showing of her eight "Meet the Stars" shorts went over in great style.

The theater was packed and many stars were there.

Tallulah Bankhead threw her arms around her about-to-be-divorced husband, John Emery, and gave him a great reception when they met a few days ago; Hal Hughes, and not Howard Hughes, at Mike Romanoffs with Ginger Rogers.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

New York, May 22.

WILLIAM S. KNUDSEN is famed, among other things, for his directness and conservation of words. A few days ago he wrote a letter to Norman Bel Geddes, the designer and scenic artist. It read: "Dear Geddes—What are you doing about Camouflage? Yours very truly, Knudsen" . . . Geddes replied: "Dear Mr. Knudsen—I'm keeping as invisible as possible. Yours very truly, Geddes."

WHEN JAPANESE MINISTER Kaname Wakasugi came to the University of Missouri last week to present a plaque from the American-Japanese Society of Tokio, Dean Frank Martin found a quick solution to a diplomatic problem. For another of the scheduled speakers was Jimmy Young, the correspondent who had been arrested by the Japanese last year. And Young's new book, "Behind the Rising Sun," has been banned in Japan . . . The Honorable Japanese Minister was saved the embarrassment of mounting a platform in company with a man his country had jailed. "Why—why that's incredible. Just incredible," gasped the star, "but I'll take it."

Leo Brady's Revised 'Calidore' Final Catholic University Play

By Richard L. Coe

Catholic University's always exciting Speech and Drama Department is concluding its year with a revised writing by Leo Brady of his "Calidore." First produced during last summer's sessions, the play will continue at the University Theater on the campus through Sunday evening.

Once again the experimental-minded group offers an invigorating evening. The enterprising Brady, whose gift was last apparent on the stage of the Earle when he traded Joe Cooks with Joe Cook, again humbles observers whose profession it is never to be humbled. For Leo Brady is a writer of unmistakable ability. His thoughts are in tune with our times; when he employs verse—as he does in "Calidore"—he frequently catches lyric splendor; he has a knowing grasp of the mercurial technique of playwriting and, best of all, he writes of characters and their motivations, not of happenings and wooden puppets.

From ancient legend, Brady's hero, "Calidore," sets foot on an earth torn by the capitalist-labor struggle. By design his disillusioned father placed him away from the world and planned for him a life of undisturbed reflection. After his father's death, the parent's former partner brings Calidore into a world of steel and strikes, planninng to give him his just heritage. The youth's awakening to the world of reality as opposed to the creation of his dreams forms Brady's drama as it has many another, though his idealism isn't the self-conscious tommyrot this paragraph might make it seem.

Fine Lyrical Passages

What makes Brady's telling of this character struggle striking is his lyrical treatment of a realistic subject. Inevitably, the influence of Maxwell Anderson comes to mind in such an instance, with "Key Largo" and "Winterset" telling comparable contentions in blank verse form. "Calidore" is of the Anderson metier and holds its head high in such company. Brady's lyric on why the grass is green can stand alone as shimmering poetry.

In last summer's play, Brady has made certain evident changes, though this reviewer has been unable to check with his original report on others. One important character has been fashioned from two. The second act has been expanded both in writing and motivation. The third and final act has been revised, though the climax remains Calidore's triumph. Most evident change at first glance, however, is the shift from the formal stage settings of tradition to an impressionistic production that blends with the lyric mood of the verse to surprisingly fine effect. A splendid cyclorama and inventive lighting complete the accomplishment without self-conscious "Art." Ralph Brown gets the cheers here.

Brady and Directors Walter Kerr and Josephine Callan have indeed been fortunate in their casting. For the all-important title role there is a lad who either is a tip-top actor or is simply Calidore in the flesh. He has a rich, fluent voice, a fine mobile face and a personality that carries over the footlights. William McGuire is the name and if he can keep his head he should become an able actor.

As the dictatorial capitalist, Kenneth Banghart is excellent, as well he should be, for he's one of the town's best, guesting for the first time at C. U. Mimi Norton, whose fine style is overcoming her earlier mannerisms; James Miller, Mildred Baitz and Abraham Knox have the other leads in the large, well-drilled company.

Contracts Let For Two New Bomber Plants

The War Department announced yesterday the award of two large contracts for construction of heavy bombers as a major step toward the achievement of the 500-bomber-a-month goal set by the President to achieve air superiority for the democracies.

The contracts, which totaled $322,490,000, were awarded to the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, which will operate a new Government-owned plant at Fort Worth, Tex., and the Douglas Aircraft Co., Inc., of San Diego, Calif., to operate a similar plant at Tulsa, Okla.

The announcement of the award came as Secretary of War Stimson admitted that the War Department was considering asking for an additional $4,000,000,000 appropriation from Congress. The money, which the Office of Production Management is reported to have advised the War Department to ask, would be used to build enough tanks, bombers and other heavy equipment for an army of 4,000,000 men.

Stimson said that the matter was under discussion by War Department officials, but that it was still in the "conversation" stage.

The Consolidated contract was for $163,640,000, while the Douglas contract was for $158,850,000. The Douglas company will produce Consolidated type bombers at the Tulsa plant.

Labor Official Says Defense Is Prime Duty

Criticizing Americans who would defend their country only if certain great reforms were effected, M. H. Hedges, a labor official, declared yesterday that "if America is worth defending it is worth defending as it is and now."

Hedges, research director, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, addressing the Society for the Advancement of Management's spring conference at the Wardman Park Hotel, said "it is my earnest belief that the standard of life, when we include the imponderables of liberty, is higher in America than in any other country in the world. America is worth defending now."

"It seems reasonable to declare . . . that the labor unionist who believes that the objective of his union is to follow the policy of the class struggle and fight the boss is helping Adolf Hitler. The employer who believes that this is the time to liquidate trade unions in helping Adolf Hitler. The bureaucrat who sees in this an opportunity to widen the powers of government when such widening powers only produce conflict is helping Adolf Hitler," Hedges said.

He said he did not "believe any man would die to defend his country because it has a five-year plan." But a man would die for his country because "he recalls the smells of a Thanksgiving dinner in his mother's kitchen; he will die to defend his country because he recalls with peculiar poignancy the way his high school graduating class sang 'Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory of the Coming of the Lord' . . . but he will not die to defend his country for mere abstractions."

Democracy, Hedges asserted, "is not a mere collection of principles. In the present crisis, he said, "all advantages and all hardships must be shared alike by every section of the population." There should be no privileged classes, he said.

P. L. Alvord, chairman of the department of administrative engineering of New York University, spoke on "The Basis of Morale," and said that to build up national morale we must first destroy four dangerous elements.

Not One Congressman Opposes Stagger Pay Plan, Hebert Says

"Not a single member of Congress" has been found to be against legislative proposals to stagger the paydays of Federal and private workers, Representative F. Edward Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, reported yesterday.

Hebert, author of the House measure providing a staggered system of paydays, said a poll of his associates revealed no opposition to the general idea.

"I am not wedded to my bill," said Hebert. "I am not wedded to any bill—I just introduced it to get the ball rolling."

A similar measure has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas.

Meanwhile, members of the Congressional Secretaries Club, headed by William H. Young, who have been circulating a petition among some 1,800 Capitol Hill employes urging two paydays a month instead of one, apparently are doomed to disappointment.

J. C. Shanka, House disbursing clerk, said it would be "impossible" to add another payday because of frequent pay roll changes in the Congressional roster.

It was reported at the District Building that favorable reaction also has come to the Commissioners from the Federation of Citizens Associations, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association and the Federation of Civic Associations.

Typographers Name Delegates To Convention

Four delegates to the annual International Typographical Union Convention August 1 in Vancouver were named in Wednesday's Columbia Typographical Union election, it was announced yesterday.

They are J. H. Abercrombie and Arthur A. Burr, of the Government Printing Office; Guy Caponnetto, of the Times-Herald, and Frank S. Lerch, of the Secretary's Chapel.

Clarence J. Desper, of the Times-Herald, was declared officially re-elected as president. The vote against reaffiliation with the American Federation of Labor was 1,308 to 859.

John R. Evans, of the G. P. O., was elected vice president. The secretary-treasurer election will be run off June 4.

Friends of Music Guests At Budapest Quartet Concert

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation presents a concert for the Friends of Music in the Library of Congress on Thursday night in Coolidge Auditorium. Artists: Budapest String Quartet (Josef Roismann, Alexander Schneider, Boris Kroyt and Mischa Schneider) and Benar Heifetz, violoncello. Program: Quintet in E flat major, Op. 12, No. 2 (Bocherini), Quartet in C minor, Op. 18, No. 4 (Beethoven), Quintet in C major, Op. 136 (Schubert).

Melomanes forming the Friends of Music in the Library of Congress were the guests last evening of the Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation at a pleasant concert of chamber music in Coolidge Auditorium. The artists were members of the Budapest String Quartet, who have played so frequently in that hall during the past year, and their associate of the hour, Benar Heifetz, who blended the tone of his violoncello with those of the Stradivari instruments from the Whittall collection in two quintets.

BROWN

A sultry atmosphere, made more oppressive by the proximity of a thunderstorm, was no deterrent either to the enjoyment of the auditors or to the indefatigable spirit of the musicians. Their performances were superlatively clear in exposition, polished in technique and eloquent in emotion. Not for a moment was there any relaxation in the tensity of their application, and the urgency of their phrasing knew no flagging. They gave their best to the reading of the scores and their reward, if they sought any other than their own satisfaction in work well done, came to them in the deep appreciation of the listeners, expressed in the most cordial applause.

The only novelty on the program was an old and good one, dating from 1771: a quintet in E flat major by Luigi Boccherini. This composer, whose misfortunes outweighed his successes in life and whose compositions have suffered unmerited seclusion, is gradually emerging into his proper perspective. He excelled in thematic invention, in graces of form and in the skill with which he applied his ideas to the instruments for which he wrote. A violoncellist himself, he was so fond of its tone that he composed 125 quintets in which two violoncelli figure.

Those who noticed the word "Picquot" preceding the opus number of the quintet on the printed program may be interested to know that it stands for Louis Picquot, the Nineteenth-century French musicologist, who made a speciality of Boccherini and collected his scattered works. The quintet has many beauties, particularly in the opening movement, unusually designated as "Amoroso," and in the delightful minuet.

The other works presented were Beethoven's C minor quartet from Opus 18 and Schubert's C major quintet. The Beethoven poem was read with a vivacity that made it seem shorter than it is, but the quintet, despite the loving care of the players, seemed as long as ever, and made one wish that Schubert had known how to condense his occasional prolixity.

Roosevelt Plans to Sign Farm Loans

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday informed Congressional farm bloc leaders that he will sign the Smith-Fulmer bill granting Government loans equal to 85 per cent of parity prices on five basic agriculture commodities — wheat, cotton, corn, tobacco and rice.

The Agriculture Department, meantime, announced that wheat acreage for 1942 would be cut from 62 to 55 million acres compared with 1941 acreage. This plan was decided upon, the department said, to meet the "problem of export market losses and mounting surpluses."

Mr. Roosevelt, who has until next Tuesday to act on the 85 per cent loan measure, plans to make a formal statement to Congress, it was learned, that the pending $450,000,000 appropriation for cash parity payments should be cut to the original budget estimate of $212,000,000.

To Raise Farm Prices

The statement, according to the farm bloc chieftains, will also say that the Administration's goal is to raise farm prices to parity on the basis of the 1909-14 average, and that with the loans estimated to cost a billion dollars, $212,000,000 in cash payments and the $500,000,000 soil conservation program, parity is expected to be attained.

Farm bloc leaders were revealed in general agreement with the proposition, worked out at a White House conference Wednesday between the President, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and Representative Clarence Cannon (Democrat), Missouri.

Farm prices generally have been stimulated by passage of the loan bill and it was learned President Roosevelt was advised that if he should veto it, they would crash and have a bad economic and political effect throughout the country. In addition, he was told, Congress would override a veto.

Further argument for the President's approval was said to be that the Commodity Credit Corporation could borrow the money through the RFC and would not draw down cash from the Treasury that would be required if the $450,000,000 parity payment program was approved.

The Agricultural Department said that wheat production this year and the carryover will give the Nation a supply of 1,250,000,000 bushels—enough to supply this country for nearly two years. R. M. Evans, the AAA Administrator, said the carryover of wheat from 1941 to 1942 would be about 500,000,000 bushels.

Evans announced that wheat farmers will vote on May 31 in a national referendum to decide whether they will use marketing quotas this year.

Democratic League

The National Democratic League will hold its annual meeting tonight at the Grafton Hotel, 1712 L Street Northwest, Hugh V. Keiser, president, announced yesterday. Committee reports and the election of ten new directors to serve for two years are on the agenda of the meeting, which begins at 8:15 p. m.

Hysteria of German Troops Called 'Cowardice' by Nazis

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 22.—The Germans consider nervous hysteria among soldiers as "mere cowardice masquerading as sickness" instead of as a medical casualty as the British and Americans do, the Massachusetts Medical Society was told today.

Dr. Douglas A. Thom, nationally-known psychiatrist, quoted a German writer, Martin Gumpert, as saying that men who can't be cured of their "trembling" in a war hospital should be kept "right up in the danger zone—roadbuilding, trench work—where the risk is no less great than for the soldiers in the front lines."

"War hysteria will not be reason enough to remove anyone from the war zone," the German was quoted. "Indeed, the strongest pressure must be used upon him, to make him fulfill the tasks assigned him."

In contrast, Dr. Thom said, the British and American viewpoint is that men who can't be rehabilitated sufficiently by treatment to return to combat service should be evacuated to noncombat zones or sent home.

Stating the problem of war neuroses "represents one of the most important military and economic problems with which the Government has to deal," the psychiatrist said:

"Recently I heard a colonel of the regular Army state that adequate psychiatric examinations which would weed out the potential neuropsychiatric disabilities would save the Government one-half billion dollars for every million draftees."

"It is rather difficult," he said, "to reconcile the rather superficial neuropsychiatric examinations which the prospective soldiers are given, limited to six or eight minutes for each man, with the importance of these casualties both from a military and economic point of view."

General Tells Of Bombers' Trip to Hawaii

(Editor's note—The following dispatch concerning the mass flight of 21 giant bombers to Hawaii last week was radioed to the War Department by the commander of the Army's mobile general headquarters airforce, who made the trip as an observer. The War Department made it available to the Associated Press and The Washington Post.)

By Lt. General Delos C. Emmons,
Commanding General G.H.I. Airforce

Honolulu, May 22 (By Army Radio).—The flight of the 21 B-17 flying fortresses appeared spectacular because of the distance over water negotiated by these land airplanes. But to the crews of these ships, it was routine flight.

Each of these new airplanes, before being dispatched to Hawaii, had flown nonstop, for test purposes, a much greater distance than the 2,400 miles between San Francisco and Honolulu.

Flights over water have become commonplace with Army airplanes because it is the mission of the G. H. Q. airforce to attack any objective, fixed or floating, that may threaten us.

The crews of the flying fortresses include a navigator. On this flight each airplane carried two navigators, as it was an excellent opportunity to obtain valuable training for them. This was one of the reasons why each flew independently and not in a formation.

A layer of fog covered the Pacific Ocean between San Francisco and Honolulu. Above the undercast, however, the night was beautiful with a full moon and a heaven full of stars. It was an ideal night to practice navigation. On several occasions it was necessary to deviate a little from the Great Circle course in order to avoid squalls. The skill with which the navigators charted the courses of their airplanes was shown by the fact that each arrived almost exactly on schedule.

The Navy was kind enough to spot a number of destroyers on the route between San Francisco and Honolulu for rescue purposes if needed.

The flying fortresses were manned with experienced and highly skilled crews. Each of them had spent many hours in good and bad weather over land and water in this type of airplane. Not one of them had the slightest feeling of insecurity because they were far out at sea in a land plane. They knew their ships, the engines, their own capacities and the skill and experience of their group commander, Lieut. Col. Gene Eubank, and they had no feeling of doubt. Fortunately, too, they had the services of an outstanding weather officer, Maj. Harold H. Bassett, who forecast the wind and weather exactly.

In a way, the flight arrived at a most opportune moment as the troops in the Hawaiian Department were engaged in realistic maneuvers. Many of them were thinking of the need for reinforcements when the flying fortresses arrived without warning to any except very few. It made our soldiers, sailors and civilians in Hawaii feel much more secure to have demonstrated to them in a spectacular way, the fact that we can reinforce Hawaii with tremendous offensive power in a few hours in case its need should arise.

Only 1 of 20 Wins Draft Status Appeal

Only one man of 20 Class I-A registrants appealing for reclassification to Class III-A on grounds of dependency, was granted such reclassification, according to a report of the District Selective Service Board of Appeals yesterday, with two cases being held over for additional information.

Thirteen registrants were continued in their original I-A available for immediate military service classification. Twenty-two cases in all were reported by the board of appeals.

Consideration was refused two Class I-B registrants by the board on the grounds that their appeal was premature, in that they were not yet classified for immediate military service.

Occupational deferment was voted unanimously by the board to a Metropolitan policeman, formerly in Class I-A. An accounting clerk who appealed for reclassification from I-A to II-A on occupational grounds was retained in Class I-A by a vote of 7 to 1 by the appeal board.

Two conscientious objectors, a draftsman and a secretary, were referred to the United States attorney by the appeal board.

Among occupations of registrants appealing their classifications were an accounting clerk, a credit manager, an occupational analyst, an advertising solicitor, an office helper, a Metropolitan policeman, a milk truck helper, a manufacturers' representative, a mail clerk, a civil service clerk in the Navy Department, several draftsmen, a bookkeeper and a certified public accountant.

Most appeals were based on dependency.

11 Japanese Vessels Put On Blacklist

By the United Press

Los Angeles, May 22.—The British consulate tonight listed 11 Japanese vessels, all large whalers and tankers, as being on Britain's "ships black list."

The announcement, placed by the consulate in the Friday issue of the Commercial News, Los Angeles shipping paper, bore the title, "British Government Notice to All Charterers and Shippers," and said:

"Charterers and shippers are advised in their own interests that by reason of contravention of British regulations, the British government will impose all disabilities in their power on trading of the undermentioned vessels . . ."

The notice then listed the 11 vessels, one of which is in Los Angeles Harbor at present. Another is due here tomorrow. The tanker which arrived yesterday and was scheduled to sail tonight is the 17,549-ton Kyobuyo Maru. At nightfall it still was in port with no indications when it would leave.

Due tomorrow is the Tonan Maru number 3, a 19,310-ton tanker owned by the Nippon Suisan line. The Kyokuyo Maru is owned by Kyokuyo Hogei and is a combination tanker and whaling ship. On its present trip here, however, the Kyokuyo Maru did not carry the eight catches it uses on whaling expeditions.

British Vice Consul L. G. Holliday, who placed the advertisement, refused to amplify the warning in the announcement, that Britain will "impose all disabilities in their power" on the ships listed.

Reports frequently have circulated along the waterfront that Britain was evolving some form of reprisal against Japanese tankers and whalers suspected of supplying fuel to German sea raiders in the South Pacific and Indian Ocean.

Ships of more than 19,000 tons, like the Tonan Maru, No. 3, rank among the largest merchant ships in the world.

Belle Fox Tells Of Getting Cash For Father

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 22.—The daughter of William Fox, bankrupt former movie producer, testified today at the trial of retired United States Circuit Court Judge J. Warren Davis that she provided $27,500 her father has said he loaned to the jurist during the Fox bankruptcy litigation.

Speaking in a barely audible voice, Miss Belle Fox, slender, dark-haired and in her late twenties, told of giving Fox $15,000 on one occasion and $12,500 on another in 1936.

Judge Davis, 74, is on trial with Morgan Kaufman, of Scranton, Pa., former bankruptcy referee, on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States.

Fox, one-time head of a $57,000,000 movie empire, has pleaded guilty to the same charge and testified he made the loans without security. The Government contends they were "favors" to influence judicial decisions.

Miss Fox followed a series of other witnesses whose testimony traced five $1,000-bills, through serial numbers, from the Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank to the Fox family in Atlantic City, N. J., and finally to a bank in St. Augustine Fla.

An official of the Florida bank has testified they were deposited by Judge Davis' daughter, Mrs. Mary Firestone, daughter-in-law of the late tire magnate. Mrs. Firestone was a spectator at the trial today.

SHOREHAM TERRACE UNVEILING. All beglamored with moonlight and roses, the Shoreham Terrace will open next Wednesday. No doubt it will be filled with around 1,500 people who will all say, "Isn't this lovely!" any number of times. They will be completely right. For the terrace offers a matchless picture of dreamy deep-summer beauty . . . The Shoreham's outdoor cocktail terrace has just been done over in green and white with latticed walls studied with flowering plants and vines . . . To those people who are always asking the name of Gene Archer's ingratiating introductory number on the radio—it's "Then I Knew," was composed by Arden Clar of Shoreham's Barnee-Lowe Orchestra.

Representatives of the country's biggest recording company have been visiting the Rainbow Room frequently, listening to Milton Davis' novachording for hours on end Something's cooking.

STAR SWINGUESE RETURNS. DeLloyd McKaye, sultry voiced mistress of "boogie woogie" piano, will return to Paul Young's next Tuesday. She needs no introduction to Washington, already has a huge following created during her two previous engagements at P. Y.'s. Jerry and Turk, also emcee Al Merin, will close their riotous seances next Monday night. DeLloyd will remain until June 9 when Paul Young will shut up shop for the summer, begin to lay plans for a gay and extravagant reopening in September.

SWIM, DINE AND DANCE is the new Glen Echo program for a Perfect Day, beginning tomorrow when the Crystal Pool will open for the summer. Y'all will be able to spend the afternoon splashing and diving, take a whirl at the park's 50 amusement features, dine on the roof garden, spend the late evening stepping to Paul Kain's music in the Spanish Garden Ballroom. It's a whole vacation rolled up into a few hours.

SONG TITLE STORY. "Whether you live 'High on a Windy Hill' where you can hear the 'Rustle of Spring' or in a town where 'Smoke Gets In Your Eyes,'—if you want new joy in your life both 'Night and Day,' hear the Neptune Room's Bob and Bertie Hellman weave these tunes into melody magic at twin keyboards at any Neptune Room cocktail hour or supper session. They're truly the most amazing creative duo ever due-o to delight you-o"—The preceding lovely burst of rhetoric comes crackling from Publicist Frank Romer. Nor does he exaggerate a-tall. Bob Hellman won first prize for "solo invention at the piano" at Vienna's Academy of Music and pretty Bertie catches his terrific tempos with easy grace.

Au 'Voir to Troika. Colorful and enthralling Troika will close tomorrow eve with a glowing farewell fiesta. Loads of Troika regulars will be there to say goodby until September to Helen Hamilton, Sasha, Mischa, Vanya, Lola and all the rest of the delightful folks who have contributed to Troika good times.

HAIL, "MISS WASHINGTON." The good ship Mount Vernon will be rocking with cheers for the new "Miss Washington" come Sunday midnight. But with Promoter Al Stern at the helm of the contest and Manager Harry Baker of the Wilson Line at the helm of the S. S. Mount Vernon, at least symbolically, all is sure to be under splendid control. Many entries have been received from all sections of the city and the judges probably will get completely dizzy trying to pick the queen of this galaxy of girls.

METRONOME BULLETIN. Supper dancing at Wardman Park is now entirely in Metronome Room, even on Fridays and Saturdays, when Jack Coffey's band has previously been moving over to the Burgundy Room. So many conventions and special parties have been booked into the Burgundy Room that it is necessary to reserve it completely for these events.

CLOTHES WITH OOMPH. Saucy bonnets with cellophane brims are being worn by the Lotus' sportive Mayfair Girls in one of their picture dances . . . Carmela Lazari, Hi Hat's nightingale, has a new midriff formal of sun-tan jersey. It's hard to tell where the dress leaves off and Carmela begins . . . New frocks bought by the Anchor Room's Eileen George make smoked glasses almost obligatory. One number is in brilliant yellow with scarlet stripes. Another combines bright blue and gold. Tropical, but very.

L'Escargot's delightful open air terrace is now open for the summer. It's a duplicate of pre-Nazi Montmartre, will set you humming the nostalgic "Last Time I Saw Paris."

PLEASANT SURPRISES. Dick Koons and his Mayflower Lounge Orchestra beamed with delight when Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and Mrs. Douglas recently visited the lounge two afternoons in succession . . . Harry Mitchell, leader of Mayfair's Chordsmen, is so-o-o happy because he's wangled a new vibraphone. Vibes are going to be mighty scarce from now on because the aluminum used in them is needed in national defense . . . Right after the Lounge Riviera's Ida Clarke had played for the father-and-son dinner at the Mayflower, she was happily astonished by being booked for the mother-and-daughter banquet of the Albright Evangelical Church . . . Laczi, cymbalon player of the Plymouth, was recently surprised by the gift of a handsome watch.

NIGHTINGALE COMMUNITY. Ellsworth Nightingale, owner of the Nightingale, is by way of being a magnate. He owns much acreage in the vicinity of the 'Gagle, also the nearby store, tourist camp and filling station.

INDOOR GLAMOUR. The Cafe Caprice atmosphere is distinctly Park Avenue—gold mirrors, green dance floor and a bar that looks like a pagan temple . . . The Silver Fox theme song should be "Rhapsody in Blue." Blue in all its beautiful shadings dominates the picture . . . Between gray striped imported wall paper, dim lights and many mirrors, the King Cole Room has aspects of an optical illusion . . . Olmsted's Grill preserves its delightful turn-of-the-century atmosphere . . . If you catch a window table at Hogate's you'll have an enchanting view of the Potomac and its passing ships . . . Ciro's Famous Village is completely Neapolitan down to a realistically spouting Vesuvius done in moving lights.

Kavakos Grill has a whirligig fun program. Floor shows twice a night on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. Country dancing on Sunday afternoons and Tuesday evenings. Hobby horse races on Thursday nights. Hail Allah!

Baer's Chances Slim Against Louis Tonight

Little's Plus 10 Total Leads Goodall Golf

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Remote as it maybe, the possibility that big Buddy Baer may hang his right hand on Joe Louis' chin this evening and effect a dizzy turn in heavyweight history is, of course, the affair's most intriguing element. It could happen, in the same way that lightning could strike the place out of the clear night sky.

POVICH

The utter realist can always say that Baer, big as he is, is only one punch away from the title. The ponderous fellow can hit. But the laws of compensation have whittled him down. He is under the burden of his own slow reflexes which blight his chances of catching up with Louis, but it is scarcely vice versa. The lumbering Baer will be Louis' perfect target.

The fellows who have been able to reach Louis' chin have been few, and Baer is hardly to be classed with any of 'em. Schmeling, a superb boxer and right-hand sharpshooter, was able to tag Louis and knock him out, Jimmy Braddock, another cunning ancient, jarred Louis with an uppercut. Tony Galento, fighting from a crouch and owner of one of the profession's smartest left hooks, spilled Louis on the floor. But the slow-moving Baer, a stand-up guy, scarcely rates with these. If Louis is tagged out or even hurt by Baer, the aura of greatness that has surrounded him all these years was a horrible mistake.

Louis Sees Self on His Mettle Here

Despite the value the motion pictures may have if the fight endures a reasonable number of rounds, the suspicion is that Louis is in no mood to dally with Baer and will belt him out quickly. Louis is sincere about making one of his best fights in Washington. He has been repeating that he likes the idea of staging at least one of his fights in Southern territory, and for the past three weeks important colored persons of Washington and points south have been streaming into the Louis camp to meet their hero and shake his hand and Louis has been greatly impressed with his racial role. He doesn't want to make a bad showing in Washington. He wants to do well this evening, and that thought is no comfort to Baer.

He was saying the other day that "people here in the South are expecting a lot of me and I want to do all right for 'em. They been hearing I'm a great guy and I don't want to let 'em down. Folks are coming all the way from Alabama and Georgia and I gotta do good. I feel good. I'll do all right."

Jack Blackburn, who tells Louis how to fight and when, is more explicit about the champion's battle plan. He won't permit Louis to take any needless chances with Baer, despite Joe's desire to make good quickly for his visiting friends. Blackburn repeats that Louis' strategy will be governed by Baer's behavior in the early rounds. "If he gets too tough and starts trying to make a lotta trouble, Joe'll have to get rid of him quick," says Blackburn. "We got other fights this summer and we ain't gonna crack up Joe's hands going through a lot of rounds with a big fellah like Baer. If Baer wants to play nice, he can stay around a while, maybe."

Up in New York, Jack Doyle points out there is virtually no betting on tonight's affair. In Doyle's own words, "there is no betting on 'that thing.'" The odds he is quoting are 2½ to 1 that Baer does not last five rounds. No money has shown even at those figures.

Baer's Courage Not Under Suspicion

Of all the persons who do not figure to beat Louis, Baer fits near the top of the list. His three-round knockout of Abe Simon who went 13 rounds with Louis attests only to the power of Baer's right hand. The ponderous Simon was the sort of a guy Baer could lick, big, slow-moving and always very close at hand. Against Louis, it will not be a case of simple slug.

Out at Baer's camp, the most confident guy in the place has been Baer, if quiet determination can be construed as confidence. For him it must be said he has betrayed no great unrest at the prospect of fighting Louis, which is more than may be said of his handlers who have been awed by the whole idea. There is no suspicion that Baer will be scared when he enters the ring this evening.

All the courage in his make-up and all of the physical fitness he may have attained in his month at Olney threatens to be exceedingly futile for Baer, however, when he gets in there on his own against Louis. One thing that can never be toughened up in training is the chin, and that's what Louis will be aiming at shortly after 9:30 p. m.

Buddy Baer as Champion

Let's see what kind of champion Buddy Baer would make. All right, I'm nuts, but let's see. Who really knows? There is no law to keep Buddy from planting a haymaker on Joe's jaw.

CONSIDINE

Well, for one thing there would be a quick drop in the frequency of heavyweight title matches. Champion Buddy, unless he shows something tonight against Joe Louis to indicate that he is a changed fighter, and unless he develops a killer instinct, could not take on challengers as indiscriminately as Joe has taken them on. He couldn't dominate the field as Joe has done. He would have to be much more carefully handled, for even if he should pull the semi-miraculous, and beat Louis he'd still be a champion without much honor or talent.

There are too many guys around who would give Champion Buddy a distressing evening. One is Billy Conn, who'd outstick him. Another is Lou Nova, who'd outgame him. Add Arturo Godoy to that, and the fellow who beat Arturo for the South American championship, Alberto Lovell. Add Red Burman, perhaps. And such Baer-baiters as Gunner Barlund, Eddie Blunt, Babe Hunt, Andre Linglet and Ford Smith.

But, most of all, add Max Baer. We have a hunch that Max will be able to lick his big little brother until he's 90, and Buddy's 82. Ancil Hoffman has never let them box against each other, though once they pulled on the gloves in a friendly little workout, got sore and started slugging; with the result that Max broke one of Buddy's ribs.

Cautious Handling Would Be Wise

No, Buddy Baer will have to be handled with silver tongs in the event he hangs a couple of his best punches on Louis' jaw at Griffith Stadium. We'd have a return of the old fenagling days—a throwback

Open Champ Beats Sarazen and Oliver With Sub-Par 67; In $5,000 Tourney

By the United Press

New York, May 22.—Lining up his long putts with casual sureness, Lawson Little, of San Francisco, moved into a commanding early lead in the fourth annual Goodall Golf Tournament today with a sub-par exhibition that gave him ten precious points toward the $5,000 purse.

The hulking, dark-haired youth, now the reigning American Open champion, put together rounds of 35 and 32 over the rain-drenched fairways of Fresh Meadow Country Club for an 18-hole score of 68 strokes, 2 under standard figures.

Under the peculiar scoring arrangement of this round-robin tourney, he turned back Gene Sarazen, of Brookfield Center, Conn., by 4 points and Coprl E. Oliver, of Fort Dix, N. J., by 6 more for one of the best single performances in the brief Goodall history.

Putting Turns Trick

It was Little's putting that did it. Throughout the day the husky Californian stroked his treacherous No. 10 iron in the manner of a magic wand and dropped the ball into the cup from distances of 10 feet up to the 40 feet from which he holed out—to the amazement of 1,000 spectators—on the fourth green. It was at this point he took his lead, and he never lost it.

Little was four points up at the nine-hole mark of this first round of the 126-hole tournament, but instead of weakening under the pressure he grew stronger. Forced to buck a rainstorm midway through the afternoon he slowly overwhelmed Oliver—whose game was very rusty from lack of practice—and forged steadily ahead of the veteran Sarazen.

The other four threesomes produced no feat to match that of Little. Horton Smith of Chicopee, Mass., who led at the halfway mark with a score of plus six, missed some of the close ones on the inward trip and was forced into a tie with Jimmy Hines of Lakeville, N. Y., with a figure of plus four.

Another tie developed for fourth when Ben Hogan recovered valiantly after a shaky start and deadlocked with Tony Penna, of Dayton, Ohio, at plus three.

Buddy Baer and Joe Louis register nonchalance in square-off. Tonight they'll be all seriousness when Buddy tries to wreck the Louis road show in Griffith Stadium in the Capital's first heavyweight championship fight

25,000 Expected To See Heavyweight Title Bout, First Ever Held in Capital

By Al Hailey

Buddy Baer's big chance to shed himself of the "Bum-of-the-Month" tag that has been fastened upon him comes tonight in Griffith Stadium when he steps up to try what 16 others before him have failed to do—strip Joe Louis of his world's heavyweight championship.

And despite his prospective induction into Shufflin' Joe's famous organization, tonight's business has taken on such an air of importance that a crowd of 25,000 is expected to be on hand.

It's Washington's first heavyweight championship fight, and the Capital is going to let its hair down. Vice President Henry A. Wallace will head the troop of dignitaries who will pile into the ball park. Cabinet members, dispossessed diplomats and the representatives of the dispossessers, defense bigwigs and Capitol Hill dwellers will be in the ringside.

Not Much Betting

There was practically no betting on the outcome of the scheduled 15-round battle, although in Jack Doyle's book Louis ruled an 8-to-1 favorite and a 2½-to-1 shot to knock out Baer in less than five rounds.

Buddy will be the biggest man Louis has ever fought. Abe Simon weighed 254 pounds—17 more than Baer—but Buddy stands the taller and has the longest reach. It was Simon's 83-inch reach that enabled him to last 13 rounds with Joe in the March venture. The junior Baer has an 84-inch reach—eight more than Louis.

The 25-year-old "kid brother" of Madcap Maxie, who once held the title, will tower over Louis, in his fighting pose, almost six inches. Buddy stands up to his full height of 6 feet 6½ inches in the ring—a fact which further lessens his

Gus Lesnivich Scores Over Christoforidis

By the Associated Press

New York, May 22.—Gus Lesnevich made the third-time charm work magic tonight by outpointing Anton Christoforidis in 15 tough rounds in Madison Square Garden to win the National Boxing Association's version of the world light-heavyweight championship. Lesnevich weighed 175, Christoforidis 166.

After failing to win a claim to the crown in two trips to the post with Billy Conn, the rugged Russian from New Jersey overpowered the clever, game Greek with heavy duty cannon and, although failing to floor him, had him helpless in the fifteenth round.

The Associated Press score card gave Lesenvich eight rounds, Christoforidis five and had two even. The decision was unanimous on the part of Referee Frankie Fullam and Judges Marty Monroe and Joe Agnello.

By the victory, the blond belter not only took the N. B. A. title, but qualified to meet Jimmy Webb, handsome St. Louis larruper in July, for title recognition by the New York State Athletic Commission.

Indians Score Over Nats in Ninth, 4 to 3

Cleveland Collects Four Hits Off Hudson In Last Inning for Two Runs and the Game

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

The Nats were strictly an eight-inning ball team yesterday. In the ninth, the Cleveland Indians took all the honors and the ball game with a sudden assault on Sid Hudson that transformed a one-run deficit into a 4-3 victory. It was a painful ninth for 3,000 Griffith Stadium fans.

Hudson, who had been pitching five-hit ball to that point, chucked four hits at the Indians in the last inning after getting the first man out. The source of his trouble was Lou Boudreau's second two-bagger of the game which put the tying run on base.

Roy Weatherly didn't dally in that emergency. He slugged Hudson's first pitch into right field for a single and the score was tied. Weatherly went out stealing, but Gerald Walker's puny fly fell into left field for two bases, and Hal Trosky completed the damage. Trosky swatted a 3-and-1 pitch into center field for a single and the winning run.

It wasn't Cecil Travis' fault that the Nats lost. The league's leading hitter, with his second three-bagger of the game, pounded three runs across the plate in the sixth inning to wipe out what had been a 2-0 lead of the Indians. In the ninth, too, Travis made a thoroughly valiant bid to tie the score.

Travis led off that ninth for the Nats with an enormous drive into deep center that appeared to duplicate his sixth-inning triple, but little Roy Weatherly danced out to the base of the flagpole and with a fancy overhead catch transformed the swat into merely a long out. A bit later, Weatherly hauled down George Archie's long drive to center for the second out of the inning.

The Nats moved into action with a shuffled lineup yesterday, but the effects were painfully the same as they collected their fifth straight defeat. Manager Bucky Harris benched Outfielder Ben Chapman, remodeled his infield by placing Travis at third and Jimmy Pofahl at shortstop, and moved Lewis into right field. George Case moved to left field in the shake-up.

However, the wholesale changes did nothing to bolster the Nats' anemic hitting. Yesterday they were held to six hits by three Cleveland pitchers, Al Smith, Joe Heving and Harry Eisenstat. After Travis' sixth-inning triple had knocked Smith

Overlin Helps Buddy Baer Get Haircut

By Caswell Adams

Herald Tribune Sports Writer

Kenneth Overlin tooled out to Olney, Md., this afternoon and took Jacob Buddy Baer out to get a haircut. Joe Louis will give Jacob, known as Buddy, a close shave tomorrow night.

This tonsorial feat promised on the younger of the Baers by the boss man is a foregone conclusion here this sultry evening on the busy banks of the Potomac, and only the closer relatives of the challenger for the heavyweight championship feel that anything short of quick annihilation can be Jacob's fate. Three rounds is the usual guess, but, funny thing, anything that Baer does will be strictly velvet for the crowd, which doesn't expect a damned thing from him.

Ray Alvis, who's listed as promoter of the first heavyweight championship within the, to coin a phrase, shadow of the White House, and Mike Jacobs, listed as copromoter merely because there's a law that to promote you must live here

Thirteen From District Among National Open Golf Entries

28 to Play For 4 Places At Columbia

Houghton Favored To Win Medal Honors; Bobby Cruickshank Among Visitors

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Twenty-three golf professionals and five amateurs, most of them with an air of indifference about the whole thing, will battle for four places to the National Open championship in sectional qualifying rounds Monday at Columbia Country Club.

The boys are not too enthusiastic about the 1,500-mile trip to the big event, June 6, 7, and 8, at Forth Worth, Tex., and at least half of them entered just to swell the field and increase the number of places allotted the Middle Atlantic section.

Thirteen of the players are from the District and vicinity, four will come up from Virginia, Baltimore will send a half dozen representatives, Hagerstown, Annapolis and Easton, Md., one each while Tom Stevenson, an unknown starter from New York, will classify as a "floater" as will Jack Donohue, Georgetown student from Sioux City.

Cox Not to Compete

Washington's biggest name golfer, Wiffy Cox, who has been on the threshold of two Open crowns, will be missing from the sectional tests, but Virginia's adopted star, Bobby Cruickshank, will be here after one of the four berths. Virginia Open Champion Chandler Harper will try at Pinehurst, N. C.

Fred McLeod, the host professional and 1908 titlist, is an automatic qualifier, being a former champion, but he has not yet decided as to whether he will make the trip. Baltimore also has an automatic qualifier, Andy Gibson, who finished in the first 30 last year at Cleveland. Gibson expects to participate at Fort Worth.

Lewis Worsham, jr., the Burning Tree professional, who qualified last year, will hit the first ball Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Pairings were announced yesterday by the U. S. G. A. through Dr. W. C. Barr, secretary of the District Golf Association, which will conduct the trials.

Houghton Is Favorite

Al Houghton, one of the few players anxious to play in the big show, will be the red-hot favorite to win the gold medal for the low qualifying score, although Cliff Spencer, who won the Maryland Open over the same course last year, Cruickshank and District Amateur Champion Ralph Bogart, have all been playing good golf of late.

Eddie Stevens, the assistant pro at Manor Club who was inducted into the Army last month and is stationed at Edgewood Arsenal, is entered and is a probable starter.

Four of the five who qualified at Manor last year will be back to try to make it two Opens in a row, Worsham, Gene Larkin, George Diffenbaugh and Jack Isaacs. Gibson was the fifth Mid-Atlantic representative in 1940.

Pairings and starting times for the 36-hole tests:

Fishing with JACK BELL

Special weekend weather report: Showers and thunder squalls beginning over Chesapeake Bay and Maryland-Delaware coast Friday, reaching North Carolina Coast Friday or Saturday. Moderate to fresh southwest, shifting to northwest, winds.

Hardheads are running strong at Solomons Island, in sufficient numbers to make fishing interesting and exciting. Capt. Bowen, of Solomons, reports that anglers fish with light tackle there.

JACK BELL

Capt. Bowen, and Captains Drury and Taft, of Ridge, Md., report catches of 50 to 100 a boat this week. Capt. Taft reports that a few trout and weakfish weighing 3 to 4 pounds also having been caught.

That fine gamefish, rockfish or striped bass, is striking hard, but more fish are lost than landed. They have been caught off Point Patience and out from Town Point, trolling with small feathers, and chumming with live native shrimp.

The latter is still somewhat expensive for the number of fish caught, and the difficulty in getting shrimp, but you never can tell when you are headed for a heavy haul.

If the Atlantic States can learn to protect the striped bass or rockfish, we shall soon be able to catch them in numbers comparable to California, where the striped bass was introduced from eastern waters, and is treated strictly as a game fish.

Channel bass are still running strong along the North Carolina coast with emphasis on spots between Oregon Inlet and Cape Hatteras. Most catches are being made from boats, but a few fair catches have been made surfcasting.

The 15-pound marlin taken last February 3, at Kona Hawaii, by Charles F. Clapp on a 39-thread line and submitted for an all tackle record for blue marlin has been identified as a silver marlin by the American Museum of Natural History, and the International Game Fish Association has recognized the catch as an all tackle world's record for the species, replacing Zane Grey's 618-pound silver marlin taken in 1930 off Tahiti.

Good trout fishing has been found in Middle Creek in Frederick County, Md. The water there is somewhat oily and fishing with a slow moving sunken streamer fly is bringing results. It is surprising why more anglers don't fish Middle Creek instead of putting up with crowded conditions on Fishing and Big Hunting Creeks. Middle Creek has been stocked heavily and there is more territory for anglers to spread out.

The Capital Casting Club meets every Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, at the east end of the Reflecting Pool, to practice casting and to give anyone instruction.

There is a standing invitation to anyone, particularly ladies and young boys, to come down and practice with them, and receive the benefit of their expert help. If you don't have an outfit of your own, and still want to know what it is all about, go down and they will gladly lend you an outfit.

Many ladies have availed themselves of the opportunity, and have learned to cast remarkably well. It is a pleasure to watch some of them fish on nearby trout streams; they know how to lay a fly on the water, and are not getting their fly or line caught in the branches as do many of the men anglers.

Dear Sir:—I would like to enter the following yarn in your weekly fishing column contest. I'm afraid that I can't vouch for its authenticity, but as I "heered it," it goes something like this:

One would scarcely suspect absent minded professors of possessing sufficient patience to warrant success at fishing. Nevertheless, two enthusiasts of this classification had undertaken a jaunt on the briny deep and, strange as it may seem, had met with phenomenal luck. In short order they had caught their limits of fish and were busily disjointing their rods preliminary to the row back to shore with the boat overflowing with their catch.

"You know, Joe, we must have dropped anchor right on top of an old wreck . . . why, I've never heard of such fishing as we've just experienced. I'd sure like to come back again next Saturday."

"Me, too," answered the second deranged professor, "just look at that bottom full of bass. Say, why don't we mark this spot so we can find it again next week?"

"I was just going to think of that, but how'll we mark it away out here a mile or two off shore? We can't line up a couple of objects because the shore is darned near out of sight itself."

"Nope, we wouldn't be doin' any good to drop out a cork, chances are it'd be gone by next week. Sure would like to mark 'er though . . . probably never could hit 'er exactly the same again.

Idea after idea was introduced, discussed, voted on and vetoed. Suddenly Joe's face lighted up as with a brain child.

"Say, I got it," he enthusiastically interjected, "why don't we put a mark on the side of the boat? We could put it directly above the spot here where we got the most strikes."

And, so it came to pass, with the boys nearing shore just as dusk was settling. On the side of the rented boat near the stern appeared a heavy, black arrow, pointing directly down.

As they stepped from the boat onto the dock, however, the professor with the gravest mental disorder suddenly came out of a deep lethargy which had strongly possessed him while the other rowed to shore.

"What troubles you, Joe? We didn't forget something, did we?"

"No, not exactly that, but I was just wondering . . . what if we don't get the same boat next time?" Hopefully yours,

Tech, Eastern Qualify Most for Track Meet

Rate as Cofavorites in Championships Today; Each Places 17 in Finals

Grabbing 17 places apiece in the trials yesterday, Tech and Eastern High track teams will be co-favored today when the seven public schools square off for the finals of the 1941 interhigh track meet at Central stadium. Starting time will be 3:30.

Central, another strong entry, managed for 13 places yesterday and other schools ranged in this order: Wilson, 7; Roosevelt, 5; Western, 2, and Anacostia, 1.

The first two in the three-man race will qualify, and the third will also qualify if he is able to beat the 0:24.2 time of Anacostia's Phillips.

As anticipated it was long, lean Eddie Barham, of McKinley, who starred. The high jump artist qualified for four events besides his specialty—the high hurdles, broad jump, javelin and discus. Both Herby and Steve Adams managed for places in the century and javelin besides their efforts in the 220.

Craig Wood More Adept at Golf Than Shaving

By the Associated Press

New York, May 22.—Craig Wood, one of the advance favorites for the Goodall Round-Robin Golf Tournament which started today, was preparing to shave this morning when he dropped his razor blade. At the very second he stooped to pick it up, he sneezed—and the resultant shock dislocated his fifth lumbar vertebra.

For several minutes Wood couldn't move. Finally he managed to crawl to the telephone and summon a doctor. The physician said it would be a week or ten days before Wood could swing a golf club again, meaning quite likely that Wood's chances of winning the U. S. Open title at Fort Worth, Tex., June 5-7 were dislocated along with the vertebra.

Little Tavern Rally Stops Heurich, 6-2

Heurich Brewers, champions of the first half race in The Post-Industrial League, yesterday ran into triple trouble and dropped a 6-2 decision to Little Tavern on the Ellipse.

Little Tavern combined three triples with a single and a squeeze play in the fourth inning to score four runs and clinch the game. Bernie Goode opened the barrage with a three-bagger and scored on Charley Clarke's single. Frank Manginspine and Al Putnam hit consecutive triples and Putnam tallied the last run of the inning when Johnny Braddock laid down a sacrifice bunt.

Balk in Ninth Gives Hoya Nine 5-4 Victory Over Colonials

'Red' Kloak Victimized By Bad Luck

Pitcher Stumbles Over Rubber, Lets In Winning Run; Murphy Impresses

By Jack Munhall

In two split-second plays which punctured the tenseness of a ninth innning baseball drama, Pitcher "Red" Kloak was first the hero and tthen the goat yesterday as George Washington dropped a heart-breaking 5-to-4 decision to Georgetown at the Hilltop.

With the score tied at 4 to 4, none out, and a Georgetown runner on third base in the lower half of the inning, Kloak made a spectacular stop and throw of a drive by Russ Miller to save the winning run, but in almost the next motion committed a balk that pushed over the decisive tally.

It was a sad denouement for the lanky Kloak, who, as a surprise starter for the Colonials, had held the mighty Georgetowners pretty well in check for eight innings of a torrid tussle. The knuckle-balling sophomore had outlasted one Hoya pitcher and was seemingly in command of the ball game until the fatal ninth.

McFadden Gets Triple

Joe McFadden started the winning Georgetown rally with a drive into left field which bounded over Len Sokol's head and was transformed from a single to a triple. Miller, the next batter, nearly tore Kloak's hand off with a fierce liner through the box, but the Colonial pitcher recovered quickly and with a quick throw flagged his man at first.

Then came Koshlap. The count went to one strike and one ball on Koshlap. Kloak hesitated momentarily in his delivery of the next pitch and then threw what proved to be a superfluous ball. For with a grand gesture Umpire in Chief Ike Morrissey was waving home McFadden from third. The ball game was over and Kloak had lost because, as he afterwards explained, he had caught his foot on the pitching rubber.

Hoya Stars Pass Up D. C. A. A. U. Meet

The entry deadline having expired without the entries of any of the Georgetown stars and without Dave Morrison, crack North Carolina runner who was to have competed in the mile, the field for the annual D. C. A. A. U. track championships Saturday at College Park has been materially weakened.

About 100 entries have been received and a few more may be forthcoming from nearby Army camps which have been given special permission to enter late, but all in all the meet appears destined to be mostly a test between Maryland and Catholic University. The Terps and Cards both are entering many of their best varsity and freshman performers. Also represented will be American University and Gallaudet.

Field Is Small

The list of contestants for the first annual Cy Macdonald Memorial Mile apparently has narrowed to Tommy Fields, of Maryland, and Johnny Corbett, of Catholic University. Morrison, one of the better middle distance runners in the Southern Conference, had been expected for this event.

With the magic name of Georgetown's Al Blozis missing, the principal figure in the field events will be Maryland's freshman sensation, Heckert Horn, who recently tossed the discus 148 feet 2 inches to smash the Byrd Stadium record.

But the performances of Horn may be obscured by another fine Maryland yearling, Duke Alexander, who is one of the truly fine young trackmen developed in these circles in recent years. Alexander's forte is high jumping. He cleared over 6 feet 4 in high school and consistently has jumped better than 6 feet this spring. Alexander also is a dependable point getter in both hurdles.

Late Rally Wins For Browns, 4-1, Over Red Sox

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 22.—A three-run rally in the eighth inning today gave the St. Louis Browns a 4-to-1 decision over the Red Sox and an even split in their short series.

Trailing by a run going into the eighth, the Browns won when Clift singled, advanced on a scarifice, and was driven home by Grace. Lucadello then singled and Estalella was safe on Hale's error, allowing Grace to score and McQuinn's double to right brought in Lucadello.

The Browns added one more in the ninth to make it decisive, with Paul Muncrief being credited with the victory. The Browns made 13 hits against five for Boston.

Cards Deal Dodgers 6th Straight Loss

By International News Service

St. Louis, May 22.—The Cardinals sent the Brooklyn Dodgers down to their sixth successive defeat today when they cut a ninth-inning rally short to notch out a 7-6 triumph. The victory widened the St. Louis hold on first place to 1½ games.

With the Cardinals holding an apparently safe five-run lead, the Dodgers began to show some life with Camilli hitting for the circuit in the eighth, and three doubles and a single accounting for three more runs in the ninth. Dolph Camilli's grounder retired the side with the tying run on second base.

Brooklyn outhit the Cards 13-11 but failed to come through in the pinches.

Dickey's Homer Wins For Yanks Over Tigers

Buck Newsom Knocked Out of Box In the Sixth Inning of 6-to-5 Game

New York, May 22.—Bill Dickey's third home run in four days gave the New York Yankees the margin they needed today to turn back the Detroit Tigers, 6 to 5.

Buck Newsom started for the Tigers and gave up eight hits and five runs before being batted out in the sixth and was charged with his sixth defeat of the season.

Tome Henrich nicked him for a home run with one out in the first inning. Joe DiMaggio's fly with the bases loaded in the third added another tally, and a single by Joe Gordon, a double by Dickey and a triple by Frank Crosetti scored two more in the sixth and brought Lefty Archie McKain to the mound. He gave four hits in the next two innings, one of them Dickey's homer.

The Tigers pecked away at Steve Peek until they forced him out in the eighth, but after the first inning they were always behind and the rookie got credit for the victory.

Giants Defeat Reds in Homer Battle, 6 to 4

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 22.—The New York Giants and Cincinnati Reds put on a home run show today with the Reds emerging victors, 6 to 4.

Ernie Lombardi spanked a liner over the center field wall with the bases full in the first inning to send the World Champions off to an impressive start and in the third inning Frank McCormick collected his eighth homer of the season with one on for what proved to be the deciding runs.

Both blows were hit off Fiddler Bill McGee, making his second start with the Giants.

Paul Derringer held the Giants to seven safeties, but they included two home runs by Mel Ott, his ninth and tenth of the year, and another by Joe Moore. Ott's first circuit clout came with one on in the fourth, his second in the sixth and Moore's in the seventh.

Airport Swimming Opens Season Today to Public

The last lingering doubt that summer has finally arrived without question will be dispelled entirely today when the Airport Swimming Pool, south end of Highway Bridge, opens for the season. The pool will be open to the public daily and Sunday throughout the summer from 9:30 a. m. to 11 p. m.

Hardy Pearce, newly appointed director of high school physical education, will again be in charge. The pool this year will have an increased capacity, Pearce announced yesterday, stating that some 2,200 swimmers could be accommodated.

The pool has been approved by the Arlington health department and features individual steel lockers for swimmers.

Mildred Burke Wins Wrestling Match Over Elvira

Mildred Burke, winner of more than 400 consecutive mat bouts, still calls herself the womans' lightweight champion after besting Elvira Snodgress, lately of Smokemont., Tenn., last night before 2,000 sweltering fans at Turner's arena. The 'scuffle', to use Elvira's terminology, lasted only 16 minuates and was terminated when Mildred used a cradle hold to pin the hillbilly lady's shoulders.

The "champ," attired in white ring togs and sporting the gilted titular belt, appeared as a contrast to the contender. Mrs. Snodgress entered the ring quaintly arrayed in a floppy poke bonnet and unlaced high-topped shoes, and she was completely sheathed in a worn, patch-work quilt.

As the whistle blew, Mrs. Snodhad Mildred by the throat and Mildred had Casey in a scissors simultaneously. Gravity overcame this situation and the mass hit the deck with Berger on the bottom, to his obvious embarrassment.

Sky Hostess Wins Shepherdstown Purse at Charles Town

Winner Scores by Three Lengths; Jockey Hacker Rides Victor

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 22.—The Shepherdstown Purse, sixth and feature event on today's eight-race card, saw H. H. Wilson's Sky Hostess return to her old form to score a front running victory, over six routers of the $1,050 claiming ranks. The winner reached the wire three lengths in front of Allen Caid, who in turn was seven in front of Asterisk.

The crowd of 5,000 fans had a hard time making the favorite in the race, but just as the horses reached the gate the late line showed that Tyr had wound up the public choice. He could get no closer than fourth.

Jockey Beverly Hacker lost no time in taking the lead and when they reached the stand the first time around, daughter of Happy Argo had opened up a two-length lead. At this stage of the race, Centerville and Asterisk were closest to the pace, however, Centerville soon chucked it and dropped out of contention and Allen Caid was seen moving on the outside. Leaving the backstretch many thought that Allen Caid might catch the leader, but Hacker let out a notch and Sky Hostess again widened her lead. In the run to the wire it was all Sky Hostess with Hacker sitting still. Allen Caid was no match for the winner but was second while running easily.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

When Memorial Day rolls around, don't be surprised to see all records broken here at Charles Town. Russell Oakes, director of public relations, reports that all box seats, in both the clubhouses and grandstand, have long been disposed of. He further states that he has had many calls that could not be taken care of. Young Butsy Hernandez, son of Jockey J. Hernandez, can be seen every afternoon waiting on the law in front of the jockies' room for his father to complete his day in the saddle. Young Hernander, who is now 2½ years old, should not lack in the knowledge of riding when he reaches his 'teens. The dress parade hit a new high today when Russell Oakes came out with a sport coat of robin's egg blue. It looks like a dead heat between Oakes, Johnny Morrissey and "Snooks" Winters. "Gus" Petty, Judge Bradley's right hand man, finally admitted today that besides being a good trainer, Ben Jones appears to have a little luck. The victory of the Calumet Farm's Proud One at New York Wednesday seems to have been the deciding factor. Starter John Morrissey has banned My First, due to actions of this steed at the gate Wednesday. The veteran held up the start for several minutes and was finally placed on the black list by Morrissey. Race Secretary Burton stated today that he expects to have one of the best fields at this track in the feature race Saturday. Among the scheduled starters are Blablah, He Rolls and the old Charles Town favorite, Royal Business. The horsemen were loud in their praise for Al J. Boyle for his release yesterday that the minimum purses from Saturday until the end of the meeting would be $500. Mr. Rigan McKinney, at one time considered by the experts to be the best jumping rider in the country, has been a daily visitor. Erada, twice a trailer here, has been shipppped back to the farm by Trainer Bosley. Miss Ksar was cut down so badly in Wednesday's race that she will be out of the

Blumenauer Made Head Of Loan Institute

The annual electon of officers and directors, Washington Chapter, American Savings and Loan Institute, held last night resulted in the elevation of T. William Blumenauer, jr., to the presidency.

Coglin, Northwestern Federal, first vice president; Arnold Fort, Home Building, second vice president; Mildred Baron, Perpetual Building, secretary, and William E. Poulton, Columbia Federal, treasurer.

According to retiring President Kline, plans are under way for a joint graduation exercise with the chapter sponsored by the Federal Home Loan Bank. The date has been set for June 19. The past semester has been marked by large classes and it is expected that the largest class ever turned out by the chapter will participate in the June graduations.

Becknell, divisional merchandise manager of Pfeifer Brothers, Little Rock, will be the first speaker on the program. A discussion on "Selling Under the Wool Labeling Law," will follow.

Post-War Britain to Aim at Economic, Social Equality, Sir Gerald Tells 1,200 Steel Titans

Offers Three-Fold Prescription for World Comity

By Frank MacMillen
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, May 22 (AP).—Economic as well as social equality will be the inevitable aim of post-war Britain, Sir Gerald Campbell, British Minister to Washington, said today in sketching for leaders of the American steel industry one of the clearest outlines yet offered of his embattled country's war and peace goals.

Talking to 1,200 top executives of the steel business at the fiftieth general meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute, Sir Gerald gave this three-fold prescription for a post-war "New World comity of nations:"

1. A system of security which will ensure international stability.

2. A system of economic collaboration which will render impossible economic conflict between the democracies and will avoid the creation of autarchic totalitarian states.

3. A system of ordered change in the relationship between states, which will restore confidence in the word of nations.

The British emissary spoke in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria from a dais on which was seated executives from virtually every important steel company in the Nation.

At the end of the final course, the hundreds of diners rose and sang "God Save the King" and "the Star-Spangled Banner."

Then the tall, gray-haired British emissary spoke

No Blueprint Offered

Of the post-war order, Sir Gerald said:

"Frankly we can offer no blueprint. We can make no promises of an immediate reign of sweetness and light. Our task is harder than the enemy's since it is based on consent and not on dictation. When the hands of the enemy have been removed from our throats we can begin to think more clearly but today our first aim is to survive.

"Yet even in this moment of stress we are looking forward. We are thinking today in terms of freedom rather than of frontiers, of the restoration of the dignity of man rather than of political agreements. We are seeking a way to ensure the liberty of the individual against any future attempts at enslavement. These are the basic principles on which any peace settlement must be founded.

Mood of Self-Criticism

"There is a mood of self-examination and self-criticism abroad in Britain today which has no parallel in modern times.

"By this I do not mean that in our zeal for social reform we shall adopt the doctrines of Karl Marx nor will Britain go 'Socialist' in the old-fashioned European sense of the term, which connotes barricades and red flags, yet economic and social equality will inevitably be the aim of post-war Britain.

"For example, the principle is already being accepted in practice that a citizen of the British democracy is entitled to certain fundamental rights in the economic as well as the political sphere, to a standard of nutrition as well as of freedom, to good housing as well as the habeas corpus, to the right to work as well as the right to vote.

"Lord Lothian in his last public utterance told the people of this country: 'If you back us you will not be backing a quitter.' To that I would now add: 'If you back us you will be backing a people whose faces are turned toward the light.'"

U. S. Declared Able To Outdo Any Nazi Industrial Feat

Can Top Axis Powers

In the morning session of the meeting two leaders of the steel industry told their confreres that the American steel business was capable of topping the maximum efforts of the Axis powers in production of armaments and urged caution in the creation of additional steel capacity.

Irving S. Olds, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, said:

"To my mind it is unbelievable that the United States, given a well-prepared program, the necessary time and the proper support by our people, cannot outdoo anything of which Germany is capable in the way of production of the essential instruments of modern warfare."

But, said the head of the country's biggest steel producer, if the steel business is to perform its functions adequately during the emergency "it must know what is expected from the industry as soon as the program is formulated, or modified from time to time, by those in authority in Washington.

Steel Survey Urged

Urging a careful study of basic steel capacity before building additional facilities, Olds said:

"If the creation of additional capacity is justified only by the exigencies of the present emergency, it seems clear that everything of a reasonable character should be done to prevent excess capacity from becoming a serious problem at the conclusion of the emergency."

Bank Excess Reserves Up $170,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday lendable excess reserves of banks jumped $170,000,000 to a total of 5,860,000,000 in the week ended May 21. The increase was due mostly to Treasury spending.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended May 21 member bank reserve balances increased $274,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from decreases of $285,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal reserve banks and $3,000,000 in Treasury cash and an increase of $27,000,000 in gold stock, offset in part by a decrease of $2,000,000 in reserve bank credit and increases of $31,000,000 in money in circulation and $10,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on May 21 were estimated to be $5,860,000,000, an increase of $170,000,000 for the week."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended May 21, 1941, were as follows:

Export Lines' Net Doubles in Year

New York, May 22 (AP).—American Export Lines' earnings in the quarter ended March 31, 1941, were in excess of $2,500,000, compared with $1,200,037 for the like period last year, W. H. Coverdale, president, said at the annual meeting.

He held out prospects for increased dividends later in the year, saying that the company could pay out in dividends in any year 10 per cent of its net worth at the start of the year. On January 1, 1941, the net worth of American Export Lines was in excess of $9,000,000.

Coverdale outlined the company's success in finding alternate routes after the start of the war, with the operation of the New York-Lisbon and the India run. Negotiations are in process with the Maritime Commission for construction of six new vessels costing approximately $15,000,000.

Pivotal Issues Dip Fractions to a Point On Crete War News; U. S. Bonds Buoyant

New York, May 22.—Wall Street today read bearish implications in the war news and leading stocks lost fractions to more than a point.

Cashing in on the two-day rally stemmed the tide at the start. Dealings were slow until after mid-day when word from London that British fighting planes were being withdrawn from Crete touched off a brief but relatively fast flurry of liquidation. The pace then slackened again and closing quotations were above bottom in some cases. Scattered favorites managed to breast the trend with modest advances.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .4 of a point at 39.8. Transfers of 401,530 shares compared with 544,200 Wednesday. Sentiment apparently was affected also by a drop in commodities.

Most rails held declines to small amounts as today's figures on last week's freight loadings disclosed a more than seasonal upturn to a new top since November, 1930. The buoyant oils of the past week or so receded as talk was heard of price "ceilings" being instituted in this industry. A batch of cheerful dividends aided individual stocks.

Prominent on the losing side were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible Steel, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, American Smelting, Westinghouse, Johns-Manville, Phillips Petroleum, Texas Corp. Standard Oil (N. J.) and Climax Molybdenum.

North American, Celanese and American tobacco "B" slipped to new 1941 lows.

Pullman got up to a new year's top with the gain of a point at 27⅞.

The company after yesterday's close offered to purchase up to 517,241 of its common shares from holders at $29 a share.

Savage Arms conceded a point as share owners voted approval of the proposed 4-for-1 split-up in the stock. Western Union and Postal Telegraph preferred were off ¾ each despite pleas of both companies' president to a Congressional committee that the telegraph units be permitted to consolidate.

Retaining advances were Allied Chemical, International Paper common and preferred and American woolen preferred.

Curb losers included American Gas, Gulf Oil, Humble Oil, Quaker Oats and Singer Mfg. Ahead were Calamba Sugar and Pioneer Gold. The turnover here was around 71,000 shares versus 78,000 yesterday.

Treasury plans for refunding a Federal bond issue maturing in August were greeted on Wall Street today with a rush to buy Federal issues.

Gains of around 5-32 to 6-32 point were registered at the close of over-the-counter trading on most Governments in one of the busiest sessions of the year.

Touching off the action was trading in rights for the maturing 3¼s which will be refunded with new 2½s. These rights ended the day at about 102 17-32.

Stock market dealings in the Federals showed gains of as much as 24-32 point, which brought them in line with over-the-counter prices.

In corporates, minus signs were in the majority with the rails worst hit, these following the late turn in stocks.

Off around a point or so were Southern Railway 4s at 62⅛, Southern Pacific 4½s of '69 at 52½, Alleghany stamped 5s of '50 at 50½, Missouri-Kansas-Taxas 5s of '62 at 30 and Nickel Plate 4½s at 62¼.

Rail Loadings Set New High For 11 Years

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 861,277 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was an increase of 24,128 cars, or 2.9 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 182,212 cars, or 26.8 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 248,389 cars, or 40.5 per cent, compared with 1939.

Loadings were the highest since the week ended Nov. 8, 1930 when they totaled 881,517 cars.

All classes of loadings except ore and less-than-carlot merchandise shared in the gerater than seasonal increase of shipments. Miscellaneous freight, coal and grain showed the biggest gains.

The rise carried the Associated Press seasonally adjusted index of carloadings to the highest level since September, 1930.

The index, based on 1929-30 as 100, advanced to 91.3 compared with 89.1 the previous week, and 72.0 a year ago.

Tighter Price Controls Drop Commodities

By the Associated Press

Hasty and heavy speculative liquidation opened some wide fissures in the commodity price futures structure yesterday.

The selling was touched off simultaneously in several important markets by events which it was feared might have bearish repercussions for some little time, and thus possibly arrest at least temporarily the bullish surge in prices.

A major development tending to inspire unloading of accounts was the sharp hiking of margins on pepper futures traded in the New York Produce Exchange. This followed a Washington conference of Federal authorities and commodity exchange representatives. Pepper broke about a cent a pound.

Chicago wheat dropped nearly the full limit of 5 cents a bushel, but later rallied to close 2¼ to 3⅝ cents lower. Corn gave up ½ to 1⅛ cents. Pressure here was explained in part by Agricultural Secretary Wickard's proposal for a cut on 7,000,000 acres in wheat acreage. The trade had expected a more drastic restriction on acreage.

Also having a bearing on the general slump, according to gossip in commodity circles, was a widespread fear that Price Administrator Leon Henderson might widen the scope of ceiling prices.

New York markets suffered wide losses. Santos coffee closed down .10 to .15 of a cent a pound; cottonseed oil, down .20 to .30 of a cent; cocoa, down .33 to .37 of a cent; rubber, down .66 to .82 of a cent; hides, down .37 to .46 of a cent; cotton, down 25 to 35 cents a bale.

Also down for the first time in about a week was the Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot commodities. It closed at 84.888 per cent of the 1926 average against 85.23 per cent Wednesday.

Consumer Credit Creed Drafted by Bankers' Group

New York, May 22 (AP). — The American Bankers Association announced today a "Consumer Credit Creed" which it recommended all bands adopt in extending time sales financing to the public.

The creed states that the giving of credit to "salaried or wage-earning individuals on a sound basis is an economically important part" of banking service.

The association also listed recommended terms of instalment loans including: Automobiles, airplanes, boats and other forms of transportation, one-third down on new purchases and 12 to 18 months on the balance; household appliances, 15 to 20 per cent down and 12 to 24 months on the balance; household furniture, 20 per cent down and 12 to 24 months on the balance.

Cargo Risk Rates Are Withdrawn

New York, May 22 (AP).—American marine insurance underwriters today withdrew all quoted rates on war risk insurance of shipments to and from French possessions in the Western Hemisphere.

This does not mean, an insurance man pointed out, that shippers cannot get war risk protection on such cargoes. It indicates, however, a higher than average premium rate which can be obtained only on direct application to an underwriter.

The underwriters also raised by 1 per cent the war risk rates on shipments to and from the Persian Gulf by way of the Cape of Good Hope, making them 2½ per cent of the cargo value in United States flag vessels and 4½ per cent in the ships of other nations.

Engineering Awards Off 45% in Week

New York, May 22 (AP).—Engineering construction awards slumped this week to $52,346,000, a decline of 45 per cent from the previous week, Engineering News Record reported today. The total, however, was 19 per cent greater than the same week last year.

A lull in federal and private construction was responsible for the decline, which brought awards to the lowest level of any week this year.

Brokers' Loans Rise $14,000,000 in Week

Goodyear Acts To Conserve Rubber Supply

New York, May 22 (AP).—P. W. Litchfield, chairman of the board of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., requested the company's dealers throughout the Nation today to conserve available rubber for essential purposes.

Specifically, he suggested that the "American public can do without" white sidewall tires and that motorists should be educated to drive more slowly to save tire wear.

"We have in this country today," said Litchfield, "what amounts to a normal six months' supply of rubber. Half of this is in the hands of manufacturers and dealers while the other half is Government-owned and subject to use only as national emergency needs may dictate.

"Our major source of supply lies half way around the globe, where plantations of the British and Dutch East Indies produce approximately 95 per cent of all the rubber required by the whole world.

No Current Shortage

"Currently these estates are producing rubber in sufficient quantity to meet all possible needs. And, as this is written, rubber is being received in America in greater quantity than our rate of consumption.

"Production of crude rubber is not now and is not likely to be a problem; the problem which we will be called upon to face in the very near future is that of getting the rubber from the East Indies to America . . ."

"If a white sidewall tire requires an additional two pounds of rubber as compared with a standard black tire, and it actually does, then the white sidewall may be spotted as one of the things the American public can do without.

Substitutes Possible

"If a net saving in rubber can be accomplished through the process of recapping used tires, and it can, then the process of recapping may be forced into much wider use.

"If American motorists can gain substantial additional mileage from their tires by reducing the speed at which they travel, and they can, then the public may have to be educated to travel at a slower rate.

"If the function of any one of a thousand gadgets can be performed with reasonable satisfaction by a substitute, then the public may be required to use the substitute.

"These are just a few simple examples. But they convey the idea of what may come . . ."

Wise said the factory would be built with Government funds and operated by the newly-organized American Propeller Corporation, a subidiary of Aviation Corporation. He said the plant would have a capacity production of 2,500 steel propellers monthly, employing 2,500 workers.

Wise, president of the subsidiary, said the corporation's experimental unit at the Williamsport, Pa., Lycoming Division would be transferred here and occupy a new $1,500,000 structure.

Auto Sales In April Leap To 557,192

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 22.—Retail car and truck sales in the United States during April totaled 557,192 units, the Automobile Manufacturers Association reported today. The total included 483,273 passenger cars and 73,919 commercial vehicles.

Retail sales in April 1940 totaled 411,277 units.

The figures for last month bring to 1,874,817 vehicles the total retail sales of passenger cars and trucks for the first four months of the 1941 calendar year. This aggregate included 1,581,889 passenger units and 292,928 commercial vehicles.

The virtually unprecedented demand for motor vehicles is shown in a breakdown of the retail sales for each of the four months since January 1. January sales numbered 371,718; February, 420,109; March, 525,798, and April, 557,192.

Factory output during the same four months totaled slightly under 2,000,000 units.

Passenger car and truck production this week, according to Automotive News, will aggregate 132,219 units, compared with last wek's estimated 124,933. Production in the comparable period a year ago was 98,115 vehicles.

If the present pace continues through the final week of May, the publication says, the total for the month will approximate 545,000 units.

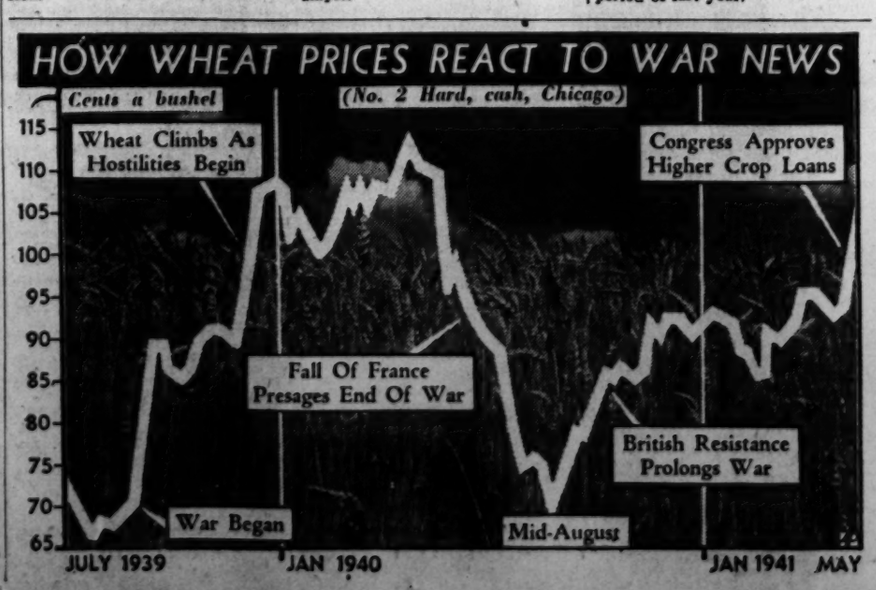
The survey credits General Motors divisions with 54,845 units this week against last week's 50,292; Chrysler divisions with 29,330 compared with 26,012 in the preceding week and Ford output is placed at 30,700 vehicles contrasting with 31,192 last week.

Laundries' Volume Put at Half Billion

Old Point Comfort, Va., May 22 (AP).—Management must set the example in enthusiasm and confidence if its salesmen are to be successful, Mrs. May L. Grady, sales promotion manager of the American Institute of Laundering, told a regional laundryowners convention at the Chamberlain Hotel today.

The sales volume of the laundry industry is now $500,000,000 a year, she said.

"Work, hard work, is the big answer to our selling problems," she told members of the industry from Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia. "But, the management has the control and the management must set the example."



Tool Shipments Hit $60,300,000 in April

Cleveland, May 22 (AP).—Machine tool shipments for April totaled $60,300,000, the National Machine Tool Builders Association estimated today.

This compared with shipments of $57,400,000 for March and $54,000,000 in February. Shipments to date this year have exceeded $220,000,000, the association reported, doubling volume for the same period last year.

Sugar Deliveries Accelerate in Period

New York, May 22 (AP).—It was reported yesterday that refined sugar delivered to American markets by refiners, beet processors and importers totaled 2,734,032 short tons, raw value, during the first four months of this year.

Deliveries by the same sources in the corresponding period of last year totaled 1,812,488 tons.

Central High Meets Tech Nine Today

SCHOOLBOY SCHEDULE
Central at Western.
Blair at Landon.
Bethesda at Georgetown Prep.
G. W. High at Washington-Lee.
Eastern M. A. at Rockville.

A chance to tangle with Eastern High in the three-game interhigh championship series starting next Thursday will be the aim of Central and Western nines today when they meet on the latter's diamond at 3:30.

Though an Anacostia-Roosevelt clash is scheduled for Tuesday, today's game will end the regular public school schedule as far as the title series is concerned. Central, defending champion, and its foe today are the only clubs retaining a chance of getting in the playoff with the leading Eastern team, being tied for second in the standings with three games won and two lost. Eastern has lost only one out of six.

For Western the game means the possibility of snaring its first uncontested interhigh baseball title since 1922. Ten years after that victory the Raiders figured in a three-way tie for first with Eastern and Central, but otherwise baseball has been their "off" sport.

Central has won the crown the last two years running, also in 1936, 1924, 1923 and 1921. By the admission of its own coach, however, the Vikings are in the running for a title berth only because of a few lucky breaks. Coach Jack Ray calls Western the strongest club in the series, though that doesn't mean he doesn't hope to beat it today.

Bombers Want Foes

The Brown Bombers are seeking a game with a team having a diamond for Sunday, either here or out of town. Phone North 5224, or write Barney Gordon at 1901 Seventh Street Northwest.

Gaithersburg Plays

Gaithersburg A. C. will meet Poolesville A. C. Sunday at 2:30 p. m. at Gaithersburg.

to the time Dempsey was ducking Harry Greb and Harry Wills, and Tunney was ducking Jack Sharkey.

Properly handled, Champion Buddy might last a long time. But now and then he would have to duck the issue. If he can win the title by some freakish twist of fortune, he'll leave the ring at Griffith Stadium a much better fighter than he enters it. For he'll have confidence under his hide, when he leaves. That is what he mostly needs to get the best out of that magnificent frame with which providence saw fit to endow him. But he'll still be no great shakes as champ and he'll need a manager much more than Louis does—though Louis has three or four of them. Buddy would need a manager to find for him "the spots," which is another way of saying bums who couldn't hurt him.

He'd make a lot of money. He could tour through the country, billed as the man who bombed the Bomber. He's a nice, naive sort of fellow, this Baer, but he has much more savoir faire than Louis. For instance, he once stood up in Jack Dempsey's pub one night and sang for a good hour in his rich barytone voice. Louis would rather take a .45 through the gullet than go through that ordeal. Buddy has a streak of ham in him; though, of course, he hasn't got the Swift-Armour quotient that Max has. Ham helps.

Movies, Radio Would Enrich Him

Buddy could make money out of the movies and radio, two spheres all but closed to Joe. He could even make a lot of money if his contract with Mike Jacobs made him fight Louis right back again, and Louis knocked him as cold as Joe is favored to knock Buddy tonight. For a return match between Louis and Baer would bring back the million dollar gate, and Buddy would get the champion's share of from 37 per cent to 40 per cent. It would bring it back because it would have behind it the tremendous background of the first Baer-Louis fight—this one in Washington. You see, if Buddy should win tonight he will win most spectacularly. He could never win a listless decision. He doesn't fight that way. If he wins you can bet that he'll win by a knockout. But I suppose that you can get any odds you want on such a bet today—particularly up around U Street, where Joe's name is on every fervent lip.

chances to last long with the Brown Bomber.

Joe's pre-battle statement yesterday indicated that he is not mad at anyone. In fact, if Joe is in the same jovial mood tonight you might see young Buddy sticking around for a good many of the 15 rounds.

"Don't pay to hurry too much in this kind of weather," Joe yawned, commenting on such things as the bad pitching luck of Detroit's Buck Newsom and expressing the hope that it'll get better soon.

The thermometer registered 94 yesterday, and the Weather Bureau's bulletin stated that it'll be about the same today. Cloudy weather is in prospect, and if there's rain tonight the bout will be set back until tomorrow night. If the rain persists, the fight will go on Monday night.

While the heat put Joe in a "love thy neighbor" frame of mind, it was a different story with Baer. The likable young man with the streaks of gray in his hair showed no trepidation at all—just a calm assurance that he is going to be the man to jolt Joe's hit parade right out of existence.

"I'm not going to back up a step tomorrow night," Buddy said. "Everybody says that Max was scared to death the night before he faced Louis. Well, look at me. I don't have a thing to worry about. I'm just going out there to hit him. If he gets careless it's going to be too bad."

Jacobs Expects $125,000

This sort of talk may sound like the prattle of one who is trying to convince himself, but Buddy actually is reluctant to make any claims to fame yet. Whereas Max, who lasted just four rounds, boasted proudly that he would knock Louis all over the ring, Buddy's watchword is "just wait."

Promoter Mike Jacobs, whose New York fight mob is in town in full regalia, expects a gate of $125,000 tonight for the show, and yesterday he was in such a happy frame of mind that he burned up the wires all afternoon to Sacramento, Calif., trying to get Buddy's big brother to attend the fight.

Max said he would come if he could get a plane reservation. Buddy's Uncle Max, who hails from Denver, is on hand, however.

The referee will be Arthur Donovan, the famed official who has worked the majority of Louis fights and who thinks Mr. J. Shufflin' L. is the greatest fighter who has ever lived.

The main bout will start promptly at 9:30 p. m. and will be broadcast over a Nation-wide hookup. The first preliminary fight will go on at 8:15 p. m.

Jimmy Leto, fresh from a one-round knockout of the Cocoa Kid, fights Holman Williams, Louis' welterweight protege, in the six-round semifinal.

Three other sixes bring together Wicky Harkins, of Philadelphia, and Kay Kaplan, of Los Angeles; Ernest (Cat) Robinson, of Jamaica, N. Y., and Manuel Villa, of Mexico; Frankie Wills, of Washington, and El Brookman, also of Washington. The four-round opener brings out two more local boys, Al Franklin and Roy Dunn—probably put on the card to still the violent protests from local managers that Jacobs is discriminating against Capital fighters.

Louis and Baer will meet today at 12 noon when they report to the visitors' dressing room at Griffith Stadium. The preliminary fighters will weigh in at 2 p. m. at the District Boxing Commission offices.

a year, are differing on their estimates of the crowd to be expected. Alvis, flushed with his partnership, says that there'll be 35,000 people and $175,000 in the tills. Michael, calmly taking charge of the ticket situation, although there's no precedent in this city for such an affair, admits he will chuckle if there are 30,000 and $120,000.

There also are guesses on how long the affair will last. Buddy and his relatives, of course, think that Bud can win. But his admirers will be tickled to death if he lasts into the tenth. Louis himself has refused to pick the exact second, but says "it'll be mighty quick." Jack Blackburn says "it'll be just as quick as Chappie can tag him." Julian Black, one of the managers of the boss man, utters: "Soon as possible." And John Roxborough, the other brain, says: "Inside of three, I guess." And Jacobs danced with glee when someone mentioned an upset. "That's the idea! Think of that dough in September. We need one of those. Boy!" And Louis has a golf date for early Saturday morning, and intends to ship to Greenwood Lake Sunday to prepare for Billy Conn without any delay.

Of course, Buddy has a chance and intends to prove it when he lumbers out tomorrow night before the largest Negro audience ever.

Buddy has been knocked down once and stopped once. Al Delaney had him on the floor one night in Buffalo, but Jacob arose and flattened Alfred for good in four heats. Gunnar Barlund stopped Jacob on cuts back in 1937, but other than those affairs, Jacob has demonstrated a certain sturdiness of pins. He's got 43 knockouts to his credit, 1 less than the boss man.

One thing about the fight so far is that it has broken all rules of the august boxing commission of the District of Columbia. There was a rule on the books for years describing the exact type and manufacture of glove to be worn in gladiatorial combat. But Mike's New York mittens will be worn. There was a rule that no out-of-town referee would work, unless licensed by this local bunch of longheads. But Arthur Donovan will work tomorrow night. Maj. Ernest Brown, the superintendent of police, one of the three boxing commissioners, looks more like Maj. Gen. John James Phelan than Maj. Gen. John James Phelan. So . . .

Indians Win Over Nats

from the box, Heving and Eisenstat pitched hitless ball until the happy conclusion of the contest for the Indians.

Hudson's ninth-inning collapse was unforeseen. The young right-hander had been doing a superb job of it and nine strikeouts were testimony of his fast ball. He appeared back in the winning groove when things began to happen to him in the ninth.

Back in the fifth inning, after being held to two hits by Hudson, the Indians came up with two runs to take the lead. Pitcher Smith himself started the uprising with a single to left, and the pesky Boudreau banged out an important double to center. Weatherly caused no damage with his infield out, and Hudson slipped a third strike past Walker for the second out, but he walked Trosky to fill the bases and Heath delivered the payoff wallop—single to center that got the two runs home.

Hudson escaped trouble in the sixth despite the fact that a walk and a pair of errors put men on second and third with none out, and in their half of the inning the Nats presented him with a 3-2 lead.

It was Hudson's single to left that launched the three-run proceedings. Case followed with a single to center, and after Lewis flied out, Cramer filled the bases with a single to short center. In this crisis, Travis tripled over Weatherly's head and the three runs clattered home. With only one out, and Heving now pitching for Cleveland, Travis was abandoned on third base however by Archie and Bloodworth who grounded out. In fact, maybe that's when the Nats lost the ball game.

hour late and was further delayed by the sudden thundershower which lasted for almost 60 minutes and drove half the spectators to cover. Curiously enough, most of the good golf was scored after the 15 contenders passed the nine-hole mark. Two 18-hole rounds—each against a different set of opponents—will be played tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday until each of the players has met all the others.

The scores for today, both on the medal and the point standards: Little, 35-33—68 (plus 10); Smith, 34-35—69 (plus four); Hines, 36-37—73 (plus four); Penna, 37-35—69 (plus three); Hogan, 38-33—71 (plus three); Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. Salvation Army Honors Athletes

Letters were presented to 15 basketball players and 20 boxers at a banquet for young athletes at the Georgetown Branch, Salvation Army, last night, at 1075 Thomas Jefferson Street Northwest.

Maj. Charles Dodd, of the Salvation Army, who presided, made the basketball awards. The letters were in the form of shields signifying membership in the Red Shield Club of the Salvation Army. Maj. Dodd also presented a cup to the girls' basketball team which won District honors in the Salvation Army League. Capt. Ben Jones made the letter awards to the boxing team, which won novice honors in the District this season.

Garvin's Upsets Kavakos Grill

Garvin's Grill softball ten provided the major upset of the season last night at Washington Softball Stadium when Phil Fox hurled six-hit, one-run ball to hand Kavakos Grill its first Capital City League defeat of the year, 5-1, and knock the Northeast ten out of first place.

In the National Night League, Pepco spotted Evening Star ten six runs in the first inning and then came on to chip away at Dan Toomey's and Lou Sonnenheimer's offerings to tie it up in the fifth and score four in the sixth to triumph, 10-7.

Bobby Brown, author of the Columbia network's Sunday comedy serial on training camp life, insists he created "Homer Stubbs," big, good-natured but clumsy character of "Dear Mom," with no thought of John Walsh, talented Chicago radio actor. But Walsh is such a natural in the part of "Homer"—all 220 pounds and 6 feet 4 inches of him—that Bobby is seeing accused of getting his inspiration from his friend of the CBS studios.

Walsh made his professional debut as a singer during the season of 1919. He began, believe it or not, at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City at the age of 11, but opera was not destined to be his career. The toughest period of his youth, according to Walsh, was sneaking away from singing lessons in order to hold down his place on the undefeated baseball team of his school.

John was born on New York's Long Island—Elmhurst—and spent most of his youth learning to sing, play the piano and violin—and baseball. At the age of 18, he started his career in earnest as a singer and actor, and for ten years appeared in many of the hit musicals on Broadway, among them "Good News" and "Let 'Em Eat Cake."

He made his radio debut in Chicago in 1936. Since, he has been heard on many CBS shows.

Contract Bridge

Here's a hand that was played for a grand slam:

	♠ A 8 4 ♡ 9 8 7 3 2 ◇ A 4 ♣ A 6 2
♠ 10 9 5 ♡ 6 5 ◇ K 5 3 2 ♣ 8 5 4 3	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ K Q J 7 ♡ 6 2 ♡ 4 ◇ 10 6 ♣ K Q J 9
	♠ 3 ♡ A K Q J 10 ◇ Q J 9 8 7 ♣ 10 7

North dealt and bid one heart. East overcalled with one spade, and South jumped to three hearts. North felt a bit reckless and went to a game in hearts. The other three players were astounded when South said seven hearts; east doubling.

"I wish you could have seen North's face when his partner bid the grand slam," East remarked.

We'll bet North looked happier, though, when dummy's 150 honors were exposed. He made 13 tricks by establishing two discards for his two clubs and ruffing South's club loser.

Park Board Approves Sites For Defense

Four sites for temporary office buildings for defense workers were approved yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

They are Twenty-sixth and Constitution Avenue on the north side, east of the William Jennings Bryan statue; New York Avenue and C Street Northwest, back of the new War Department Building; the Army War College; Fourth and Independence Avenue Southwest, where ground is already being broken.

This approval does not necessarily mean that all the sites will be used, T. S. Settle, secretary of the commission, pointed out.

The commission received from the Chief of Engineers, U. S. Army, a report which it had requested on water supply problems connected with population increase and defense building in and near the District. The report indicated that in Washington proper, the capacity of present facilities has been reached but pointed out that provisions are now under way to extend the water supply to take care of an additional 200,000 population by 1942, above the July, 1940, figure.

Problems Posed

If additional Federal buildings should be constructed in Arlington County, outlying portions of the District or adjacent Maryland, the problem will be primarily one of additional distribution facilities and water reservoir, depending on the location of the buildings, rather than a problem of supply, it was pointed out.

Discussion at the meeting showed agreement on the desirability of working out a navigation project for the Anacostia River. The commission is interested in extension of dredging up to near Bladensburg, with a channel adequate for pleasure boats. The commission, along with the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, is further studying the reclamation of park area along the river and the construction of the parkway road, a link in the road to Baltimore. The matter was referred at yesterday's commission meeting to its staff and to the United States Engineers for further study.

The commission approved preliminary plans for the Medical Museum and Library site in the East Capitol area. Agreement was reached yesterday on adaptation of the architect's conception to fit into the comprehensive development of that area.

Delano Reappointed

President Roosevelt's reappointment of William A. Delano, of New York, to another six-year term on the Commission was announced yesterday. His second six-year term expired April 30.

Max S. Wehrly, associate landscape architect of the Commission, was appointed city planner yesterday by the Commission to fill a post which has been vacant except for temporary appointments since 1933. Wehrly, who has been on the Commission staff for four years, received the job as a result of competitive civil service examination. His appointment will make possible more studies of city planning and will provide the Commission with a better balanced staff, John Nolen, jr., director of planning, said.

The commission announced acquisition of a half-acre of land at Porter Street and Klingle Road Northwest near the entrance to Rock Creek Park. This acquisition would help "protect" the entrance from encroaching building, it was pointed out. Other acquisitions of land were announced, in connection withthe Harrison School playground, V and Thirteenth Streets Northwest, and in the Southeast on the Oxon Run Parkway project and in Battery Ricketts, an old Civil War fort.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District director of highways, will present his preliminary highway survey report for the commission's consideration at its meeting today.

Selection Approved

Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody yesterday approved selection of two additional sites for temporary office buildings, one at Twenty-sixth Street and Constitution Avenue and the other back of the new War Department Building. These two sites were among four approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission also yesterday. The land is owned by the Federal Government.

Five temporary office buildings will be constructed on these two sites. With the addition of another temporary building now under construction on the Mall at Fourth Street and Independence Avenue Southwest, the six buildings will house approximately 4,000 Government workers, it was stated.

D. C. Pretrial Method Lauded At Law Parley

The District Court's pioneer development of the modern pretrial hearing method—which makes lawsuits swift and simple—was praised at the circuit judicial conference by spokesmen of the Department of Justice and the administrative office of the United States Courts.

Special Assistant Attorney General Alexander Holtzoff quoted at length from Justice Bolitha J. Laws, the District Court's first pretrial expert, who has been from time to time invited to help other jurisdictions install systems like that he organized here.

Holtzoff's asssertion that Justice Laws "made an outstanding contribution to the cause of the administration of justice," touched off a spontaneous ovation for Laws from the justices and lawyers who attended the conference in the hearing room of the United States Court of Appeals here.

Will Shafroth, statistical chief of the administrative office, called the District Court's master calendar system "admirable" and said its "efficient pretrial work" averted some of the difficulties met by Federal judges elsewhere.

Attorney General Robert H. Jackson opened the conference with an address in which he called on bench and bar to give American law "such a virility and vigor that it will have the confidence of the people.

The law must be efficient, said Jackson, or the people will resort to vigilante methods, but we must nevertheless "preserve our devotion to civil liberties, which is the distinguishing thing in our culture, the thing for which ultimately we fight.

The Attorney General said legislation is needed to authorize imprisonment or probation of all deportable aliens, of whom he estimated there are 6,000 or more at large. Something must be done, he said, because the deportation machinery has broken down because of the war.

Speakers at the conference today will be Justices Laws, James M. Proctor and Oscar R. Luhring and Attorneys Dean Acheson, Sefton Darr, Edmund D. Campbell, Carl McFarland, Charles H. Houston, Paul F. Hannah and Edward M. Curran, district attorney.

Marion Talley Rails Angrily At Husband

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, May 22.—Marion Talley pounded clenched fists on the witness stand railing today as she told at trial of her divorce suit that she once thought her husband "would stoop to anything to make my child sick to keep her from me."

In addition to a divorce from her former voice teacher, Adolf Eckstrom, the opera singer is suing for permanent custody of their 6-year-old daughter, Susan.

Testifying to efforts to persuade Eckstrom to send the child to her in California after she learned that Susan had a crossed eye and had developed pneumonia, Miss Talley said that later she learned Susan was ill again in New York.

Her voice rose and her eyes flashed at Eckstrom, intently taking notes at his counsel table.

"Why, you silly little thing."

Earlier Miss Talley's attorney, Isaac Pacht, interrupted his client's testimony to tell the court that Eckstrom used a "cat and mouse stategy of cruel conduct" in combatting the singer's efforts to gain custody of the child, born shortly after the couple's marriage in 1935.

Eckstrom also has sued for divorce and custody of Susan, contending Miss Talley is not a proper person.

Gleaners Class Told of Early Days in D. C.

Days when Thomas Circle was "an uncultivated, undrained wilderness, out of town and away among the fields," were pictured last night by Dr. Charles B. Foelsch, pastor of Luther Place Church, at the Circle.

Reading from a historical record at the first annual banquet of the Gleaners' Class of Young Women, he said, in part:

"Tucking up your trousers to your knees, you will wade through the bogs; you will lose yourself among the rude hillocks; you will be out of the reach of humanity.

"The place is very full during Congress and very empty during recess. By which I mean to be understood that those streets which are blessed with houses are very full when Congress meets.

"I do not think that Congress makes very much difference to Massachusetts Avenue. A stranger finds himself in the position of being sent across the country knee deep in mud, wading through snipe grounds, looking for civilization where none exists."

Dr. Foelsch reminded the diners that Luther Place is now celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the present site's purchase, and paid tribute to the late Dr. John G. Butler, the congregation's founder. The Rev. Charles Folkemer, assistant to Dr. Foelsch, was toastmaster. The retiring officers, headed by President Jo Schwarzentein, spoke briefly. Mrs. Gould Wickey, class teacher, presided.

The Gleaners' Class represents a merger a year ago of the Dorcas', Builders and Martha and Mary classes.

Musician Dies In View of Dancers At Army-Navy Club

While the orchestra played "The Things You Left Me" in the gay setting of the Army and Navy Country Club Wednesday night, Frank Amorosi, 37, the drummer in the band, suddenly pitched forward into his drums and died of a heart attack before a physician could be summoned.

Amorosi, who had been employed by the Meyer Davis orchestras for 14 years, had left the orchestra platform earlier in the evening after complaining of feeling ill. He returned, however, and played several numbers before he collapsed before the horrified dancers and musicians.

Mr. Amorosi was born in Philadelphia, but had spent most of his life here. His home was at 930 L Street Northwest. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Helena Amorosi, a 3-week-old baby, Sheila, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Amorosi. He also leaves three brothers, Vincent, John and Arthur Amorosi, and three sisters, Mrs. Constance Veze, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Helen Abbott, of Arlington, and Mrs. Mary Picillo.
